MAYOR QUITS STATE FIGHT

WAR SLOWS UP NEW YORK CITY TO 5,621,151

Surprise in Official Census Figure.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., June 5.—[Special.]—New York City proper has a population of 5,621,151, according to figure issued by the bureau of census today. This represents a gain in the last ten years of 804,268, or 17.9 per cent, the smallest percentage of increase in the history of the city except in one decade.

The population figure is for the five boroughs which compose the greater city proper, for which the most recent estimate made had been a total of [illegible].

7½ Millions in District?

It now estimated that the metropolitan district—including the cities and towns within a radius of ten miles—will show a population of 7,500,000 if the official complete count.

The detailed census figures for the five boroughs given out today were:

	Population.	Increase.	Pct.
Manhttan	2,284,103	*47,429	*2.0
Bronx	732,016	361,036	69.8
Brooklyn	2,022,262	$87,811	23.2
Richmond	115,959	29,090	34.9
Queens	166,811	182,770	64.2

*Decrease.

Ten Leading Cities to Date.

Census figures for two other large cities—Boston and Buffalo—also were announced today. Boston's population is 747,33, an increase of 77,338, or 11.5 per cent over 1910. Buffalo's population is 505,875, an increase of 82,160, or 12 per cent.

Following are the ten largest cities thus far announced by the 1920 census enumrators:

City—	Population.	City—	Population
New York	5,621,151	Buffalo	505,875
St. Louis	773,000	Milwaukee	457,147
Boston	747,923	Washington	437,571
Baltimore	733,826	Newark	415,609
Pittsburgh	588,193	Cincinnati	401,158

London Probably Leads.

The only previous decade in New York's history showing a smaller rate of growth was that ending in 1870, and the actual increase numerically betwen 1910 and 1920 was less than in either of the two preceding decades. It is this fact which has upset the calculations of those who were confident today's report would show New York had passed London.

The official census of 1911 showed a population of 4,521,685 in London.

Ascribed to War Immigration.

The small increase in the growth of the city of New York during the last decade is attributed by census officials to the almost complete stoppage during the war of the influx of immigrants, many of whom each year made New York their home, and to the heavy emigration of foreign born residents during the war and since that time.

The borough of Manhattan, which formerly was New York City proper, with a population of 2,283,103, showed a decrease for the first time in its history, the actual falling off in population being 47,439. The boroughs of the Bronx and Queens, which since 1910 have been brought closer to the city by more rapid means of transit, showed the largest gains in their history.

Brooklyn's increase in population of 387,811 was the largest numerically of any of the boroughs, but was not so large as during the decade ending in 1910, when the increase was 467,769.

Census figures for smaller cities will be found on Page 10.

Schooner and 1,100 Quarts Cognac Seized Off Florida

Tampa, Fla., June 5.—With 1,100 quarts of cognac concealed in the cabin and elsewhere, the Cuban schooner Ysabel was captured Friday off Sanibel island, 100 miles south of here, by the coast guard subchaser Vaughan, towed into Tampa today and turned over to customs officers. Two of the crew were seized on the charge of smuggling, but the captain and the other four men of the crew were ashore and escaped when the schooner was captured.

Judge Pinckney Near Death from Kidney Disease

Judge Merritt W. Pinckney of the Circuit court is fighting for his life at his home today, a victim of kidney disease. The judge was forced to leave the bench about ten days ago and has since been under the constant care of Dr. George Butt at his home, 5758 Kenwood avenue.

"Judge Pinckney has only a slight chance for recovery," Dr. Butt said Tuesday evening.

WILSON CLINGS TO WAR POWERS AS CONGRESS QUITS

Lets Repeal Die as He Signs 100 Bills.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., June 5.—[Special.]—The second session of the Sixty sixth congress adjourned sine die at 4 o'clock this afternoon. Unless summoned in special session, it will not reassemble until Dec. 6. In the interim President Wilson will remain clothed in all his war time powers, and in position to make nearly 200 recess appointments—some of them to important posts. It is regarded as unlikely that he will call a special session unless forced to do so by a grave emergency.

Only the insistent desire of congressmen to end the session today—with national conventions calling them urgently—enabled the president to continue in possession of dictatorial powers. By withholding his signature to the measure repealing all wartime laws, except the Lever act, the trading with the enemy act and the Liberty and Victory loan legislation, the president allowed the repeal resolution to die—he cannot legally sign a bill after congress has adjourned.

Mondell "Points With Pride."

The session closed without the usual last minute rush of bills, the house particularly being in a "watching the clock" frame of mind while it waited for the senate, in which some minor filibusters developed. There was the usual eulogy of the session by the majority leader and the customary denunciation of its work—or lack of work—by the minority's chief spellbinder.

Representative Mondell, Wyoming, Republican floor leader, "pointed with pride" to the work of the session, declaring that, "except as to certain bills for the protection of American industry, which passed the house but failed in the senate because of Democratic opposition," the program of legislation announced by the Republican conference at the beginning of the first session had "been carried out to the letter." He said the session had a right to be proud of the economy it had instituted and the constructive legislation it had passed.

Garrett Calls Record "Pitiful."

Representative Garrett, Democrat, Tennessee, charged the Republicans with responsibility for a long list of sins—both of commission and omission—concluding with the remark that the session had been "pitiful and gave the Republicans nothing to be proud of."

More than 100 bills of major and minor importance were signed by the president before the session closed. Among those which he permitted to die by failure to affix his signature, the water power legislation, which was passed after more than a decade of effort, was regarded as next in importance to the war law repeal resolution. A measure looking toward relief of the print paper shortage in the United States died in a similar manner.

Important Measures Signed.

Among the important measures signed by President Wilson were the naval appropriation bill, $436,000,000; the army appropriation bill, $394,929,000; the sundry civil bill, $436,000,000; the District of Columbia, $18,373,000; the diplomatic and consular appropriation, $9,218,537; the third deficiency bill, $58,000,000; the army reorganization bill; the merchant marine bill; the postoffice pay increase bill; a bill providing for the exclusion and deportation of alien anarchists; bills to pension veterans of the Spanish, Philippine, and China campaigns, and to increase pensions to certain of their dependents; the industrial vocational rehabilitation bill; a bill permitting government radio stations to handle private messages; an amendment to the trading with the enemy act restoring seized property to citizens of new born countries who, when war was declared, were enemy aliens; an act establishing a woman's bureau in the department of labor.

High Spots in Record.

In addition to the bills signed or vetoed today other important legislation passed by the present session, which began Dec. 1, 1919, included the transportation act, the woman suffrage amendment, the mineral land leasing bill, the Volstead prohibition enforcement law, the civil service retirement measure, the Sweet war risk act, and extension of the Lever law to punish profiteers.

In addition to its legislative acts the session just closed made a record for its clashes with the president and for the number of investigations it instituted. Much of its time was consumed in debate over the league of nations covenant, its amendments to which the president refused to accept. Then came an attempt to declare a "state of peace" with Germany. This passed by a narrow margin and was vetoed by Mr. Wilson.

SCALDED AS SHE POURS TEA FOR ARTS CLUB FETE

Mrs. Marcella A. Lynch, who with her husband, C. J. Lynch, lives at the South Shore Country club, was severely scalded yesterday afternoon when a hot water urn tipped over on her as she was pouring tea in the Arts club, 610 South Michigan boulevard. She was taken to St. Luke's hospital by the police. Mrs. Lynch is 50 years of age.

Mrs. Lynch had been asked to receive guests and pour tea for an hour. With her daugther, Mrs. H. I. Tiffany, 1617 Hyde Park boulevard, and Misses Maltilda and Irene Hoffman, 5016 Michigan avenue, Mrs. Lynch arrived in the club rooms and hurried to the tea tables.

The alcohol fire under the urn of water had burned away one support and as Mrs. Lynch turned the spigot, the urn toppled over on her.

Physicans at the hospital said last night that the burns were serious.

H. C. CHATFIELD TAYLOR TO WED NEW YORK WIDOW

Mrs. Estelle Stillman to Be Bride.

Hobart C. Chatfield-Taylor, well known Chicago society man and writer, whose wife, Rose Farwell Taylor, died two years ago in California, is to be married again. His engagement was announced last night in New York. The bride will be Mrs. Estelle Barbour Stillman, widow of George S. Stillman of New York and Detroit.

Mrs. Stillman's husband died in 1907. Her father was George H. Barbour, a Detroit manufacturer, and her summer home is at Grasse Point Farms, near Detroit. Mr. Stillman was a son of J. F. Stillman of New York.

Bride to Be Was Wife's Friend.

Mrs. Stillman was an old time friend of the first Mrs. Chatfield-Taylor, who was a daughter of the late Senator C. B. Farwell of Chicago. The Chatfield-Taylors were long prominent in Chicago society, but since his wife's death he has resided in Santa Barbara. Mr. Chatfield-Taylor is the author of several novels and also of a "Life of Goldoni," for which he received a decoration from the Italian government, and a biography of Moliere, which France also acknowledged in kind.

His daughter, Adelaide Chatfield-Taylor, married Hendricks W. Whitman of Boston. There were also two sons, Otis and Wayne.

Dead Wife Also a Writer.

Mrs. Chatfield-Taylor was also a writer, and contributed to magazines articles on bookbinding, golf, and sewing, on all of which subjects she was an expert. She founded the Rose bindery. In 1898 she was the western women's golf champion.

Since Mrs. Chatfield-Taylor's death her sister, Mrs. Reginald De Koven, an ardent believer in spiritism, has reported various spirit messages from her.

CORK, Ireland, June 5.—Oak Burr House at Macroom, County Cork, the property and former home of the Bowen-Colthurst family, was burned today. It was Capt. Bowen-Colthurst who had F. Sheehy Skeffington, editor of the Irish Citizen, shot during the rebellion of 1916.

JOHNSON LEADS OVER WOOD IN NORTH CAROLINA

Raleigh, N. C., June 5.—The Raleigo News and Observer announced late tonight that estimates from its correspondents showed Senator Johnson to be leading Maj. Gen. Wood in today's statewide primary for the Republican preferential indorsement. Only the most meager returns on the contest had been received.

Overman Again Victor.

Salisbury, N. C., June 5.—United States Senator Overman was nominated for another term in today's primaries, according to information the senator received here tonight. Nomination is equivalent to election. Overman's majority was reported overwhelming. His opponent was A. L. Brooks.

NINE RUSSIAN REFUGEES; ONE LOOKS LIKE CZAR

New York, June 5.—[Special.]—Nine Russian refugees were among the crew of the American steamer Governor John Lind, which arrived today from Copenhagen. All claim to be nobles, and eight declared the remaining one was a prince. He looks like the late czar. None speak English, but it was gathered that they were originally officers in the Russian navy and graduates of the Russian naval academy.

When the navy was put out of business they joined the White army. Hemmed in by the bolsheviki, they made their escape and succeeded in reaching Copenhagen.

The resemblance of the prince to the late czar started a rumor that all the refugees were Romanoffs.

BREATHING FIRE UPON LOWDEN, PLANS REVENGE

Ward Clubs Told to Mobilize.

Senator Lawrence Y. Sherman was pledged enough votes yesterday to be elected national committeeman and so announced in an early edition of THE TRIBUNE.

Two hours later Mayor Thompson announced his withdrawal from the race and opened fire upon certain presidential candidates, but it is evident that he intends to go straight after Gov. Lowden.

"It is apparent that certain interests would put the White House on the auction block," reads his statement. Then he shot a broadside in the following three sentences:

"Delegates have been refused seats on account of corrupt influences surrounding their selection. Other delegates, unopposed for election, received substantial sums of money, according to their own confessions. The ideals of true republicanism would, in my opinion, be served if the persons who improperly paid or supplied money were also deprived of the privileges of the convention and barred from being beneficiaries of any convention action."

Withdraws After He's Lost.

An interesting incident in connection with the mayor's withdrawal from the contest for reelection as national committeeman was that it came in due course after Senator Sherman had him clearly defeated. The mayor had campaigned for days seeking to win the fight. He was beaten as early as Friday night.

At the Lowden conference held yesterday morning it was shown that Senator Sherman—favored for committeeman by the governor—had 30 of the state's 58 delegate votes. No concessions were made and the result is no compromise. What presidential candidate will take the Thompson delegate votes?

It is perfectly plain that the mayor in his statement intended that Gov. Lowden should be understood as the man he had uppermost in his mind in his attack, because the governor is the only one of the principal candidates who contributed his own cash.

Statement by Mayor.

The mayor's statement follows:

"On April 13, 1920, 145,000 Republican voters of Chicago an overwhelming majority of those voting, expressed by their ballots their demand that the United States get out of Europe and stay out; their opposition to the United States joining the league of nations, with or without reservations; their opposition to compulsory military service, the instrument of tyranny and despotism, and conscription for foreign military service unless the question shall have been submitted to and approved by a vote of the people; that our American soldiers now in Europe and Asia be brought home forthwith; for the preservation of the people's constitutional rights of free speech, free press, and peaceable assembly, and that all laws interfering with these human rights be promptly repealed; for conscription of American excess war profits to assist in paying the national debt; for exemption of American citizens from federal taxation on incomes of less than $5,000 per annum; for liberal bonuses to our soldiers, sailors, and marines who served in the late war; for the reduction of representation in congress and in the electoral college of those states where the right of suffrage is denied to any person eligible to vote under the constitution of the United States; and for the imprisonment of profiteers.

Says He Led Forces.

"It was my honored privilege to lead the contest which resulted in the victory of April 13. The cause of that victory was the principles upon which the contest was waged. For those principles, which I believe to be right, which I believe to be American, and which I believe to be for the good of my fellow citizens, I have fought and will continue to fight, regardless of what effect such a fight may have upon my political future.

"Although a majority of the Illinois delegates to the national convention have promised to vote for my reelection as national committeeman, recent developments have convinced me that the acceptance of reelection as national committeeman might compel me to sacrifice the principles for which the people of Chicago voted. I, therefore, decline reelection in order to be free to continue the fight for the prin-

Gov. Lowden proposes a "one term for president" plank.

Platform makers admit that they are unable to reach an agreement on the league of nations plank. Otherwise smooth sailing, says Chairman Hays.

Hoover managers plan to dispense with nominating speech.

Friends of Gov. Coolidge of Massachusetts plan to corner New England delegates for him.

Senator Moses' steam roller charges repudiated by Wood managers.

DELEGATES TO GET AUTO RIDES AND FREE CIGARS

An elaborate program is being worked out by the mayor's committee for the entertainment of visiting delegates to the convention during their stay in Chicago. Headquarters have been established in the Congress hotel, and a secretary has been appointed to look after the needs of each state delegation. A thousand dollars' worth of cigars have been purchased for distribution.

Two thousand automobiles have been placed at the disposal of Mayor Thompson by the Chicago Boosters' club for the use of the delegates at any time. They are to be parked in Grant park and will be assigned from the Khaki and Blue club. An entertainment program is being prepared by Ald. John P. Garner, chairman, and Attorney Henry Kramer, secretary.

Tomorrow two tours of the boulevard system will be made, one in the morning and another in the after noon. Each will be preceded by a motorcycle squadron. On Tuesday the delegates will be the guests of the packers at a luncheon and tour of inspection of the stockyards. On Wednesday the steel mills at South Chicago will be inspected. The programs for Thursday and Friday have not yet been completed.

WOOD LEADING SECOND CHOICE OF NEW YORK

Utica, N. Y., June 5.—[Special.]—So far as the delegates aboard the New York special train speeding to Chicago have expressed any sentiment, Gen. Wood fares better than any of the other candidates. There is little sentiment for Johnson, although he will receive a few scattering votes, especially from the Brooklyn contingent.

Hoover has some supporters. Probably the best known Hoover man among the delegates is ex-Judge Nathan L. Miller of Syracuse, one of the "Big Four." The other three delegates at large, William Boyce Thompson and United States Senators Calder and Wadsworth, are noncommital except that they will vote for Dr. Butler on the first ballot. After the free for all fight begins, Mr. Thompson and the two senators, it is understood, will be for Wood.

Most of the Wood sentiment is among the upstate delegates.

May Abolish Bullfights Unless Spain Gets Schools

VALENCIA, Spain, June 5.—Municipal Counsellor Margaia, in the course of a council meeting last night, threatened to invoke the existing law prohibiting bull fights unless the city provides sufficient opportunities for educating the children. He charged the council with neglect in not appointing the necessary amount for erecting schools.

7 Year Old, Insured for $25,000, Starts Trip Alone

Portsmouth, N. H., June 5.—John Paul Jones, 7 years old, today began a 1,000 mile journey to his home in Sidney, O., insured for $25,000, unaccompanied and tagged to his destination. The lad is insured for three days, the time estimated for the journey, against injury, death, or loss.

"DARK HORSES" PRANCING AS LOWDEN GAINS

Minor Entries Think Chances Better.

BY ARTHUR M. EVANS.

"Lowden or a dark horse" was a thimbleful of conjecture that set the minor candidates prancing last night in the fog of uncertainty in the Boul Mich hotels.

Developments of the day apparently continued to indicate that of the G. O. P. "Big Three," Lowden is in the strongest position. He was awarded eighty-eight of the contested delegates by the national committee. Old timers in the game, trickling into Chicago, after a look around, stirred up the old medicine that Gen. Wood is slated for the parachute early in the balloting.

As to Senator Johnson one of the willest of the party chiefs remarked. "We love Hiram and will give him everything he wants, but the nomination and his league of nations stuff."

Johnson Less Bitter.

Johnson, too, indicated that if forced he might be willing to drop a little sweetening into his "bitter-end" fight against the league, which carried him across the country on the stump. In a talk with the scribes, later blue-penciled, he said he would accept the nomination on a platform containing a Lodge reservation plank. He has spoken of his readiness to make a fight on the convention floor for his views. If the convention stands the Johnson league idea on its ear, the Californian is ready to run, if nominated, on a Lodge plank.

When all this was inflated in the process of gossip and rumor, it chirked up the lesser candidates perceptibly. They added their mite to the guesses by figuring on a prolongation of the balloting, which would make it "anybody's chance."

Phrase Is Stretched.

Not since the days when Garfield was nominated on the thirty-sixth ballot in 1880 has a "dark horse" landed on the ticket. This time the paddock contains no unknown whirlwind under a blanket, so some of the lesser runners stretch the phrase to cover themselves. Headquarters of Senator Harding took on a wide smile. So did those of Senator Poindexter.

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler signalized his entry into town by announcing if necessary he would meet Hiram Johnson or Senator Borah on the convention floor in wordy combat over the league issue.

Some of the easterners sought to inflate the Knox boom which Senator Knox defiated in Washington. They pumped in the air, apparently unaware the senator had opened the stop-plug.

Friends of Senator Lenroot meandered through the corridors dropping mysterious whispers of what Lenroot may do if the convention languished into a second week.

Senator France of Maryland announced his intention of trying to float in on a wet plank.

Coolidge in Running.

Gov. Coolidge of Massachusetts put on an extra blanket and sought to make himself a more salable horse than ever. His manager, James B. Reynolds, dashed off on his typewriter something to the effect that Coolidge "is neither a dark horse nor a compromise candidate." But Mr. Reynolds added that despite Coolidge's desires his friends and admirers are insisting on trying to hand him the nomination.

Hoover headquarters got busy. The managers announced a nominating speech would be dispensed with, according to present plans, but if it is made it will be delivered by former Judge Nathan L. Miller, one of the New York delegates. The theory in the Hoover camp is that if a deadlock ensues, then will be the time to start things whooping for the wartime food administrator. So far as present indications go, Hoover's candidacy, so far as the politicians are concerned, might be checked with the wraps at the Coliseum.

All Get Excited.

Everywhere the minor candidates and the dark ponies manifested exhilaration on a cocktail of 50 per cent hope and 50 per cent guesswork.

Friends of Gov. Sproul of Pennsylvania, too, began to throw in a trifle of jazz. But over the wires came tidings in which the Lowden manager saw much of significance. Pennsylvania's seventy-six delegates are going to the convention to vote Sproul, but if he cannot be [illegible] they will plunk their votes where they will do the most good.

And Gov. Sproul and Mayor J. Hampton Moore of Philadelphia in interviews both showed a strong personal liking for Lowden.

"My views on many questions, including labor issues and governmental problems, coincide with Lowden's," said Sproul.

Hiram Johnson, too, has his weather eye cocked on Pennsylvania, and will seek to swing it if Sproul gets nowhere. The same is true, of course, of Wood.

Moses Is Repudiated.

The one bit of fireworks of the day was furnished by the Wood camp. With a unanimous shriek the general's supporters in the G. O. P. national committee repudiated the charges of Senator Moses of New Hampshire, a Wood manager, that the old steam roller had been trundled out of the garage and was flattening out delegate contests in the interests of Gov. Lowden.

The Wood men disclaimed any attack on National Chairman Will Hays and followed it with other irate denials of Moses' wail that "roller tactics" would force a coalition between Wood and Johnson to beat Lowden. It was enough to drive Senator Moses to the bullrushes, in a manner of speaking. Wood stamped all over his statement; Johnson treated it with ridicule.

The Lowden managers extracted satisfaction. They said it meant a division in the Wood forces, a confession of weakness for both Wood and Johnson and an implied acknowledgment that Lowden, as affairs now stand, is potentially in the strongest position of all the avowed candidates.

Observers on the outside saw in the development another of the "tactical blunders" of which Gen. Wood, a fine, upstanding candidate, has been made the victim by his managers.

Real Delegates Arrive.

Meanwhile real delegates began to arrive. They were quite a curiosity at the hotels, the men with the actual votes. Up to yesterday, as usual, the drift to Chicago was composed of committeemen, candidates, and scattering delegates well versed in the motto, "The early bird gets the limelight."

Up to yesterday more newspaper correspondents than delegates swarmed the hotel lobbies. Preconvention politics was a fancy mixture of guesses, conjectures, rumors, in a word, "dope." Now the men with the votes are arriving, but even the newcomers and the sentiments they drop fail to shoot many holes in the doubt and uncertainty over the outcome. Everybody is as much at sea as a month ago. Prophecy is an Homeric jest—they're all at sea.

"Muddle," Says Crane.

"It's the worst muddle I've ever seen at a convention," whispered Committeeman Murray Crane of Massachusetts. And it was a mouthful of truth.

As the seasoned party men came in, however, they gave indications that the tendency is still traveling the same course that has led veterans to the conclusion that Lowden of all the avowed candidates, major and minor, apparently has the best chance of landing on the ticket. The attitude of Senator Moses seems to back a belief that is more or less prevalent that Gen. Wood will muster at most not more than 300 or 350 votes and that Johnson will fail to make the grade by as large a margain.

Laugh at Coalitions.

Talk of coalitions brings more, or less jocularity. This time the nomination will depend upon the uninstructed delegates, and next Tuesday will see fewer "vest pocket" delegations than usual in the Coliseum, bundled up in convenient form for trading purposes. For the same reason talk of any candidate "swinging" his strength to some other candidate is filled with airholes. When it comes to "swinging" the delegates will pick their own swing. It is one of the great factors in the uncertainty.

Three things that stand out as probably characteristic of the impending powwow are: No stampede; no wholesale deliveries; no bosses.

As to stampede talk, supporters of Hiram Johnson were perhaps counted on as most likely to rush the delegates into bursting out of their corrals. He is the one candidate who is able to stand an audience on its ear and spin it like teetotum.

Impervious to Stampede.

But the delegates are quite used to impassioned oratory. The Roman mob has become a yawn raiser. Fifty per cent nearly of the delegates were in the 1916 convention, and at least twenty-five per cent of them sat in the 1912 powwow. But Roosevelt, the greatest propulsive force modern politics has known, failed to budge them materially in 1912 and 1916.

"Stampede," said one old timer, "anybody might as well try to stampede a flock of hard boiled eggs."

As to bosses, the Democratic press is loudly bewailing that the convention stands in greatest need of a boss. Up to this year the shriek was that the bosses were controlling.

A few remnants of the Old Guard are here, but they seem to have left the old blacksnakes at home. It's almost pathetic to see Murray Crane, for instance, wandering in and out of the hotels unnoticed and almost unrecognized save by some of the old-timers. Penrose is sick in bed with a long distance wire ready to serve him with information. The old guard is supposed to have between 200 and 300 votes somewhere to be "delivered" to somebody some time. But the convention is without a predominant figure either in the shape of a candidate or a "boss"; no wonder the prophets have folded their tripods.

Maryland Delegates Here; 16 Will Vote for Wood

Baltimore, Md., June 5.—[Special.]—Maryland's delegation to the national convention is not going to Chicago as a unit, but the sixteen votes on the second ballot will be given as a unit for Maj. Gen. Wood. Some of the delegates left today and the rest will go tomorrow. The leading delegates intimate that Senator Joseph I. France will likely receive the Maryland favorite son vote on one ballot.

LOWDEN WINS 88 DELEGATES IN CONTEST CASES

Hearings End with All Sides Satisfied.

The Republican national committee completed its work last night in making up the temporary roll of the convention next Tuesday.

Contests disposing of 137 seats, mostly from the southern states, were disposed of during the week's hearings.

With the seating of the "regulars" from Texas, headed by H. F. MacGregor of Houston, and the "lily white" faction from Virginia, headed by G. B. Siemp of Big Stone Gap, the advantage gained by the Lowden forces in the convention was more than two to one as compared with the Wood victories.

Results of Contests.

The votes credited to Lowden as a result of the week's work total 88. Wood is given 34 to add to his string. Johnson picked up 7, and Harding 6. Two votes from Missouri were thrown out of the convention window. These figures are based on inquiries made in various delegations and on claims of campaign managers. The action of the committee is subject to revision by the credentials committee and then by appeal to the convention.

While the results favored Gov. Lowden in this manner, Wood committeemen were a unit in declaring that the work of the committee had been fair and square. It appeared that the Lowden people had gone into the south early and had won over the support of the regular organizations there which had been functioning for convention purposes for years.

Hitchcock Late on Job.

The Hitchcock people came along late, in many instances, and, finding the older organizations gone, proceeded to father the organization of "contests." The committee voted them down, in most cases unanimously, Wood and Johnson members joining with the Lowden men. In only two or three cases was a roll call demanded. At no time during the sessions was there a solid group of Lowden men voting one way regardless of evidence. The voting found men splitting their presidential lineup as though they were not paying any attention to the underlying situation. And this is what they said they would do and what Chairman Will H. Hays asked them to do.

Negroes Make Plaint.

The second outstanding feature of the hearings was the pleading of the Negro Republicans for recognition. Such evidence was given wherever the committee thought evidence warranted it. But whether they were "regular" or not, the Negro attorneys and special pleaders made the welkin ring every day with their impassioned cries for enfranchisement. The Democrats had disenfranchised them, they said. They could not break into the Republican party in some states. They were left out in the cold, shackled as of old, kept out of meetings by strong arm methods, insulted, and scorned. The "lily white" movement, they said, was killing the Republican strength in the south.

The last day's work of the committee left Henry Lincoln Johnson of Atlanta, a Negro, in control of eleven of the fifteen delegates of Georgia. There was great rejoicing among the colored population of the halls and corridors. The outbursts of pleasure or displeasure from the onlookers at the sessions became so vigorous at times that the chairman had to threaten to clear the room.

Texas Contest Warms.

At one point during the Texas hearing there was an undercurrent of antagonism. The Negroes in the room did not like the tone in which the "lily white" attorney addressed his black brother on the other side.

"Sit down," snapped the lawyer.

"This ain't Texas," came from several Negroes.

The Texas bolters, led by "Goosenecked" Bill McDonald, were unable to make an impression upon the fact hunting committee.

"We sympathize with you, but you have no evidence," was the remark of Herbert Parsons, attorney for the committee, during one lull in the debate.

Green Forces Lose.

McDonald and his delegates were with the E. H. R. Green faction. Green, a son of the late Hetty Green, lives in New York, but votes in Texas. The delegates at large seated from that state were H. F. MacGregor, Phil E. Baer, C. A. Boynton, and John E. Elgin.

The Virginia situation evoked another bitter fuss, with the same result. The "lily whites," denying that they had kept the Negroes from their convention, were seated because they had the preponderance of evidence as to regularity. National committeemen are great on regularity. They cannot abide bolters, no matter how righteous the cause. The delegation seated from that state is led by Slemp, H. L. Lawson, D. L. Groner, and Joseph L. Crupper.

Moses Is Assailed.

The charge by Senator Moses that the committee was using steam roller tactics in order to help Lowden formed the subject of a committee debate during the morning session.

In debate and in conversation outside the committee room, the charge of Senator Moses was condemned as unfair and unwarranted.

Jesse M. Littleton, national committeeman from Tennessee and representative of the Wood interests in the contests, said:

"Any charge that the committee has been unfair in its decisions is unwarranted."

Gov. John H. Bartlett of New Hampshire declared:

"I have been observing the workings of the hearings on election contests for two days with the natural interest of an attorney at law, and an ardent supporter of the candidacy of Gen. Wood, being the first man in my state to pledge for Wood.

No Criticism Possible.

"There can be no intelligent criticism of the judicial and fair minded manner in which these cases have been heard and decided." Chairman Hays has really inaugurated a reform open door policy in these cases which marks a new era in our politics. I am sorry that our senator became so misinformed, and I know that Gen. Wood does not share his opinions at all."

Committeeman Henry B. McCoy of the Philippine islands rose to a question of personal privilege after a Georgia district contest had been decided in favor of a Wood delegate. He referred to the Moses statement and that he was a Wood man. Then he said:

"I have been present in all the meetings of this committee in which contests have been heard and have voted on every contest. I want to say most positively and emphatically that in my opinion the vote of this committee in every case has been based on the justice of the case as each individual member honestly saw the case, and that no decision and no vote has been tinged by any personal preference of members of the committee for any presidential candidate.

Moses Charge Denied.

"Senator Moses has no basis for his statement in my opinion. His attack was wholly unwarranted. His statement is merely the expression of his own personal opinion; it is not the opinion of either Gen. Wood or of Col. Procter or of any other man I know of who is a supporter of Gen. Wood.

This was the signal for other Wood leaders. National Committeeman Virgil L. Highland of West Virginia, Fred Stanley of Kansas, and James J. McGraw testified their entire satisfaction with the fairness of the committee and its chairman.

Kean Injects Humor.

Committeeman H. F. Kean of New Jersey injected a little humor by remarking:

"Senator Moses came to the state of New Jersey some time ago and, according to the public press, said in a speech that 'Gen. Wood must be a very great man because his friends have made so many mistakes.' And I agree with the senator quite heartily."

Committeeman Rudolph Hynicka of Ohio said:

"I have had the secretary look over our records and he finds that there has been a division of roll call in only five cases that have come before the committee. In all the other cases the committee was unanimous. Of the five cases involved, the vote in two cases was a little close, while in the other three it might as well have been unanimous."

Work Is Surprised.

Committeeman Rudolph Work of Colorado said that both Mr. Hays and Gen. Wood were above reproach.

"I was a little surprised," he said, "to see in this morning's papers in these piping times of prohibition, a statement criticizing this committee purporting to emanate from a United States senator. The fairness evidenced by this committee is, in my experience, unprecedented."

Committeeman Herbert Parsons of New York called attention to the votes in Louisiana, Mississippi and South Carolina.

Chairman Hays called the incident closed.

No Need to Sleep in Park During G. O. P. Meet

Chicago, through its Association of Commerce, issued a guarantee last night that nobody who comes here for the convention need worry about getting rooms. "We have a day and night service," said George M. Spangler of the association, "and we can supply any demand for accommodations.

"We have rooms and suites in private homes and in hotels, and most of them may be had at reasonable rates."

50 Ward Plan Before Voters Again This Fall

The fifty ward bill, which would reduce the city council from seventy to fifty aldermen, will probably be submitted to the voters again this fall, Ald. William F. Lipps told the council elections committee yesterday. He asked that redistricting of the thirty-five wards be put off until the 1920 census figures are available.

SUFFRAGE STATE SINCE 1868 HAS NO 'MILITANTS'

Mrs. G. R. Hagens of Wyoming, a member of the committee of 100 women, headed by Mrs. John G. South, chairman of the women's division of the Republican national committee, arrived in Chicago yesterday.

"Wyoming is the first state that had suffrage," she said. "We have been a suffrage state since 1868. We have always worked with the men. There has never been anything militant about our plans. The meetings of the committee of 100 will begin at once. Our work has to do entirely with this convention and we will have our place in the big tent."

While the Wyoming delegation is uninstructed, Mrs. Hagens said the women of the state were nearly all for Lowden, and she believed the delegation would vote for the Illinois governor.

Woman from the Ozarks Aids Herbert Hoover

Mrs. Charles L. Harris, who for the last seven years has lived on a farm in the Ozark mountains, yesterday announced that she was for Herbert Hoover. "Hoover put us on an economical basis, he grouped us," she said.

"The women are three-fourths of the buyers. They are said to be nine-tenths of the spenders. I am both a producer and a consumer, and I am interested in the election of Mr. Hoover because of what he has done for the women."

Saw Lowden as Statesman in Youth—Mrs. Oglesby

Mrs. Richard J. Oglesby, wife of the former governor and senator, in a letter to Mrs. W. G. Edens, says this about Gov. Lowden:

"It will give me great pleasure to testify how sincerely I believe in Gov Lowden's fine ability to make the best constitutional president. When he was a very young man my husband and I predicted he would make a statesman, and the promise is now fulfilled, to my great comfort and satisfaction."

Mundelein. He will open Thursday's session of the Republican national convention with an invocation. The prelate will be accompanied by his secretary, the Rev. Albert E. Smith; Bishop Thomas Shehan, rector of the Catholic university, Georgetown, D. C.; Bishop Dennis O'Connell of Richmond, Va., and Bishop O. B. Corrigan of Baltimore.

WOMAN TALKS TO 'EM ALL; LOWDEN GETS HER VOTE

Mrs. Anna M. Scott of Denver, an uninstructed delegate from the first congressional district of Colorado, arrived in Chicago yesterday and after interviewing all the presidential candidates, announced her intention of voting for Gov. Frank O. Lowden. At the primaries she defeated A. M. [Big Steve] Stevenson, who has been a delegate from first district of Colorado at every Republican national convention in twenty-five years.

"I came to the convention open-minded and determined to vote for the best man," said Mrs. Scott. "I talked with all the candidates and asked them a few questions before making my choice.

"After carefully considering the claims of the different candidates I have decided to vote for Gov. Lowden. I think Gov. Lowden is the strongest candidate before the convention. His nomination will mean party harmony and result in Republican success in November."

LOWDEN FAVORS ONE TERM FOR PRESIDENT PLANK

Thinks It Would Aid Work for the Nation.

Gov. Lowden said yesterday that he desires the resolutions committee of the convention to consider a plank providing that the president to one term. He said he had suggested to the committee of the national convention of Illinois that it prohibit the governor from succeeding himself. He is not certain whether the president should have a four or six year term, but he said that in his opinion a president can accomplish as much in four years without a second term as by buzzing in his ears as is "ordinarily accomplished in eight years."

Second Term Handicap.

He went on:

"If the chief executive is thinking about succeeding himself, and he is only human, that interferes with giving the best service. I believe that the party if it is successful should propose an amendment to the constitution prohibiting more than one term.

"If there ever was a time when this idea should be adopted, now is the opportune period. In the present crisis, which is particularly serious, the president will be compelled to do things which will be unpopular for the time being with those interested in politics and to others. If he knows in advance that he could not succeed himself strength would be added to his purpose to do his task well and then retire from public life."

Might Return Later.

Asked if there should not be opportunity to make an exception to this in the case of men like Lincoln, the governor replied:

"Did it ever occur to you that the constitution had prohibited a second term we would not have had Andrew Johnson for president? We would not have been nominated?"

The governor would not prohibit president from being reelected, as he had been out of office a term, as was Cleveland. The Illinois executive considers that Cleveland was present a second time "because of his merit and not because he had built up a machine while he was in office."

LEAGUE PLANK STILL IN THE AIR; FIGHT EXPECTED

Story of Agreement Denied by Senators.

Republican party leaders who hope to deliver to the convention resolutions committee a platform plank on the league of nations issue approved by all factions in the controversy admitted last night that their efforts have thus far failed.

Although experts from Washington who have been through the senate treaty battles brought to Chicago a plank modeled after the Indiana resolution which they hoped might guide the convention safely through a threatening channel, they were unable to night to guarantee it.

Agreement Is Denied.

Reports that the tentative league plank framed by Senator Watson, Senator Lodge, members of the platform advisory committee, and others, had been agreed to by leaders of all factions, were emphatically denied from several sources.

Chairman Hays of the national committee admitted tonight that there would be a big fight over the issue before a final report reaches the convention. Except for this fight, Mr. Hays, in a statement issued tonight, said he thought there would be no serious clashing of thought on platform subjects.

Johnson Is Irreconcilable.

Senator Johnson, the irreconcilable, who is fighting for the presidential nomination on repudiation of the whole league of nations business, insisted that there had been no settlement. He expressed the hope, however, that there might be an understanding reached with the tentative plank as a basis for negotiation.

Senator Lenroot of Wisconsin, who has been consulting with other leaders on a preliminary draft of platform resolutions, was one of the first to deny the assertion that the league fight was over, and that a resolution which would serve to end the controversy had been drafted.

"It is absolutely untrue," said Senator Lenroot, "that there is now in existence here a draft of a resolution on the league issue which has been accepted by all factions. It is true that there is a plank proposed with the idea of obtaining unanimous approval. That unanimous approval, however, has not been obtained."

The proposed plank as outlined by party leaders who have been advised of its contents takes the Indiana Republican platform's resolution on the treaty issue as a basis, but boils it down. The plank is said to be divided into four sections.

First, it declares unequivocally against the Wilson league of nations.

Second, it indorses the action of the Republican senate in refusing to ratify the Wilson league.

Third, it indorses the Knox idea for creation of a world court for international disputes.

Fourth, it reaffirms adherence to the doctrines of Washington and Monroe on international relations.

No Irish Plank.

The tentative draft of the platform is notable also for several omissions. There is no plank on the issue of Irish freedom, none on the soldiers' bonus, and no direct reference to prohibition as an issue.

Prohibition comes in for indirect consideration, however, in a resolution on law and order, referring to the Republican party as the party which has always stood for the enforcement of law and maintenance of order, and quoting references of Abraham Lincoln to reverence for the law.

The tentative draft also contains a strong suffrage plank, not only indorsing national woman suffrage but indorsing also the action of the national committee in calling upon the governors of states to call special sessions of legislatures for the purpose of ratifying the suffrage constitutional amendment.

High Cost Considered.

Considerable thought is still being given to the question of the high cost of living and industrial conditions, leaders of the party realizing that these issues are of more urgent importance even than the issue of peace. Hearings are to be held by the committee on resolutions on these subjects, and many interests will be given an opportunity for full hearing.

On the Mexican issue a plank is prepared following the recommendations of the senate committee which investigated the Mexican problems, headed by Senator Fall. The provisional Mexican government is to be recognized provided it will eliminate constitutional discriminations against foreigners, but, failing in this, the platform would call for intervention in Mexico until such time as satisfactory international relations could be established.

Watson for Chairman.

Senator Watson of Indiana hopes to be chairman of the resolutions committee, although there has been opposition developing to his selection. Ogden Mills of New York, of the platform advisory committee, was suggested as the alternative selection. Senator Watson's friends say they believe that differences over the chairmanship have been ironed out and that the Indiana man would be chosen without a fight.

"Pussyfoot" Palls an Old One on Wet Candidates

Baltimore, Md., June 5.—[Special.]—"A 'wet' candidate for president of the United States has about as much chance as a cat with tallow legs running through hell, chased by an asbestos dog."

This statement was made today by W. S. Johnson, better known to the world as "Pussyfoot" Johnson, the prohibition champion.

"As for the repealing of the eighteenth amendment," he said, "Well, it took thirty-six states to add it to the constitution, and it will take thirty-six to remove it."

KILLED HUNTING FROGS.

Ironton, O., June 5.—[Special.]—Earl Chinn, 16, son of Earl Chinn Sr. of Advance, Ky., was instantly killed this afternoon while frog hunting with two other boys. The magazine of a rifle jammed and in attempting to fix it the weapon was discharged.

DEPEW SHIVERS AND TALKS OF 13 CONVENTIONS

May Name Anybody This Time, He Says.

It was an informal affair, the interview with Chauncey Depew, the Nestor of American politicians and after-dinner speakers. It began in the revolving door of the Michigan avenue entrance of the Congress, was continued through the lobby, into the elevator, and up to his suite, which overlooks the lake, on the tenth floor.

The reporter, inbound, had just mortised himself into one of the spinning compartments when he espied Mr. Depew, outbound, in another. They were, so to speak, vis-à-vis. He halloed to Mr. Depew and gestured with a beckoning finger. Mr. Depew signaled back, and continued to circle. The reporter circled after him. Eventually they both landed in the lobby, a bit breathless.

Shivers in Lake Breeze.

"I understand," said Mr. Depew, "that this convention was to be held in June. I get here and find it's December."

"Ah," explained the interviewer, reaching for his horn, "that is merely the lake breeze."

Arriving at his suite, Mr. Depew seated himself and spread a large shawl over his knees, observing that "the temperature's only 50 in these rooms; they must have banked the fires." He is in his eighty-seventh year, with the mellow outlook upon life that only much experience can give. The rare charm of his personality impresses one at the outset.

"Well, son," he said, "this is my thirteenth national Republican convention. I suppose you might say I'm the senior delegate here."

Hanks Back to Lincoln.

Then he reminisced back to 1864, when he "helped to nominate Abe Lincoln. You know Abe Lincoln was a sure thing. There was no dark horse in that convention. It was in '76 that the dark horse candidate had its genesis in American politics. That was the year they nominated Hayes.

"Then in 1880, I remember, there was another dark horse—Garfield. Yes," lighting a cigar, "Garfield was certainly a dark horse. Grant, Blaine, and Sherman were the ones they talked about. Nobody talked of Garfield. You never can tell.

"Now in 1884 it was different. Blaine won hands down then. In '88 it was anybody's fight. By the way, this convention is much like that one in that respect." Uncertain. It was Harrison that was supposed to have the least show in '88. But he won out. Then, of course, in '92 he was renominated.

Anything May Happen.

"When they begin to talk of dark horses, when there is no dominating figure, a man with those heroic qualities that appeal to popular sentiment, as with Lincoln, Blaine, Roosevelt, then you may expect any eventuality.

"Nobody knows who will be nominated here next week. Of course, we have our favorites. I, for instance, am for Nicholas Murray Butler. A peculiar situation obtains in America, developing from the war—tremendous issues, particularly taxation. It isn't so much the man as it is a solution to our complex problems."

Hits Presidential Primary.

Asked concerning campaign expenditures, Mr. Depew said he believed "it has been demonstrated the presidential primary is impractical, and should be abolished. The primary necessarily imposes upon the candidate the task of enlightenning the electorate of the country as to who he is, what he is, etc. Do you know that in New York state, merely to circularize our 1,400,000 registered voters on the Republican rolls, costs $50,000? There you get an idea of campaign costs.

"I think the solution is this: to abolish the primary and let people of certain specified districts, say as in congressional districts, select some man whom they trust and give him a sort of power of attorney to name their presidential candidate at a national convention.

How Others Did It.

"You know I was always curious about Athens, which really originated the expression, 'the popular will.' In those days the candidate appealed directly to the voters. I always wondered how they did it. So I went to Athens.

"They had a platform on a high rock overlooking a plain. The candidate would stand on the rock and appeal to the entire electorate. I thought I would try the experiment. There were some workmen near by. I raised this tenor of mine and quoted Paul's speech in Acts: 'Ye men of Athens, I perceive in all things ye are too superstitious.' That was as far as I got. They picked up their spades and shovels and started for me."

Mr. Depew will be here throughout convention week.

WASHINGTON NEWS —IN BRIEF—

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]
[Washington Bureau of The Tribune.]
WASHINGTON, D. C., June 5.

CONTINUATION of campaign expenditure investigations, which have been a sensational feature of the pre-convention period, was assured by the adoption in the senate of the Pomerene resolution. It was the final act of the senate before sine die adjournment resolution.

BUDGET legislation failed of enactment as the result of President Wilson's veto. While the house repassed the bill after eliminating the provision to which Mr. Wilson objected, the bill died in the senate as a result of a filibuster.

NO ACTION was taken by the house on the senate resolution refusing authority asked by the president to accept an Armenian mandate.

REPUBLICAN leader Mondell in a speech in the house described the record of the session as "unexcelled by any congress in American history." Representative Garrett, Democrat, charged that the Republicans had played politics throughout the session.

REPRESENTATIVE GALLAGHER of Illinois, Democrat, introduced a resolution in the house, urging the political parties to put Irish planks in their platforms.

Palmer's Manager Claims 581 Out of 1,092 Votes

Washington, D. C., June 5.—[Special.]—Nomination of Attorney General Palmer for president at the Democratic national convention was predicted tonight by C. C. Carlin, his campaign manager, who claimed 581 delegates out of 1,092.

"With the bulk of the delegates to the San Francisco convention now chosen, I can state with confidence Attorney General Palmer will be nominated," said Mr. Carlin. "A careful analysis of the delegates elected at this time shows:

"Palmer, 581; other candidates, 325; in doubt and to be elected, 186; total, 1,029."

Mills to Stay Closed; 500 Are Out of Work

Providence, R. I., June 5.—[Special.]—Further action in curtailment of work in Rhode Island woolen mills was announced today when notices were posted by the Stillwater Worsted Mills, Inc., stating the plant will not resume operations Monday morning, but will be closed down indefinitely. The plant gives employment to 500 hands and has been closed down since Friday of last week.

KNOX KNOCKS HIS OWN BOOM TO BOOST SPROUL

Will Miss Convention; Has "Safe" Proxy.

Washington, June 5.—Senator Knox of Pennsylvania, who recently was indorsed by his colleague, Senator Penrose, for the Republican presidential nomination, came out tonight for Gov. Sproul.

Senator Knox also formally announced that he would not attend the Republican national convention to which he had been chosen as a delegate at large from Pennsylvania, because of "private business."

Would Vote for Sproul.

His proxy, he said, would be held by Judge A. R. Reed of Pittsburgh.

He issued the following statement:

"I am sorry that private business compels me to stay away from the Chicago convention, especially as I would like to cast my vote for Gov. Sproul."

Proxy in Good Hands.

"My proxy, however, will be in good hands—Judge A. R. Reed of Pittsburgh, whose views on the subject are the same as mine.

"Gov. Sproul's Republicanism and experience admirably fit him for the highest office in the country. There can be no question as to his ability."

ILLINOIS LABOR PARTY SELECTS ENTIRE TICKET

Springfield, Ill., June 5.—Candidates for state offices nominated today by the Illinois Labor party made plans for an aggressive campaign next fall before they departed, following the close of the state convention tonight.

The ticket is headed by John Walker of Danville, president of the State Federation of Labor. He will make the race for governor. John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, is the party's candidate for United States senator.

The convention this afternoon approved the entire state ticket presented by a nominating committee. The candidates in addition to Walker and Fitzpatrick are Charles Dold, Chicago, lieutenant governor; Frank Esperiverton, secretary of state; John Schafer, Belleville, auditor; John F. Lennon, Bloomington, treasurer; William E. Rodriguez, Chicago, attorney general; Albert Towers, Belleville, clerk of the Supreme court, and Clifford Ernest, Eldorado, congressman at large.

Mr. Fitzpatrick and Mrs. Clifford Ernest were elected national committeemen. Duncan McDonald of Springfield was reelected state chairman. The convention closed tonight with a massmeeting which was addressed by Mr. Fitzpatrick.

WANT TO MAKE VICE PRESIDENT A BIG POSITION

Make the vice presidential position a real job and select a big man to fill it, is the announced purpose of many of the delegates to the Republican convention. The announcement that Gov. R. Livingston Beeckman of Rhode Island will be put forward as a candidate, and the talk of Gov. Calvin Coolidge of Massachusetts for second place in the event of Lowden's nomination for president, brought much comment along presidential row.

"The vice president's place should be made one of importance, and he should be given a seat in the cabinet conferences," was the way one delegate put it.

In addition to Coolidge and Beeckman, Samuel Adams and Col. Henry W. Anderson are being considered for the second place. Both the latter have opened headquarters and are making active contests for the nomination. Both are running as Virginians on a platform of "national unity" by which the north and the south can be brought together in the Republican column.

THE SENATOR SAYS

BY THE SENATOR.

I was swapping an earful of gossip with a Democrat from New York who is here to see the Republican convention doesn't go wrong in picking its ticket, when in saunters a Democratic national committeeman on his way to San Francisco.

"How's Hoover running?" asks this bird.

"Like a squirrel in a cage," says I. "Much motion, but no perceptible progress."

"Too bad about him," says the Democrat. "Say, there's a guy who might have landed on our ticket if he hadn't fallen for the elephant. D'ye know how it happened? Here's the story I get over the grapevine. This bird, Will Hays, Republican national chairman, in skirmishing around the country gets the idea Hoover is the hardest nut the Republicans would have to crack if the Democrats hung him on the ticket. Everywhere Hays goes he hears Republicans saying they're afraid Hoover will be the Democratic pick.

"So Hays goes into executive session with the old noodle and dopes out a plan. Hoover hasn't committed himself, and the world doesn't know whether he's a Republican or Democrat or a ticket scratcher. Hays picks out a few leading citizens in the east and gets them to drill over to Julius Barnes' office, one by one. They feed Barnes a fancy line of dope that everywhere they detect an uprising for Hoover. Barnes passes it on to Hoover, and the first thing we know Hoover is out with a letter saying he will be for the G. O. P. provided it dishes up a candidate and a ticket to suit him. This is too much of a sidestep.

"So the leading cits prance back to Barnes one by one and slip him the idea that before the politicians can take any stand they've got to know whether Hoover is a Republican. Barnes retails it to Hoover, who then comes out with a statement shutting the back door he had been leaving open into the Democratic convention. That's all.

"Now Hoover finds all he lacks at Chicago is delegates. He's flagged at the gate of the Coliseum, while he's on the shelf so far as San Francisco goes. Some live wire, that Will Hays. As I say I can't vouch for the truth of all this, but it was slipped to me by a bird who ought to know."

Three publicity men for three candidates were draped over the big urn in the hotel lobby, and I fed them the story.

"What are all these Democrats doing here?" says a Monmouth lad.

"Ah," says a Wood press agent "They're all afraid Wood will be nominated."

"Easy," says a Johnson flimsy peddler. "They fear Hiram'll be the pick and knock the Democrat ticket dead."

"A pipe," says a Lowden booster "They're scared stiff Lowden will be named, and they might as well call the San Francisco convention off."

"It seems to be unanimous," says I.

COOLIDGE BOOM GAINS STRENGTH THROUGH STRIFE

The boom for Gov. Calvin Coolidge of Massachusetts for the presidential nomination will be developed in its full strength today with the arrival of the Massachusetts delegation.

The tense situation as between the leaders apparently has caused the New England delegates in large measure to seek to concentrate upon Coolidge as a most available candidate, in the event of a deadlock.

Speaker Frederick H. Gillett of the national house of representatives has been chosen to place Gov. Coolidge in nomination. He will arrive this morning with the thirty-five Massachusetts delegates.

Gen. Wood has some strength of his own in the Massachusetts delegation that may insist upon voting for Gen Wood, but the Coolidge drive is starting upon the assumption, it is learned that he will have the thirty-five Massachusetts votes and the probability that he can get substantially all of Connecticut, Rhode Island and possibly part of Maine. New Hampshire and Vermont come to Chicago with Wood instructions.

Warns Sympathy Strike Will Make Thousands Idle

Schenectady, N. Y., June 5.—G. E. Emmons, vice president of the General Electric company, published a warning today that "thousands of workers in Schenectady" may be thrown out of employment within a short time.

In a page advertisement Mr. Emmons declares international officers of the moulders and coremakers union, on strike here, in sympathy with a strike of moulders at Erie, Pa., declared a "boycott" on the General Electric company "in ordering outside plants to handle no supplies for the company."

"If the supply of outside castings is curtailed," said Mr. Emmons' statement, "the principal departments of the plant will be affected and many workers will be thrown out of employment."

New York Court Reduces Amount Max Pam Pays

New York, June 5.—[Special.]—A lengthy legal opinion was handed down by the Appellate division of the Supreme court today in the suit of the Title Guarantee and Trust company against Max Pam, a corporation lawyer of New York and Chicago.

The trust company sought to recover $99,828 on notes given by Mr. Pam to the Thompson-Starrett company for work on an irrigation project at Uva, Wyo. The court, by a vote of 3 to 1, decided the plaintiff could collect only $53,150.

Former Justice Charles E. Hughes appeared as trial counsel for the trust company, while Edmund L. Mooney represented Mr. Pam.

CANDIDATE SAYS HE GOT $1,000 FROM BABLER

St. Louis, Mo., June 5.—[Special.]—E. E. E. McJimsey of Springfield, Republican candidate for governor of Missouri, admitted today that he received a total of $1,000 in two personal checks from Jacob L. Babler, Republican national committeeman, who handled $17,000 of Lowden campaign moneys in Missouri, and that not a cent of it had been used to boost Lowden in Missouri.

McJimsey said the checks were given him by Babler early in January and he understood they were intended as a contribution to his gubernatorial campaign expenses.

McJimsey dictated the following statement:

"Mr. Babler gave me, early in January, two personal checks, each for $500, which I understood was in full payment on his part of a pledge made four years ago, when he urged me to become a candidate for governor.

"He said then he would be glad to make a contribution to help bear the expense of the campaign and the promise was renewed when it became known that I had definitely determined to become a candidate this year.

"I had no knowledge of or intimation that this contribution from Mr. Babler was in any way connected with Gov. Lowden's campaign for president, and I am sure Mr. Babler did not so understand or intend it."

CALIFORNIANS, WITH BAND, GRAB THE SPOTLIGHT

Delegates Parade from Train; Boost Hiram

California occupied the spotlight among the arriving delegations for the Republican convention yesterday. With bands playing, flags flying, and scores of banners proclaiming the merits of Hiram Johnson, the delegation of nearly 200 reached Chicago at 9:30 p. m. It was headed by former Senator Frank P. Flint and Mayor James Rolph Jr. of San Francisco.

Throughout the day delegates to the convention and visitors, who hope to be able to get inside the Coliseum to [illegible] Chicago. Among others whose coming attracted more than the usual notice were Nicholas Murray Butler of New York, whose candidacy for president the New York delegation is supporting, and Gov. W. C. Sproul of Pennsylvania, who has the backing of his state delegation.

Women in Delegations.

With the California delegation came part of the Nevada delegation, and one woman delegate from Utah. She is Mrs. Lillie Nolstonholm. There are five women delegates from California—Mrs. J. B. Hume of Berkeley, Mrs. C. K. McClatchy of Sacramento, Mrs. Katherine Phillips Edson, Los Angeles; Mrs. C. M. Zumwalt, Tulare, and Mrs. Bradford Woodbridge of Roseville.

The train management was in the hands of M. H. de Young, publisher of the San Francisco Chronicle. Mayor Thompson's reception committee furnished fifty automobiles for the Johnson parade.

After a short address Senator Johnson spent the evening in meeting the members of the delegation and talking over home affairs with them.

200 in Massachusetts Party.

The majority of delegates will arrive today. The Massachusetts delegation left Boston on a special train carrying more than 200. Connecticut's representation also is coming by special train. The eight Montana delegates started from Butte last night.

Mrs. John G. South, delegate at large from Kentucky, arrived late last night. "It is inspiring," she said, "to come to the national convention as a worker and not as a mere wall flower." That seems to be the view of all the women delegates.

Davies Boosts Butler.

Judge John R. Davies of New York, campaign manager for Dr. Butler, arrived and assumed charge of headquarters in the Congress. The New York delegation will be here this morning. Judge Davies declared New York is for Butler not because he is a favorite son but because of his achievements and ability.

PENROSE TOO ILL FOR JOURNEY TO G. O. P. MEETING

Philadelphia, Pa., June 5.—Senator Boise Penrose will not go to Chicago to attend the national Republican convention. This announcement was made by his physicians today, following a conference. They issued the following statement:

"Senator Penrose has finally consented to follow the advice of his physicians and has given up his trip to Chicago.

"[Signed]

"Carpenter, Stengel, Penrose."

Five physicians were in consultation at the Penrose residence this afternoon. From the fact that two surgeons, Dr. John B. Deaver and Dr. Edward Martin, were added to the group heretofore in attendance on the senator it is gathered that an operation is contemplated.

The patient is said to be suffering great pain from an attack of hemorrhoids. To relieve the suffering narcotics have been administered the last few days.

SENATOR FRANCE, ONLY WET G. O. P. CANDIDATE, HERE

Drys Call Conference for Tuesday.

The only avowed wet candidate for the Republican nomination for president arrived in Chicago yesterday. He is United States Senator Joseph I. France of Maryland. Senator France has no instructed delegates, but he has presidential headquarters at Hotel La Salle and a wet plank in his platform.

"Were I the Republican nominee," Senator France said at his headquarters, "I would get the vote of every liberty loving, generous, patriotic American, for I have demanded in the senate that the liberties guaranteed to the people of this country by their constitution shall not be interfered with."

Drys Call Conference.

While Senator France was thus adding complications to the Republican pre-convention situation, the drys were making definite preparations to start a real fire under the resolutions committee. A call was issued for a mass conference of "interested citizens and leaders of all political parties," to meet in the Red Room of Hotel La Salle at 1 o'clock Tuesday afternoon for the purpose of consideration and definite action."

The purpose, as indicated in the call for the conference, is stated in this paragraph:

"Whereas, effort is being made by pro-liquor propagandists to bring back the American saloon under the guise of beer and wine license, and the legislatures of seven states have passed laws licensing the sale of beer and wine in direct contravention to the federal constitution and to the laws of the federal government."

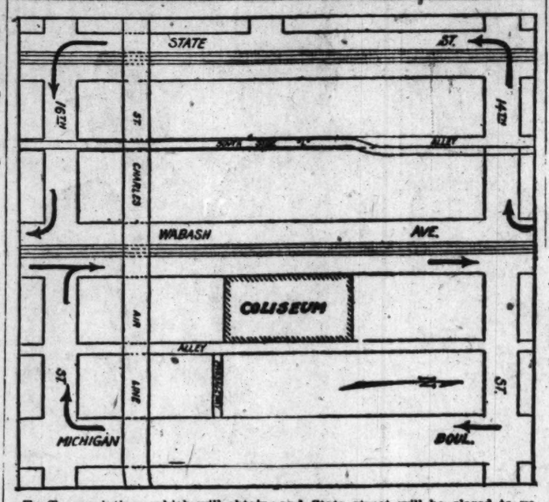
Signers of Call.

This call, a copy of which reached the newspapers through the Prohibition party headquarters, carried, among others, as signers the names of Bishop Samuel Fallows, David Starr Jordan, the Rev. John Timothy Stone, John G. Shedd, McKenzie Cleland, Eugene N. Foss, Virgil G. Hinshaw, Robert McMurdy, Catharine Waugh McCulloch, Arthur Burrage Farwell, Harriet Taylor Treadwell, and others.

The call announced that United States Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas will be one of the speakers at the conference.

William Jennings Bryan had a conference of his own with leaders in the pro-dry movement, at Hotel Morrison. Ways and means were considered of carrying the fight into the resolutions committee for a dry plank that answers Mr. Bryan's requirements.

THE CONVENTION TRAFFIC GUIDE



Traffic regulations which will obtain during the Republican national convention, as illustrated in the accompanying street map, were announced yesterday by Chief of Police Garrity, as follows:

No parking of automobiles in Wabash avenue between Fourteenth and Sixteenth streets.

Only north bound vehicular traffic will be allowed in Wabash avenue, south bound traffic to be routed over State street from Fourteenth to Sixteenth streets.

The alley between Wabash avenue and State street will be closed to vehicles after 11 a. m. Before that hour vehicles must enter at Sixteenth street and leave at Fourteenth.

Wabash avenue northbound traffic will be stopped at Sixteenth street immediately prior to convention adjournments and held until the Coliseum is empty.

Automobiles may be parked on State street, and Wabash avenue north of Fourteenth and south of Sixteenth streets, and on Fourteenth and Sixteenth street between Michigan boulevard and State street.

10,000 GET TICKETS TO SEE G. O. P. SHOW AT THE COLISEUM

TICKETS were distributed by Fred W. Upham and the national committee yesterday, and nearly 10,000 persons rested last night in the assurance that they will see the convention.

Six thousand people crowded the sixth floor of the Conway building to get the tickets allotted to the subscribers who donated the $150,000 necessary to defray the expenses of the convention. Many "one day" tickets were issued to persons who contributed. It is estimated by Walter J. Malatesta that more than $200,000 was returned to subscribers, to whom there were no tickets to allot.

About 3,000 tickets went to the medical staff, assistant sergeants at arms, pages, and others holding positions about the Coliseum. They will have no seats, but are entitled to admission. Many of these were donors to the fund.

In all tickets for 13,289 seats will be given out. Of these Chicago got about 20 per cent because of its contributions.

National committeemen received tickets and badges for the delegates, alternates, and visitors from their states at room I 72-74 Congress hotel.

EVANSTON'S FIRST HOLDUP IN YEAR; CHICAGOAN PREY

Evanston's first holdup in a year occurred at midnight last night when W. W. Lahrman of Chicago was robbed by a colored man at Ridge avenue and Simpson street of $30.

The thief was apologetic, but firm. A gun emphasized his firmness.

"Sorry to have to do this, brother," he said, "but with shoes and pork chops costing what they do I have to get money some way. Don't holler or I'll shoot."

Lahrman didn't holler.

Policeman Celebrates 25th Year at One Station

Sergeant John Waage of the Irving Park police station was given a banquet, a gold watch and chain, and a Consistory charm and Shrine pin set in diamonds, in celebration of his 33 years of service on the police force. Sergt. Waage, who lives at 3305 Wrightwood avenue, has spent 25 years at the Irving Park station. The banquet and the gift were presented by Irving Park business men.

Fugitive from Chicago Captured in Montreal

Fred Russo wanted for the shooting of Louis Messina, 819 Milton avenue, last March, was brought back from Montreal last night by Sergt. Michael Grady of the homicide squad. Russo wounded Messina in an attempt at robbery, it is said. He obtained his liberty on $20,000 bonds and fled.

Grady traced him to Buffalo, and then to New York. The New York police raided the house where Russo was concealed, but the latter escaped over the roofs. Grady got word the fugitive was on his way to Montreal and went there, his train pulling in an hour before that of Russo. He arrested Russo as he stepped off the train.

BUYS $30 AUTO OF 'DELEGATE,' BUT CAN'T FIND IT

J. J. Meade of 60 West Superior street had $30 and he craved an automobile. His first stop was at the Reliance Automobile Repair Parts company, 1729 South State street, where he met Eddie Edwards, "delegate to the Republican convention from Kokoville, Ill."

Meade stifled laughter prompted by Delegate Edwards' high boots, hickory shirt, and flashy gallouses.

"Did I hear you say you was calc-lating on buyin' a car," drawled the delegate, chewing a straw. "I was driving my car through Kozie out here and it went plunk in the Desplaines river. Dingbust it, if I won't let you have it for $30."

He gave Meade a slip on which was written:

"To the Postmaster, Kozie: Please let Mr. Meade have my car in the river.—E. EDWARDS, Delegate."

"Well," Meade told Sergt. James Flynn of the East Chicago avenue police station last night, "I searched that river up and down. But no car was there."

Meade spent the night vainly searching the map of Illinois for "Kokoville."

MAYOR GIVES UP FIGHT IN STATE WHEN DEFEATED

Attacks Lowden in His "Swan Song."

ciples our people have indorsed so emphatically. I will not, for a membership on the Republican national committee, foresake my duty to aid in the fight for these American principles.

Talks of "Facts Disclosed."

The facts disclosed within the last few days through an investigation by the United States senate of presidential campaign expenditures further impel me to this decision. Regard for public decency should rise above personal ambition for office or power. It is apparent that certain interests would put the White House on the auction block. They assume that a candidate with vast sums of money to spend can be made president, regardless of his record, his lack of principles, or his lack of sympathy with the aims and desires of the American people.

"Delegates have been refused seats on account of corrupt influences surrounding their selection. Other delegates, unopposed for election, received substantial sums of money, according to their own confessions. The ideals of true Republicanism would, in my opinion, be served if the persons who improperly paid or supplied money were also deprived of the privileges of the convention and barred from being beneficiaries of any convention action.

"Believing in my heart that our great republic cannot survive unless the money-changers shall be driven from the temple of government, I cannot and will not accept an election to an office, the forceful administration of which might make me a party to the purchase of the high office of president of the United States."

Statement by Sherman.

The statement of Senator Sherman, issued before the mayor's, follows:

"In the national committeeman contest Gov. Lowden has won. It was his right, and therefore his victory. He has thirty-two votes certain, and probably will have more. I happen to be his candidate, but that is incidental. The fight began at the Illinois state convention when Mayor Thompson attempted to burden the governor with his platform. That platform has parts that are unrepublican. These should not be adopted. The fight begun then is now finished and the governor has escaped a serious handicap. Formal approval of the decision of the delegates must await the caucus of the delegation Monday.

"The governor won without pledge or promise to any Thompson delegate, so that the membership from Illinois on the four convention committees may now be distributed as discretion and judgment suggest for the good of the party. That subject will be taken up tomorrow if all of the delegates have arrived, otherwise on Monday.

"What course Mayor Thompson intends to take, I do not know. About it I am little concerned. Whatever it is, if anything, will probably aid the governor more than it will injure him."

Plans "Demonstration."

The mayor is expected to start his campaign for "his principles" tomorrow evening. At that hour a big demonstration has been planned. Leaders in each of the thirty-five Chicago wards have been instructed to bring cohorts to parade Michigan avenue and tramp through the hotels. It is estimated that the total paraders will reach 4,200.

When the ward workers arrive it is planned to supply them with banners, badges, and noise making devices. No announcement has been made regarding the programs for other evenings, but it is expected that the demonstration will be continued daily outside of the Coliseum and that the attack upon Gov. Lowden will become more direct and violent.

The loss of the committeemanship is not the most serious feature of the situation, although no doubt many of "Big Bill's" followers will see "red" when they hear the news. Some of them will be ready to do anything for "the boss," and it may take physical restraint to prevent something menacing happening.

Fear of Repudiation.

There is also a fear by the leaders of the Thompson-Lundin machine that there will be a public repudiation of that organization. Its face has been partly saved by the announcement of the mayor last night, but other things might happen.

It is reported that agents of this crowd have tendered their seventeen or eighteen votes to Senator Hiram Johnson and that the Californian's friends have been afraid to accept the offer.

After this happened these same votes are said to have been offered the men who unsuccessfully attempted to form a Knox band of hope.

Gen. Wood stands for military training under certain conditions. That is offensive to the "Big Bill bunch." so to whom can the seventeen or eighteen votes, nearly all uninstructed, be given?

Lowden Men Pleased.

Lowden managers, when informed of Mayor Thompson's declaration, were unanimous in saying that every city hall vote in the national convention that was taken away from Lowden will be multiplied by three in votes that would enter the Lowden column from states outside of Illinois. The general feeling, as sounded out in the lobbies was that the mayor's declaration had been the biggest boost that could have happened to the Lowden candidacy at this particular juncture.

Minnesota Governor Will Second Wood Nomination

St. Paul, Minn., June 5.—Gov. J. A. A. Burnquist of Minnesota will second the nomination of Gen. Wood. Gov. Burnquist received a telegram from Gen. Wood requesting that he second the nomination. He immediately wired acceptance.

"SOLID SOUTH" REVISION ASKED BY COMMITTEE

Resolution Asks Report on Apportionment.

The Republican national committee in its session yesterday took steps looking toward the revision of delegate representation at future conventions. The point arose over consideration of the case of southern states over which there have been contests occupying the attention of the committee for a week.

The national committee last night adopted a resolution authorizing the appointment of a special committee of three to study the whole political situation in the south with a view to reorganizing the Republican party before the next convention. This committee is to report at the next session of the national committee. The resolution was fathered by Jackson of Maryland and adopted unanimously.

The "Solid South Resolution."

The resolution was:

"Whereas it is increasingly apparent that the so-called "Solid South" is, in fact, on economic issues strongly inclined to the principles of the Republican party.

"Whereas it is obvious, from the repeated contests before the national committee and other facts no less noteworthy, that Republican votes in these states are not increasing in proportion to the increasing belief in Republican principles;

Asks Special Committee.

"Be it resolved that the chairman of the Republican national committee appoint a special committee of three of its members, one of whom shall be from the south [of which special committee the chairman and secretary of the national committee are to be ex-officio members] who shall very carefully and impartially study the whole political situation in the south, and also its relation to that in the north, with a view of reporting at the next meeting of the national committee, or as soon as the special committee thus appointed shall be ready, how the Republican party in the states of the south may be reorganized or constituted to make it a more effective agent for the spreading and recording of Republican principles and of electing Republican electors."

Four Injured as Autos Crash at Glencoe Corner

R. G. Wuertzler of 854 Waveland avenue, his wife, and two men were seriously injured last night when the Wuertzler auto and another owned by G. H. Merreyweather of 250 Maple avenue, Highland Park, collided at Vernon and Woodlawn avenues, Glencoe. Both cars were wrecked and the Wuertzler car was overturned. No one in the Merryweather machine was hurt.

BUTLER-JOHNSON FLOOR FIGHT ON LEAGUE LOOMS

Both Declare They Are Ready for Debate.

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, New York's "favorite son" candidate, and Hiram Johnson of the "Big Three," are scheduled to fight a fast and furious bout at the Coliseum this week over the peace treaty.

Dr. Butler and his boom arrived in town yesterday. He promptly issued a declaration of war against Johnson. If the California senator starts a fight on the convention floor over the treaty by demanding an "irreconcilable" plank, Dr. Butler will engage him at close quarters and insist upon the party taking a "constructive stand" with regard to the league of nations.

Senator Johnson as promptly accepted the challenge, but said he was confident that there would be little difficulty over the treaty plank. He appeared to think he would have no trouble in disposing of Dr. Butler.

Johnson Welcomes Battle.

"If Dr. Butler feels that way about the treaty," said Senator Johnson, "he most certainly ought to carry his convictions to the floor of the convention. He has an absolute right to. It is inconceivable to me, however, that there can be the slightest doubt about the ultimate stand of the party. The Republican party must and will take a position against this treaty, and against the destruction of American independence."

Senator Johnson's foremost "irreconcilable" ally, Senator Borah of Idaho, will arrive in Chicago tomorrow, and the two expect to make final plans for carrying on their fight against the treaty to the convention. Senator Borah has threatened to bolt the party if it does not take a stand against the treaty, but it is understood that he will be content with a declaration along the lines of the Indiana platform, which has been put forward as the convention model.

Butler Tells Stand.

Dr. Butler made it clear that he would not hesitate to "mix things" with Johnson in the convention when the treaty plank comes up.

"I will not uphold President Wilson's attitude on the league," said Dr. Butler, "but I will do my utmost to compel the Republicans to uphold the traditions of the party for constructive measures instead of confining itself to mere destructive criticism. The treaty is very bad, the league of nations needs reservations, but we are confronted with a condition and not a theory. The situation demands that we protect ourselves and then go ahead with the reconstruction needed throughout the world. Eighty-five per cent of the people want us to make a definite declaration of a moral purpose."

Senator Johnson was asked point blank today whether he would accept the nomination if the party embodied a declaration in favor of the treaty with the Lodge reservations.

"That is a bridge which I will cross when I come to it," replied the senator.

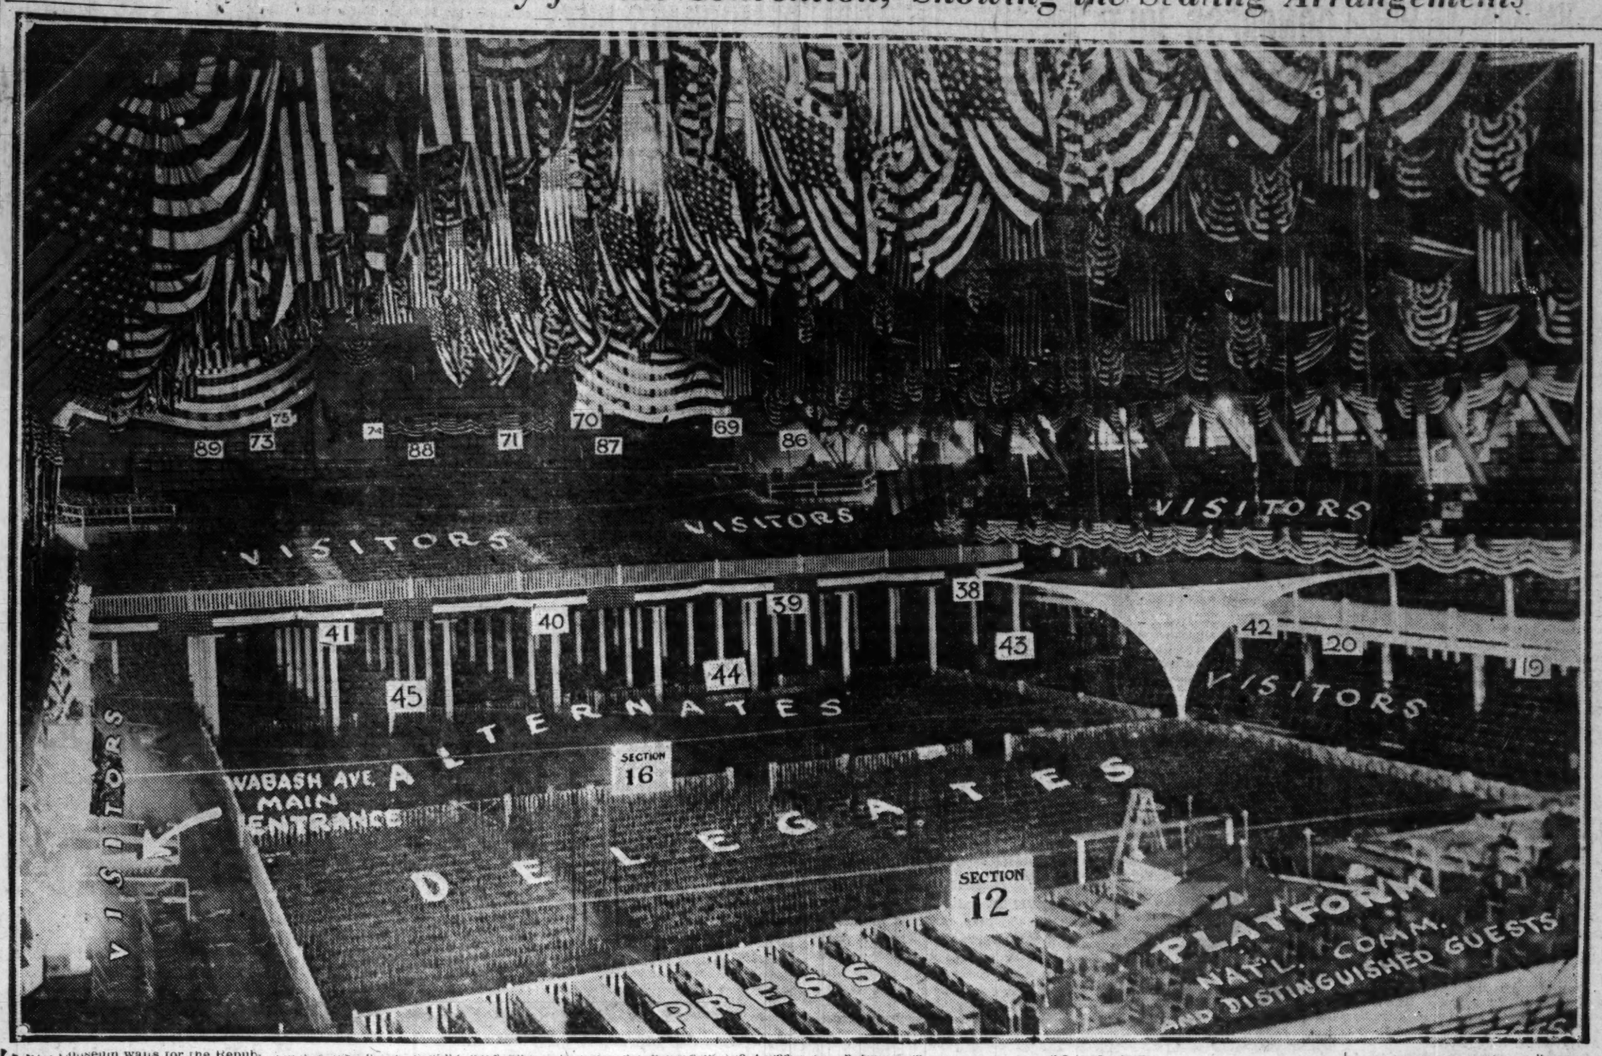
Differ Over Primary.

Senator Johnson and Dr. Butler are also at swords' points over the direct primary. The doctor denounced the direct primary as "a fraud on the American people."

"It is participated in by a small minority of Republicans and by a number of Socialists, Communists, and a few Democrats who want to make trouble for us. I am in favor of sending an instructed delegation to the convention," said Dr. Butler.

"I have always noticed," replied Senator Johnson, "that those who receive the smallest number of votes are the bitterest opponents of the direct primary. As soon as the situation clears up so that I cannot be accused of playing selfish politics I expect to launch a campaign for the establishment of a uniform, nation-wide primary law for the selection of party nominees. It is all nonsense to talk about the right of the people to rule and then deny them the right to pick their candidates."

The Coliseum, All Ready for the Convention; Showing the Seating Arrangements



The Coliseum waits for the Republican national convention that begins on Tuesday.

Carpenters, electricians, painters and decorators put the last touches to the interior of the big building last night, placing flags and bunting around the walls and hanging them from the high arched ceiling.

It is the most elaborate display of flags and colors that the building has known since the days of the Liberty Loan drives.

The seats for the 15,000 persons who are lucky enough to get into the Coliseum during the convention week are all in place—seats for the delegates, for the alternates, for the visitors, for the national committeemen and distinguished guests, and built-in benches for the press.

The delegates must sit on hard, wood kitchen chairs—which may prove irksome during a long speech. But the Wood delegates say it's a good sign.

In the galleries, however, there are soft folding chairs for the visitors.

The sections to be occupied by the various state delegations have been mapped out; telephones and electric lights have been installed, and everything is ready except a policeman at every door and a dozen or so at the entrances in Wabash avenue and the army of men selling campaign buttons and banners and feathers.

PARTY RULED BY LABOR DOOMED, GOV. ALLEN SAYS

Former Kansans of City Honor Executive.

The political party that does not assure the people of protection against the dominance of labor organizations in national politics is doomed to failure, Governor Henry Allen of Kansas told several hundred former Kansans who gathered at the Hamilton club last night in his honor.

The governor confined his remarks to a description of the method he used in combating the coal strikes in Kansas and to a description of the establishment of the court of industrial relations, closing with the statement that "The political party that does not say to the people 'we will protect you from the inroads organized labor leaders are trying to make in national policies,' is doomed to go down the hill to oblivion."

Judge John P. McGoorty presided. Introducing the governor and Chief Justice Harry Olson of Chicago, a life-long friend of Gov. Allen, who eulogized his former classmate.

GERARD REFUSES TO EAT AS FAIR SEX BACKS NIXON

New York, June 5.—Public Service Commissioner Lewis Nixon was indorsed for the Democratic nomination for president of the United States at a Dolly Madison "breakfast" of the New York Women's Democratic league here today after James W. Gerard, himself a candidate for the nomination, had walked out of the meeting following an admonition against going on record for individual candidates.

After Mr. Gerard had left the dining hall he stopped to say had he known in advance that a resolution indorsing Commissioner Nixon was ready to be presented he would not have come to the breakfast.

Commenting on the indorsement, Mr. Nixon said:

"Who wouldn't run if nominated?"

COURT AIDS GIVE DANCE.

HIRAM WILL GET ONLY ONE VOTE BY THIS WOMAN

Michigan Alternate Calls Him Radical.

BY LEOLA ALLARD.

The Michigan women balked at being bound to vote for Johnson and to stick to him until the finish. This was made known yesterday at the national Republican women's headquarters by Mrs. Nellie F. Graves, alternate from Michigan, president of the federation of clubs in her county, a member of the Women's League of Voters, and of the ways and means committee of the Republican national committee.

"Johnson wanted the committee to pass resolutions to stand by Johnson to the finish," she said. "The women were up in arms at once.

"We are instructed to vote for Johnson on the first ballot. For the honor of the state, we will vote for Mr. Johnson on the first ballot, but we will have a chance to vote otherwise after that.

Calls Johnson Too Radical.

"The women of Michigan feel Mr. Johnson is too radical. I took Mr. Poindexter for an automobile ride when he was in our town, Saginaw, but I was not for him. He also is too radical. We don't want that kind of a man.

"I met Gov. Lowden when he was in Michigan. He is a thorough business man and the women want him. He is not narrow. His breadth of vision makes him especially desirable. He is honest and straightforward. He couldn't do anything that wasn't honorable and fine and he is not so selfish that he would not work for and with some one else.

"I do not think that Hiram Johnson is a man who would help any one but Hiram Johnson. I think Gov. Lowden is the best man they have. I know the Michigan women feel that way.

The New Rich a Problem.

"What the women in politics must do, is get down off their perches, mix with the women who are of the plain everyday people. They may need our money, but we need them more than they need us. The new rich are a disconcerting, in fact a serious problem in this political game.

"We had a meeting of one of our big organizations at home, and the women were asked to give a small sum toward a campaign fund. One woman, who lately came into money and is trying to leave it to politics to pull her up in the social scale, got up and asked that we put her down for a sum way out of keeping with the amount asked. Some of the women applauded. The wiser ones did not.

"We do not want women to buy their way into politics or they will spoil the entire plan of the sober, thinking women. Money must be forgotten. The poor women are and should be as welcome as those with something material to contribute. If the women do not insist upon this they will lose more than they can ever regain."

PURELY PERSONAL AND NONFACTIONAL

Dear, dear. You should have seen 10 year old Eleanor Lust. Everybody else did. She was dancing about in the Boul Mich with red, white, and blue feathers in the band of her hat, and on the feathers was the name of one of the presidential candidates. She looked just like Pocahontas. She's the daughter of Attorney Herbert C. Lust of Kenilworth. And we've forgotten the name of the presidential candidate.

Purely Personal and Nonfactional Charles Voisey arrived in Chicago yesterday morning. He is Chauncey Depew's valet. Asked for a statement, he said: "I have nothing to say."

"You're too gentle back here with your professional bad men. Treat 'em rough," advised Mr. Wingfield. "No, I haven't followed the Pickford-Moore divorce proceedings or the Pickford-Fairbanks nuptials. I understand they have made Nevada more or less famous, however."

In the old days, when the west was wild and every man packed a sixshooter, periodically using the saloon lights or the dance hall pianist for target praetice, George Wingfield was attaining maturity in Nevada. He's in Chicago now as national committeeman. His fortune is estimated at $50,000,000. Copper mines.

There is perturbation in Hoover headquarters—ninth floor of the Auditorium. His campaign directors can't induce Mr. Hoover to lend his presence to Chicago for even one day during convention week. Too busy at 115 Broadway, New York, is the word he sends back.

He is four feet up and down. He wore a dawn gray tailor made sack suit and a panama straw, and was smoking a huge cigar. He was meditating by one of the Corinthian pillars in the lobby of the Congress. He informed the questioner he was John W. McCabe, chief page of the house of representatives.

GIRL OUTWITS PAY ROBBERS.

Two men yesterday held up the Power Oil company offices, 633 West Thirty-ninth street and escaped with $185. Miss Ruth Holloway, the cashier, was putting the money into envelopes for the employes. She hid $.00 when the bandits entered.

URGES WOMEN TO AID JOHNSON AS FOE OF LEAGUE

In a statement to women delegates to the Republican convention Mrs. Raymond Robins, president of the International Congress of Working Women, yesterday outlined her reasons for supporting Hiram W. Johnson. Mrs. Robins is joint chairwoman with Mrs. Eleanor Patterson Gizycka of the Women's Johnson Division.

"I am for Hiram Johnson, first, because we have his record in deeds covering his seven years' service as governor of California and his further service in the senate of the United States," she said.

"Senator Johnson's opposition to the league of nations is well known. 'I decline to subscribe to a document which would send the youth of America into the four quarters of the globe at the behest of, or at the direction or command of, foreign powers,' he told the voters in the primaries. 'My Americanism would have us ever alive to humanity's cry or civilization's call, quick to respond to suffering and ready to resent wrong; it would view with sympathy the struggles of peoples for freedom or self-determination.'

"This league, Senator Johnson tells us, is not a league of peoples. 'It is a great world economic trust wherein a few men sitting in secret may control the economic destinies of peoples.'"

TURN "BOUL. MICH." INTO AVENUE OF RED, WHITE, BLUE

MICHIGAN AVENUE, from Roosevelt road to Chicago avenue, is to be made a riot of red, white, and blue today in honor of the Republican national convention visitors.

Mayor Thompson's entertainment committee, headed by Ald. John P. Garner, let a contract yesterday for $1,500 worth of decorations along the boulevard.

Yesterday's additional offers of automobiles for the use of delegates ran the number available over the 2,000 mark, an average of more than two cars a delegate. The committee's program for the first three days was announced yesterday as follows:

MONDAY—Automobiles will leave downtown hotels at 9 a. m. and 2 p. m. for a two hour tour of Chicago parks and boulevards.

TUESDAY—At noon automobiles will leave for a tour of the stockyards. The five big packing firms have volunteered to provide luncheon for the delegates.

WEDNESDAY—Tour of the South Chicago steel mills, automobiles leaving at 1 p. m. and returning at 6 o'clock.

EACH 'CANDIDATE' TOOTS OWN HORN AT CLUB DINNER

Each "candidate" for the Republican nomination for president eulogized himself at the annual presidential "gridiron" dinner of the Three Score and Ten club at the Congress hotel last night. Miss Nomination, a maiden of uncertain years, and Sig. Svengali were among the guests.

The "candidates" were discovered on the floor of the banquet hall by Svengali after the latter had been introduced through rites in which the late J. B. Corn came back to earth. Those who impersonated the candidates were: Gen. Wood, by E. G. Godman; Gov. Lowden, by Fred L. Fake; Hoover, by Frank Reynolds; Prof. Nicolas Murray Butler, by R. A. Gunn, and Senator Harding by Louis Johnson.

Gov. McKelvie of Nebraska in an address declared only the establishment of a sound economic condition in the United States will "save it from the evils of bolshevism."

"Work and save is the doctrine which the people of this country must get back to," he said. "It is the one principle which will drive profiteers to their graves."

Kenrick Gets Honorable Mention in Walton Case

In the story concerning THE TRIBUNE'S $100 award for bravery the name of South Park Policeman Gustav Kenrick was accidentally omitted from the list of those given honorable mention. Kenrick was with Policeman Roberts when the latter was shot and killed by Walton, the train robber. Kenrick pursued Walton, recovered the sack containing $80,000, and then traced the fugitive to the flat at 806 East Fifty-first street. Kenrick fired several shots, and Walton fired back at him, but Kenrick showed no hesitancy in the pursuit.

BILL HITS REDS IN U. S. AND BARS OUT AGITATORS

America Is Made Safe for Americans.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., June 5.—[Special.]—Membership in organizations advocating sabotage, revolution or destruction of property is in itself made sufficient ground for the deportation of alien residents of the United States under a bill enacted finally today by congress.

The bill is aimed to make subject to deportation all foreigners who are members of the Industrial Workers of the World, the Communist or the Communist Labor parties, and was first proposed in congress six months ago when the radical wave in this country was seemingly at its height.

Pass Bill Quickly.

Anthony Caminetti, commissioner general of immigration, personally visited congress today to urge final action on the measure before the adjournment, and final action came in the house, where, without opposition or debate, the senate amendments of the original house measure were approved.

Representative Johnson, of Washington, chairman of the house immigration committee, who presented the bill to the house, urged favorable action, and then hurried the bill to the White House for President Wilson's consideration.

U. S. For Americans.

In addition to declaring that aliens belonging to the radical societies are subject to deportation because of their membership, the bill specifies that deportation or denial of admission into this country may issue against "aliens who write, publish, or cause to be written or published, or who knowingly circulate, distribute, print or display, or who knowingly have in their possession for the purpose of circulation, distribution, publication, or display, any written or printed matter, advising, advocating, or teaching opposition to all organized government."

Octogenarian Marries Widow of Son Years Dead

Roseland, N. J., June 5.—[Special.]—Preston Williams, over 80 years old, on May 17 married Mrs. Aileen Williams, widow of his son, Frank, who died more than thirty years ago, it became known today. The marriage license was obtained from Williams' son, E. A. Williams, registrar of vital statistics. The townspeople held a charivari—called a skimmington—in honor of the couple.

Earth Swallowed Up Farmer's $300 Plow Mule

Bedford, Ind., June 5.—[Special.]—Elmer McKnight, of this city, lost a $300 mule in a peculiar accident. While his farm hand was plowing the mule began to sink. His forefeet and half of its body disappeared in a large opening in a solid rock, becoming so tightly wedged that it died before it could be extricated.

MEREDITH'S BUREAU HARD HIT BY CUTS IN APPROPRIATION

Washington, D. C., June 5.—Secretary Meredith in a statement tonight declared more than fifty department of agriculture activities would have to be abandoned because of reductions in the annual agricultural appropriations bill. The bill appropriated approximately $31,000,000, which Meredith said was $6,000,000 less than the department needs and $2,185,000 less than was provided in the appropriation act for the present year.

Work designed to wipe out hog cholera, he said, would have to be abandoned in several states. Coöperative work toward improving the quality and increasing the use of dairy products will have to be abandoned in Iowa, Kansas, Mississippi, and Louisiana and curtailed in Nevada and Wyoming," he said.

Other effects, he declared, would be the closing of many field stations, curtailment of work toward preventing cereal diseases, abandonment of stations at which problems in irrigation agriculture are studied, and of the four forest experiment stations on the western forests, as well as of work having to do with maintaining and reproducing the forests in the east and south.

Other activities, the secretary declared affected, were prevention of spoilage during shipment of poultry, eggs, and fish; crop reports on cotton, tobacco, and rice will have to be dispensed with; advice to cities concerning their marketing problems; development of direct marketing of farm products by parcel post, express, and otherwise, and the market news service.

VILLA ATTACKS TOWN; HOLDS UP MINING COMPANY

Washington, D. C., June 5.—[Special.]—That Francisco Villa attacked Parral at 5 o'clock on the afternoon of June 1 and abandoned the attack at 4 o'clock the next afternoon was reported to the state department today by the American consul at Chihuahua, Mexico. It was stated that Villa then went to the Alvarado Mining company plant and remained there part of a day. He threatened to destroy the company's property if the company failed to deliver $50,000 by June 20.

The American consul's information was obtained from Leslie Webb, an employé of the Alvarado plant, which is four miles from Parral. Webb talked with Villa on Wednesday.

Scarcity of sugar in Chihuahua is reported by the American consul. He stated that some sugar is coming from the United States, but none from southern Mexico, with resulting high prices. Sugar supply in Sonora state also is reported to be limited, estimated at 75 tons. The embargo on its exportation from Sonora is still in force.

WILSON GIVES CONGRESS JOLT AS PARTING SHOT

Tells Railroad Men It Was a "Hopeless Body."

Washington, D. C., June 5.—President Wilson, in a telegram today to officials of the railroad brotherhoods, criticized congress for failing to take action with regard to the high cost of living, the conclusion of peace, and important domestic legislation.

The telegram was in reply to a message asking the president to prevent the adjournment of congress. The executive said that in the light of the record of the present congress "I have no reason whatever to hope that its continuance in session would result in constructive measures for the relief of the economic conditions to which you call attention."

"It must be evident to all," the president said, "that the dominating motive which has actuated this congress is political expediency, rather than lofty purpose to serve the public welfare."

Acquiesced "in Despair."

The president declared he had accepted some of the legislation enacted by this congress because he "despaired of anything better."

The text of the president's telegram follows:

"I received your telegram of June 3. You call my attention to matters that I presented to the present congress in a special message delivered at a joint session of the two houses on Aug. 8, 1919. In nine months this congress has, however, taken no important remedial action with respect to the problem of the cost of living on the lines indicated in that address or on any other line.

"Not only has the present congress failed to deal directly with the cost of living but it has failed even to give serious consideration to the urgent appeal, oft repeated by me and by the secretaries of the treasury, to revise the tax laws, which in their present form are indirectly responsible in part for the high cost of living.

No Hope of Anything Better.

"The protracted delay in dealing with the problem of the railroads, the problem of the government owned merchant marine, and other similar urgent matters has resulted in unnecessary burdens upon the public treasury, and ultimately in legislation so unsatisfactory that I could accept it, if at all, only because I despaired of anything better.

"The present congress has not only prevented the conclusion of peace in Europe, but has failed to present any constructive plan for dealing with the deplorable conditions there, the continuance of which can only reflect upon us.

No Hope in Continuance.

"In the light of the record of the present congress, I have no reason whatever to hope that its continuance in session would result in constructive measures for the relief of the economic conditions to which you call attention. It must be evident to all that the dominating motive which has actuated this congress is political expediency rather than lofty purpose to serve the public welfare."

Brotherhood's Letter.

The letter to the president from the brotherhood chiefs said:

"As the responsible heads of railroad labor organizations, representing more than 2,000,000 workers, we protest most earnestly and most emphatically against the proposed adjournment of congress next Saturday, in accordance with the plan reported in the public press.

"We call attention to the fact that despite the revelations as to the profiteering scandal congress has done nothing to check the evil or to punish the evildoers; that the cost of living continues to advance without a single remedial measure having been passed and that there has not been even serious consideration of constructive legislation dealing with the serious problem of industrial unrest.

"In the circumstances it appears to us incredible that the responsible leaders of the government at Washington can assent to this seeming agreement to continuation of a do-nothing policy, which means that the grave economic problems of the people are to be made the plaything of politics and politicians for the next five months. It invites political chaos and business disaster. Congress should remain in session."

FILIBUSTER BY DEMOCRATS PUTS BUDGET ON SHELF

Amended, a la Wilson, but Fails of Passage.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., June 5.—[Special.]—Democratic opposition in the closing hours of the senate today prevented the budget bill, amended so as to meet the objections of the presidential veto, from reaching a vote. A filibuster by Senator Reed of Missouri and Senator Harris of Georgia was largely responsible.

Republican leaders said that blame for the defeat of the measure must be shouldered by the Democrats. The house early in the day amended the bill so that the controller general and assistant controller general, after appointment by the president, would serve during "good behavior," the usual form on all presidential appointments, the officials being subject to removal by the president. With this change the house unanimously adopted the measure and sent it to the senate.

Reed Leads in Obstruction.

Senator Smoot of Utah made every effort to obtain unanimous consent for its consideration, so that it might reach the White House before 4 o'clock, but he was unsuccessful. Senator Reed was the first to voice his opposition. He demanded to know what the bill was all about.

"This is not a budget," he said when Senator Smoot had finished his explanation. "Does it deprive congress of its powers of appropriating money as it sees fit?"

"No."

"Then it is not a budget, but a recommendation, pure and simple. A budget is something that lists definitely the expenditures that can be made and the income that will be received. If congress still has the right to make what appropriations it pleases, this bill is nothing but a recommendation and we have that provided for under existing law. The only thing that I can see in this measure is another attempt by the executive department of this government to assume some of the functions of congress."

Relieved by Harris.

The assistance of Senator Harris was obtained by Senator Reed when he tired. Mr. Harris had been attempting since the senate met at 11 o'clock to get some action on his resolution providing for publication by the federal trade commission of income tax returns of corporations for the year 1918. His efforts had been blocked by Senator Root and other Republicans whom the Democratic senator accused of having acted in bad faith in breaking a promise that he should be given a vote on his resolution.

When he obtained the floor from Senator Reed he first addressed himself to his resolution but later picked up a copy of an appropriation bill that already had been passed by the senate and read from its dreary pages.

Efforts to Agree Fail.

Various solutions for the deadlock were suggested, but persuasion and all efforts at agreement failed in the face of Senator Harris' determination to filibuster until 4 o'clock unless he obtained a vote. Senator Smoot was forced to yield finally and the Harris resolution passed without a record vote, but will not become effective as it had not been acted upon by the house.

Recognition was refused Senator Smoot then and Senator Pomerene of Ohio presented his resolution for continuation of the campaign expenditures investigation until the election, which consumed the time until the hour of adjournment.

PALMER WILL RATION SUGAR

New York, June 5.—A joint distribution commitee to ration sugar to confectioners throughout the country will be formed here whin two weeks, Armin W. Riley, sepcial assistant to Attorney Geenral Palmer, announced today.

Characterizing the sugra situation in the United States as more critical than at any time during the war, Mr. Riley said an effort would be made to have bankers economize on its use in pastries and to have hotels and restaurants ration sugar to their patrons.

Mr. Riley's statement concerning creation of a distribution committee was made after a conference here today with a committee of six appointed by the National Confectioners' association at its recent convention in Minneapolis. The committee will comprise representatives of sugar brokers, refiners, confectioners, and soft drink and ice cream manufacturers and will operate under the direct supervision of the government flying squadron of profiteer hunters, Mr. Riley said.

LABOR BLAMED FOR HIGH PRICES BY LABOR LEADER

Donlin Says Shirkers Vie with Profiteers.

Montreal, June 5.—John Donlin, president of the building trades department of the American Federation of Labor, threw a bombshell into the ranks of labor today when he asserted that the workers are shirking their responsibility and that under production is as much responsible as profiteering for the hardships suffered by the public.

"The wage earner is just as much responsible for the high cost of living as any other agency," said Mr. Donlin in his annual report. "If every worker doing physical labor would insist that production equal prewar times there would soon be a reduction in the price of commodities. The higher wages go and the more production falls off the more the worker is going to be hurt."

Fall Report Under Fire.

Demand that the American senate repudiate the report on Mexico made by the committee headed by Senator Fall will be made during the convention of the federation which will open here Monday. Those leading the opposition to the report charge that it was inspired by oil interests and other exploiters of Mexican resources.

Expulsion of W. D. Mahon, president of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes, from the executive committee of the A. F. of L. and from membership in the federation, will be demanded, it was announced by officials of the building trades department.

Family Strike Breakers?

It is alleged that members of Mahon's family were operating an anti-union metal shop in Detroit, in which he was a stockholder, during the dispute with the Detroit Federation of Labor over the employment of non-union workers.

The recent steel strike is expected to cause a hot fight and bitter attacks against John Fitzpatrick and W. Z. Foster are looked for. These men directed the strike.

Little Gypsy Charms Evanston

Evanston children brought their toy animals to the estate of Mr. Daniel Burnham on Sheridan road and Greenleaf street, Evanston, yesterday afternoon and conducted the first toy carnival in the history of the suburb. The proceeds will go to the fund for an addition to Evanston hospital. Elephants lions, tigers, leopards, cattle, horses, and even snakes were entered in the big fair, and north shore society women presided at refreshment booths and served as starters on the merry-go-rounds and swings.

Many fathers were served cold suppers because they had to stay after the show to clear up the place.

Borah Backs Pomerene on Investigation.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., June 5.—[Special.]—A flood of campaign speeches from both sides of the senate chamber just before adjournment this afternoon ushered into existence an extension of the powers given the committee investigating campaign expenditures so that it will be enabled to throw publicity upon the financial outlay of the presidential candidates and those of United States senators between the time of the conventions and the November elections.

This for the moment brought down the curtain on the investigation, for earlier in the day the committee had questioned Col. E. H. R. Green of Texas, son of the late Hetty Green, and adjourned until July 9 so that the members of the investigating body might attend the conventions at Chicago and San Francisco.

Has Rough Sailing.

The road was not cleared entirely for the passage of the resolution sponsored by Senator Pomerene of Ohio, extending the life of the investigation. Two reports were made by the committee on contingent expenses of the senate. The majority report, signed by Senators Calder and Smoot, recommended the defeat of the resolution, while Senator McKellar of Tennessee, in a minority report, praised the work of the committee and urged its continuance. On top of this it was necessary that unanimous consent for a vote be obtained as a legislative day had not elapsed since the introduction of the resolution.

Senator Smoot registered the objection necessary after a speech by Senator Pomerene in which he defied the Republicans "to shield their party from further exposure of the wanton extravagance that had characterized the pre-convention campaign." Both Senators Kenyon and Borah urged that he withdraw his objection and at two minutes of four he did and the Pomerene resolution was passed unanimously.

Borah Backs Resolution.

"I am sorry a point of order has been made against this resolution," said Senator Borah. "The questions it involves do not appertain to any one party and any one who undertakes to interfere with the investigation is misrepresenting the best thought of the people and is a partisan before he is a patriot.

"It is unfortunate that we should find partisans in our party attacking the reflections cast upon candidates of other parties and defending the reflections cast upon their own party. This phase of the discussion is most discouraging. It is also discouraging that some of the larger Republican newspapers have become the unworthy purveyors of misrepresentations about the use of money disclosed by this investigation. These tactics should be denounced. It is not a party question.

Wants G. O. P. to Win.

"I want to see my party win, because I believe in its principles, but I say here with all the solemnity at my command that this party cannot succeed by denying to the American people the knowledge of how it succeeded. If contributions are not made public it is evident that those giving the contributions have a sinister motive. Let the American people know about these contributions. If you prevent the consideration of this resolution the charges that will be made in this campaign against candidates will be ten times worse than the things that will be done."

As listed by Senator Pomerene, the totals of the various contestants were as follows: Sutherland, $437 raised and debts incurred of $3,700, contributions $19,600; Hitchcock, $3,800; Owen, $13,195; Palmer, $59,185; Harding, 113,109; Coolidge, $68,376; Hoover, $168,057; Johnson, 197,230; Lowden, $414,159, and Wood approximately $1,500,000.

Scores Lowden Fund.

The senator scathingly commented upon the Lowden fund and the fact that a single family, that of the governor and his wife, had put up $400,000 to win a position which during the four years of the president's term would only bring in $300,000.

"Gen. Wood has one failing," declared Pomerene. "He cannot hide his light under a bushel. The general himself attended the initial meeting of his managers when half a million was decided upon as a starter for the campaign. And then he found his good angel, Col. Procter, the soap gentleman, who wants to keep the people clean. It will take more than soap to disinfect and keep clean the country's political morals, if we can allow such expenditures.

"This good angel advanced $521,000 to the Wood campaign in an idealistic fashion, as he told the committee, in the same manner he would have contributed to a Red Cross campaign. He later went to a bank and borrowed $100,000 more, and then with A. A. Sprague, the Wood treasurer, went on a note jointly to borrow still another $100,000. A. E. Monell of New York raised still another $100,000.

Funds for Wood.

"In all, the Wood men raised $1,180,043, of which the subscriptions were only $300,000. But there were many campaigns carried on for Wood in the states where the funds were raised independently of the national organization. In Michigan $70,000 was raised, to which the Alger family contributed heavily. Yet this was just getting started. If all this was merely a preliminary campaign, how much would it cost to get the nomination or the election?"

Col. Green, who identified himself as the president of the Texas and Midland railway, told the committee on taking the stand that he had not taken any active part in politics in behalf of any candidate since the McKinley campaign.

"I took part this year in Texas in a factional fight between the Lilly Whites and what we call regular Republicans," Green said.

"What candidate, if any, did your faction in Texas support?" asked Senator Kenyon.

"None."

Green Didn't Contribute.

"Did you give any money for the campaign of Gen. Leonard Wood or Gov. Lowden, or Senator Johnson?" Senator Kenyon inquired.

"I did not," the witness said.

"Now Col. Green I want to be frank with you," said Senator Pomerene. "It has been said and the information has been communicated to several of the committee that you gave some money to the Wood campaign, and that you agreed to meet any expense that might be attached to the Wood campaign in Texas. Is that true?"

"It is absolutely false. I had nothing to do with the Wood campaign. To show you how little I have had to do with the Wood campaign here is a telegram from Col. Procter, a man I have never met, telling me he would like to meet me personally in Chicago.'"

JAPANESE MAY NOT CONTINUE BRITISH ALLIANCE

TOKIO, June 3.—Delayed.—[By the Associated Press.]—With the approach of July 13, the date on which either party to the Anglo-Japanese alliance can renounce the agreement which expires in 1921, public discussion of renewal of the pact has developed an aspect affecting the United States. Pro American-Japanese groups declare that the alliance as now phrased would oblige Japan to join Great Britain in case of war between Great Britain and the United States because Japan has no treaty of arbitration with the United States.

While pointing out the improbability of such a war, attention is called to the fact that anything is possible. These groups proclaim the repugnance of a contingency whereby Japan could be drawn into a conflict with the United States, a country with which, they say, Japan's interests demand permanent peace.

"AN AGE IS DYING."

"In Europe," says the new British ambassador, Sir Auckland Geddes, "we know that an age is dying."

That, if true, as we agree that it is true, is a tremendous truth which ought to direct and control the thought of all responsible statesmen. Sir Auckland remarks that "here it would be easy to miss the sign of coming change," and yet, it seems to us, that in some important respects American thought shows a more practical recognition of this truth than European policy. It is American rather than European ideas that have broken ground in an attempt to reconstruct international relations.

But Sir Auckland was thinking, we gather, less of changes in international organization than of deeper and more vital changes in the social and economic structure of all western civilization. The force bringing these deeper changes he calls "a realization of the aimlessness of life lived to labor and to die, having achieved nothing but avoidance of starvation and the birth of children also doomed to the weary treadmill."

This is not a new force or a new realization. We call it democracy, and its increasing influence was the most certain fact in the world from at least the moment that Gutenberg invented movable type. Knowledge, which the printed page brings to the mass of men in the western world, brought wider possibilities of life within the consciousness of millions, and with that consciousness new desires, new hopes, new aspirations. That is democracy, the sense of the individual of his own powers and potentialities, and the fixed though often vague determination to escape from servitude to nature and to human rule imposed under sanctions beyond the reach of common men.

The age that is dying is not the age that began with Gutenberg. It survives in institutions almost completely disposed of by the recurrent shocks of the later centuries. It survives in modes of thought and emotions which chiefly gave these institutions their validity, and which, as we now realize with wonder and some alarm, are fading swiftly out of man's life.

There is in America the same challenge of our dominant conceptions of social relations. Radical ideas in Europe pass beyond the stage represented by present day America, and in this respect we must share with Europe in a struggle which in its extreme form challenges what has been assumed in America as in Europe to be the bases and essentials of civilized society.

We see a new organization of brute force, basing itself on the most ignorant and least advanced, seizing power at a time when we had hoped the progress of our society was finding a firm footing on reason and justice.

We see conceptions such as that of the right of private property attacked in spite of the experience which has approved it through the course of man's development. We see respect for the individual's liberty of self-help and self-advancement infringed by ideas or new forms of collective control and the ideal of equality seeking to force itself upon society by mechanical means which are only old forms of tyranny with new names. We observe a destructive private irresponsibility and vague, though intense, revolt combined with the impulse of mutual domination. We find limitless claims of the individual combined with the sternest attempt to chain the individual in the name of the individual's freedom and progress.

Whether we in America are in a better state to come through the ordeal than Europe we cannot confidently assert. If our acceptance of what may be sound in the new effort may be easier, we must consider that we have probably less appreciation of the abiding worth of old forms and conceptions. We are in danger of the spirit of "easy come, easy go," and, like the inheritors of great wealth, may place too little value on what our forbears won in trial and tribulation.

Our main hope must be founded on the fact that the underlying impulse for the betterment and enlargement of human life is a noble and vitalizing one, and we can only pray that our intelligence will prove sufficient to prevent it from defeating itself and to direct it wisely in the path of real progress.

A COVENANT CONUNDRUM.

One of the important questions arising under the league of nations covenant is what law shall govern under a mandate.

For example, the treasurer of the Australian commonwealth complains that Japan, having failed at Paris to establish its principle of nondiscrimination, is now apparently blocking the mandate to the Australian government for the Pacific islands because it holds that would carry the right to restrict immigration.

This raises the question we referred to. When a nation receives a mandate from the league, is it thereupon authorized to impose its own laws on the territory taken? There is provision that the mandatory shall account to the league from time to time, but this is not a very definite limitation. If a mandatory may impose its own laws and policies on a territory, the difference between the status of the latter and that of a possession would seem to be rather slight.

This is not a question solely between the nation receiving the mandate and the people taken over. It concerns third parties, as the attitude of Japan, objected to by the Australian official, discloses. A mandatory might and probably would discriminate against other nations in its own commercial and financial interests. Tariff and other laws existing in the country of the mandatory might be applied under the mandate, and we should thus find that under the guise of the mandatory clause of the covenant virtual annexation had taken place on an enormous scale.

A clarification of this point should be required while we are trying to find out what, as Mr. Lansing said, we are let in for under the treaty of Versailles.

REAL AND SHAM REFORMERS.

Real reforming is unpleasant, sometimes dangerous, fighting. It seldom produces any profit for the reformer. It seldom returns him anything that gratifies him. He may get more abuse than praise. His work makes interested, powerful enemies and indifferent friends. The enemies never hesitate to destroy him. The friends generally hesitate to help him.

Real reforming deals with the essentials of government as they affect community life. Sham reforming deals with the superficialities of life. It is easy work and pleasant to the reformer. It gratifies his sense of importance. It appeals to the populace. The publicity it offers is never dangerous and frequently profitable.

We used to have men who were willing to fight. We now have reformers who prefer to pose. Real vice is an ugly customer to tackle. The man who does tackle it may expect in his prospects anything from a brickbat to a framed case against his morals. He may be shot, or he may have a wanton woman with a borrowed child calling "Papa" sent after him. Vice fights back and it is dangerous.

It is safe to inveigh against short skirts, cigaret smoking women, bare legs on the stage, improper dances, prize fighting, prize fight films, beer drinking, one piece bathing suits, various amusements, etc. There is an audience ready to applaud. Newspapers are ready to publish. If a reformer says that humanity is going to the devil via the bathing beach, the dance hall, or the moving picture theater, the consequences of the attack are prominent, pleasant, and futile.

If a reformer attacks a politician or a successful criminal, the consequences may be startling. When a reformer digs down into the fundamentals he interests nobody but the vicious, but he interests the vicious exceedingly.

When a reformer attacks a book, a play, a movie, a piece of clothing, the use of cosmetics or nicotine, he is on safe ground. That may be why ninety-nine will be vociferous about superficialities where one will be in earnest about realities.

Reform is safe and inspiring when it deals with the lapse of a respectable person. If a man's weakness has involved him in trouble, superficial reform has a triumph. The man is helpless. His offense may have touched lightly the solidity of community welfare, but he is gone. If a man's strength in vice is ripping up community foundations, he is safe and reforming is dangerous.

The easier way is well lighted. It gets to nothing but print and flashlights. The other way is dangerous, but unless men will take it a community is badly off.

COAST TO COAST, AND VICE VERSA.

The seventy-three army trucks which made a test trip from Washington to the Pacific coast last year have brought back a load of valuable information and sound advice. The war department, summarizing its conclusions on that run, advises the highways committee of congress that the problem of road construction is a national rather than a state issue.

In the matter of trunk highways, that conclusion certainly is well founded. And in the long run the matter of trunk highways is basic. Motor cars have done more to wipe out state lines than any other single influence. We motor from Maine to California and from Illinois to Florida. But on either journey we hit innumerable detours and stretches of hard going. A main highway of one state fails to connect with the main highway of another. Traffic is impeded and the road is long and tortuous.

With a comprehensive system of national highways such a situation would be remedied. We could take without detours the shortest route from coast to coast, from lakes to gulf, through state after state.

Such a system would open up and develop sparsely settled regions. It would improve our opportunities for trade and travel. Not least, it would give an invaluable supplementary transportation system when railroads are overcongested or rates overhigh. It need not halt the building of state roads. They should go on, furnishing feeders to the main lines, as do railroad spurs and branches.

The war department has seen the light after one experiment. We hope it is able to show the congressional committee the same light.

Editorial of the Day

ANOTHER SIGN OF PROGRESS.

[Decatur Herald.]

To such an extent has rural sentiment on good roads changed in the last few years that the constitutional convention adopts a section providing for what amounts to the building of roads by special assessment. Assessing landowners for the cost of improving roads would have been about as popular in 1918 as assessing them for providing Hessian fly incubators and chinch bug propagation plants.

Under the sections adopted supervisors may assess all property in the county not more than 75 cents on the $100 valuation for building roads, or roads may be built on the petition of a majority of the property owners in a certain district and the cost divided among those who will benefit.

A fight against both propositions is likely to be made by the mud roads "last ditchers" when the constitution comes up for adoption. Former Gov. Fifer, who opposed the bond issue and whose ideas on roads remain practically the same as when he held office in the middle '80s, opposed the road sections in the convention. But just as the hard surfaced county roads in Vermilion county stimulated road building in the several townships, so the people are certain to demand an arterial system of improved roads connecting with the state roads soon to be built. Had construction of these roads been started on a large scale the constitutional provisions would be certain to fare better at the hands of the people next November. It is not certain, however, that they will be lost. The world moves.

The Mat-toonerville Trolley.

[From the Mattoon Journal-Gazette.]

A broken rope tied up traffic at the corner of Broadway and Sixteenth street for a few minutes this morning. The trolley on one of the city cars, east bound, came off. When Conductor Hill attempted to put it back, the rope broke. The interurban car for Charleston was held up. In an attempt to get out of the way of that car the other trolley was put on and an attempt made to move the car the other way. This only resulted in getting the wild trolley tangled in the wires. Before the car could be moved Hill had to get up on top of his car and pull down the trolley.

One drop whereof in prudence spent
Perfumes a sultan's bath,
Not spikenard for the royal beard

Not that blue breath of pungent haze,
That swims above the swimming spires,
When balm of Gilead branches burn
In autumn's leafy fires,
So makes my twanging senses sing
Like graduated wires.

I know the dulcet scents that rise,
When on a drowsy summer noon
The wild grape blossoms swoon.
I know how sweet are apple boughs
That wanton with the moon.

The generous musk of wine I know
That long in cobwebbed dark has lain—
The aromatic milk-weed pod
That spills its snowy skein,
The smell of good new magazines,
And ploughshares after rain.

FLEEING GOITER.

ONE of the revelations of the draft was the difference in the prevalence of goiter in the different sections of the United States. The text books on medicine all speak of "the regions where goiter is prevalent." Some go farther and name Switzerland, Italy, France, Great Britain, Spain and Sweden as the countries where goiter abounds. Especially do they refer to certain cantons in Switzerland where goiter and the related conditions—myxœdema and cretinism—seem to be almost universal.

There has been a tendency to think none of this applied to us. The draft showed us that Washington, D. C., the Pacific northwest and the states bordering the great lakes were our great goiter belts and that the south and southwest were almost free from the disease. If this information started a tide of health seekers to the favored regions I have not heard of it. Many thousand people annually pull up from their families and homes and move to the dry sunshine country of the southwest in order to get over consumption or to live indefinitely in spite of the disease. Perhaps some day people with goiter will migrate in the same way.

But the information as to the distribution of goiter now available is very scanty. Perhaps the tides of migration will start up when other reports have established the relative freedom of certain sections at least more firmly than they now are, and when the information becomes general. It may not come until the public understands which forms of goiter are very disabling, which tend to destroy life and which need not be given much thought. Perhaps by that time we may know so much about the disease that the migration-cure and migration-preventive may never come into vogue.

As an aid towards that end we have a study of the distribution of goiter in West Virginia by Mayo Tolman. In 1918 60 per cent of the physicians of that state responded to a request from the state board of health that they report their cases of goiter. The report showed that the prevalence of the disease was very uneven. It was most abundant along the streams. The sections underlaid by coal strata had most of it. Those underlaid by limestone had very little.

He suggests as a line of investigation by scientists that the vapors arising from waters and the fogs from the ground in what may be termed goiter regions be examined spectroscopically. Examinations of the soil in different sections of the country have shown that in places some radium is emanated. Tolman's thought is that in these goiter regions the spectroscope might show some calcative chemical in the vapors. It has been proven that very small amounts of iodine in air vapors may prevent the disease. If this is true we see in it some foundation for the hope expressed by Tolman.

CARBONIC ACID SNOW.

W. J. B. writes: "Please advise through the columns of THE TRIBUNE what is carbonic acid snow, and how to apply the same and where to secure the same. I assume it is the same thing as the crystals."

REPLY.

Carbonic acid snow is solidified carbonic acid. Your druggist can get it for you. Have your physician apply it. Do not try to use it otherwise. I wonder if you have carbolic acid crystals in mind in your last question.

EYE WASHES.

M. L. W. writes: "Several years ago my aunt gave me a formula for an eye wash she has sued for years. She said it is a simple home remedy for tired eyes and it was the regular use of this wash which kept her from wearing glasses. I feel that I need this wash again, and as I have forgotten just exactly what it is, turn to you for help. I believe it was, to one quart of boiled water add two teaspoonfuls of camphor and two or three teaspoonfuls of borax."

REPLY.

Most eyewashes are solutions of borax in water: There is no objection to the borax. It would be all right to use a quart mixture containing two teaspoonfuls of camphor water. Were you to use two teaspoonfuls of spirits of camphor the mixture would be too irritating for most people. Such a mixture would contain twelve grains of gum camphor to the quart, whereas camphor water undiluted only contains eight. In all probability the mixture would not be clear. Do not understand this as being an indorsement of eyewashes for tired eyes. The tears are the best eyewash. For fatigue wash the face in cold or hot water. However, eyewashes are harmless.

NATURAL BREATHING.

B. H. writes: "I have been told my lungs do not expand enough when a full breath is taken and that deep breathing exercises twice a day will help. What does that signify and will the exercise help?"

REPLY.

Deep breathing for the purpose for which it is generally practiced represents the nth degree of doing nothing. The need of the tissues for air determines the rapidity and depth of breathing. Nothing a man can consciously do in the breathing line will interfere for long with the operation of that law. If you breathe deeply while you are thinking about it you will take in too much air. As soon as you forget you will breathe most superficially until the average is established. Whereupon you will go back to your schedule before you breathed deeply. A man cannot monkey with his breathing works. An all wise Providence has made the breathing machinery foolproof.

HOMESTEAD LANDS.

Chicago, June 2.—Friend of the Soldier.]—I see where you have a man at the office answering Oregon homestead land questions. I am an ex-service man and would like to take up a claim. I think, however, I don't know much about it. Is the land rough, rolling or level? What kind of soil is it? What is it good for? What is the maximum amount one person can take up? Can one file by letter?

Your letter has been referred to Mr. Collier and he gives the following information:

Most of the land is timber and brush land. They are hilly and suitable for grazing; small tracts may be found suitable for general farming and fruit raising. It is also good for forage crops.

The maximum amount allowed one person is 160 acres.

Filing on the claims cannot be done by letter or through an agent. The land must be seen by the prospective claimant and a personal filing made before a government officer.

Mr. Collier will be here until the middle of this week and will be glad to see you personally and give you more detailed information if you will call at the office.

WALLET WITH SERVICE RECORD LOST.

John Franklin MacDonald, seaman second class of the U. S. N. R. F., lost his billfold containing his service record, together with some currency, credit slips, and a dog tag last Saturday night. The loss was either at the hall at Van Buren and Ashland street or on a street car. Will the finder please return them to his new address, 901 North Kedvale avenue, or phone Albany 8286? The address shown in the fold was 3459 North Kilpatrick avenue.

MONTANA'S STATUS.

Chicago, May 31.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—I was living in Montana when I enlisted in the navy. I have not heard if that state is giving a bonus to its men. Would they notify me, do you think? What is that state doing for its men, anyway? F. E. M.

The state of Montana has not passed any bill granting a bonus to its war veterans, but the state has made an appropriation of $225,000 to assist in taking care of soldiers who may return unable to earn their own living.

The state legislature also has passed an enactment to grant its men certain land, but before such could be appropriated enactments will have first to be passed by the federal congress.

HOMESTEAD LAND INFORMATION.

Each day the number of men inquiring about the Oregon homestead lands increases. Mr. Collier, who has volunteered to meet any ex-service men who are interested in the proposition, will be in this office until the middle of this week, when he will return to his claim in Oregon. Those interested should call on him without delay, as he can give definite information on the Oregon lands as well as answering inquiries about the general procedure necessary for an ex-service man to take up a claim.

Ask to see Mr. A. D. Collier, Homestead Land Information.

SPECIAL RELEASE.

Chicago, June 2.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—On Oct. 27, 1917, a soldier was discharged from Camp Grant and instead of a regular discharge paper he received a document headed "Special Order 54." Can he receive his bonus of $60 on this paper? What steps must be take to have this order converted into a regular discharge? Where shall he write for the bonus? J. K.

You do not state in your letter the provisions of the order releasing the man, nor from what source the order came. Unless we know this we could not properly advise you. We do not believe, however, that the man is entitled to a regular discharge or he would have been given one. It is very probable that he is entitled to a bonus, if he served in camp and the service was honorable. He should take his papers to the bonus section, 120 West Adams street, Chicago, and apply for the bonus if they decide at that bureau that he is entitled to it.

No attention will be given to anonymous letters. To insure a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

DRESSING THE PART

[From Punch, London (Copyright).]

Partner: "Yus, it is a nice 'at; but, mind you, it ain't got the bread winnin' qualities of the old 'un."

FRIEND OF THE PEOPLE

LOOK OUT BELOW.

Chicago, June 3.—[To the Friend of the People.]—I reside at and am buying property (a cottage) located on 60th street. An erratic Russian family consisting of father, mother, and six children, ranging from about two to fifteen years in ages, live on adjoining property. They possess a flock consisting of chickens, ducks, and squawking geese, sheltered in a rather filthy shed and usually allowed to roam at large during the day.

My side entrance is on the east side or between the two houses, while they have about one foot of ground outside of their building line, and once or twice each week this woman persists in shaking her rugs and strips of carpets out of the second story side windows directly over my entrance and three side dining room windows, also at times when we have our year old baby sleeping in the baby carriage on our front porch she will bring old pieces of carpets out and shake them over her front porch bannister towards our porch.

T. A. W.

On May 26, 1920, an investigation was made by an inspector from this department, as a result of which a notice was served on the 28th ult. to owner to discontinue nuisance of dust caused by shaking, sweeping, or exposing rugs on rear porch, fence, or premises. JOHN DILL ROBERTSON, Commissioner of Health.

A TEN FOOT STACK.

Chicago, June 2.—[To the Friend of the People.]—We live in the third apartment and just north of us is a two flat building whose chimney is even with our windows. We are awakened each morning choking with the smoke which pours into our window. Cannot something be done about this? J. F.

An investigation was made by an inspector from this department, as a result of which a notice was served on the 1st inst. to owner to abate nuisance of smoke from low chimney on building to south adjoining building. JOHN DILL ROBERTSON, Commissioner of Health.

US AMERICANS.

Chicago, June 3.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Is a man born in this country whose father is a foreigner, not a citizen, considered a citizen in this country? J. A.

Yes.

NOT CERTAIN.

Chicago, June 3.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I had a lease of $45 per month to May 1, 1920. The landlord gave written notice Feb. 21 that rent would be increased to $60 beginning May 1, 1920. If we wished to remain at that price to let him know by March 1, which we agreed to and requested another lease. On May 1 the landlord presents a new proprietor, who asks for the rent, which I paid and received a receipt for $60 written by the former landlord and signed by the new owner. Then he said you can have the flat for $75 after this month. Does not the notice of Feb. 21 by and with the former landlord for rental at $60, and also the acceptance of the May rent by new landlord, hold good? Or, in other words, is not my lease automatically renewed by law?

G. I.

We incline to the opinion that these facts would involve a renewal by implication, although the law is not entirely clear on the point. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

HERS TO KEEP.

Chicago, June 3.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Can the ex-husband of a woman who divorced him last year restrain her from using his name as her own. That is, she calls herself Mrs. John Jones. Can he force her to use her malden name or one different from his own? J. E. M.

No. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

NO LICENSE TO DANCE.

Chicago, June 3.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Will you kindly advise me in your column whether or not a permit or license is required to run dancing receptions? If so, could you tell me the cost of the same, and where the same can be had? B. H.

No license for private dance.

THE DANGER OF A POLITICAL "CINCH."

East Orange, N. J., June 1.—[Editor of the Tribune.]—There is no risk so great as a "cinch." No one can predict what the next few months will bring forth. The gentlemen who have already, in imagination, inaugurated a Republican president may be reckoning without their host. They may be as cock-certain as the kaiser and as fatuous. The only safe way is to lock fast the doors against every chance. The officers and passengers of the Titanic were joyously celebrating her fast sailing qualities and her forthcoming safe arrival in New York when a hidden iceberg sent her to the bottom.

Roosevelt, in the opinion of many, was wrongfully deprived of the nomination in 1912, with the result that the Republican nominee carried two states out of forty-eight. In 1916, with insistent demands for Roosevelt's nomination, it was refused. Again was the Republican party defeated—and defeated, in the opinion of those familiar with Western sentiment, for the reason that while Roosevelt loyally supported the ticket, thousands of his followers refused to forgive the determination of "those influential American circles" who, as Count von Bernstorff wrote to his government in March, 1916, "would not countenance wild Theodore."

With the Roosevelt traditions more firmly rooted in the popular mind than ever, the same influences are silently working against the men and the things Roosevelt stood for. They are repeating their Belshazzar's feast.

With the advent of women in politics, political results, more than ever, are based on psychological forces rather than on party lines or political bosses.

The west was formerly the reliance and mainstay of the Republican party. It is so no longer, largely because of its attitude, or the attitude of its leaders, toward Roosevelt and his policies.

If the Republican party is to win the next election it must look to the west. The east is safe, as it was in 1916. Let us watch the west, and let us watch our steps. The Democratic convention in July will be guided largely by the chance mistakes of the Republican convention in June. ANXIOUS.

SAVE PAPER AND SAVE MAIL CARRIERS.

Chicago, June 1.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—With reference to the shortage of white paper and the heavy burden laid on mail carriers may I call your attention to the large number of club and association publications which are printed and distributed by the mail carriers to various members and employés of various firms.

For instance, on my desk this morning were six copies of one bulletin addressed to various employés and members of the firm, as well as several copies of another. I have written both these organizations that one copy is enough to send here, calling attention to the great waste of labor and material in the indiscriminate use of mailing lists of these various clubs and associations.

I believe a canvass would show a great deal of labor and material could be saved by firms and individuals by exercising greater care with the mailing list.

JOHN A. CARROLL.

WHAT POLITICS DRIVES ONE TO.

State Hospital, Oregon, May 30.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I do not want to interfere with political affairs from here, but the presidency is something that concerns me more or less. Hence I would at least express an opinion. As for the most conspicuous candidates, I would not waste a postage stamp on them. I don't want Hoover, I don't want Johnson, I don't want Wood, I don't want Lowden, and I don't expect much of Harding and Palmer. In fact, there are a hundred thousand men in the United States who are fit to be president, but these are extraordinary times and the office requires an unusual tenant. The only candidate whom I would advocate this year is myself. Not that I am ambitious of the presidency. Not at all.

I have scarcely one chance in a million of being favorably considered by the convention. The nomination is the hardest part of the program, but if nominated I would certainly be elected, and, being elected, would certainly make good. You can depend on that. I have now stated my case. Take it or leave it, but if you don't I have the satisfaction of knowing that you ought to. H. HOWARD.

THE POSTAL CLERK'S FAMILY.

Chicago, June 1.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—My husband is a postoffice clerk. With an increase of $150 a year and fifty-two weeks to the year, the congressional committee's recommendation means an increase of a little less than $3 a week. How attractive will that make work in the postoffice?

My husband has been in the service ten years, and still works nights. He is so worn out that he has to take one or two days off each month (without pay) to rest up. He is 36 years old, but looks ten years older, because of overtime nights work and the vile, insanitary conditions in the Chicago postoffice, called by the workers the "government sweatshop." His salary is $1,650 a year, or, if you figure it out by the week, $31.56 2-3. We have three children who go to school, but none of us can go to church or Sunday school, because we have no decent clothes. What little we have has been donated by kind hearted friends whose husbands make wages. We haven't tasted butter for years.

POSTOFFICE CLERK'S WIFE.

SOMETHING TO LOOK FORWARD TO

Chicago, May 31.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—By the way, did you know that millions of Thompson songs are being printed in which the wonderful character and peculiar fitness of Hixsonese as a leader are to be bleated forth by sundry and divers quartets and choruses? A city alderman is supervising the printing. C. A. D.

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

Last week's best sellers in a leading Chicago book store were:

FICTION.

"The Rescue" [Doubleday-Page], by Joseph Conrad.
"This Side of Paradise" [Scribner], by F. Scott Fitzgerald.
"Woman Triumphant" [Dutton], by Blasco Ibanez.
"The Foolish Lovers" [Macmillan], by St. John Ervine.
"Invincible Minnie" [Doran], by Elizabeth Harding.
"Responsibility" [Doran], by John Agate.

NONFICTION.

"Bedouins" [Scribner], by James Huneker.
"The Casual Laborer and Other Essays" [Harcourt, Brace & Howe], by Carleton Parker.
"Modes and Morals" [Scribner], by Katherine Fullerton Gerould.

Last week's six best circulators at the public library were:

"This Side of Paradise," by F. Scott Fitzgerald.
"The Economic Consequences of the Peace," by John Maynard Keynes.
"White Shadows in the South Seas," by Frederick O'Brien.
"The Man of the Forest," by Zane Grey.
"Noa Noa," by Paul Gaugin.
"The Great Impersonation," by E. Phillips Oppenheim.

"THE THIRD WINDOW," by Anne Douglas Sedgwick (Mrs. de Selincourt), has already created a tempest of comment. While it was being printed in the Atlantic Monthly the fight for and against it was sharp, not to say bitter at times. But it was always a question of the right and wrong of the actions of the characters, never a question of the literary quality of the work. With a subject so delicate as to be almost the hardest to handle with skill these days—the permanence of a marriage after the death of the husband—Mrs. de Selincourt has created a literary masterpiece. It is a very slight plot, unsympathetic to the average reader, more an exposition of a psychopathic condition than of a normal devotion, at times almost satiric, and yet a book which deserves praise as a literary job well done. It is the first novel from her pen since Mrs. de Selincourt wrote "Tante," published in 1913, and it is a much bigger piece of work than that popular success, though it is in scope little more than a short story. As a fictionization of the strangling hold which the personal presence of the dead has taken on a part of the world since the war it is unequaled.

A biography of great interest to the older generation who adored Gladstone and who think that there has been no family life among the great since his death is Mary Gladstone Drew's life of her mother, "Mrs. Gladstone." In no way is it the conventional biography. It is a casual record of the traditions of her mother's girlhood and youth, a preservation of some of the letters which her mother wrote and other letters which were written to her by great men of her day, and finally a loving picture of the woman who did much to make of Gladstone the international hero that he became. It is exactly the sort of pleasant record that devotees of the Gladstone myth would love. It is not, however, in any way comparable to Lord Morley's life of Gladstone as a literary or biographical accomplishment. A delightful volume associated with Mrs. Drew is "Some Hawarden Letters" which came but in this country in 1918. It is a collection of letters written to her by Miss Mary Gladstone and as Mrs. Drew by all of the great men of the day. It preserves the lavender of days long past much more completely than Mrs. [illegible] does in her biography of her mother. And how long past those days seem now!

I should like to say a word about the popular heroine of the day. Couturiers and plain everyday country dressmakers who think that styles change with the whiff of a breeze which scatters a silken ruffle about an ankle and who have a notion that frocks are the only mutable creations in the world are suffering from a fond idea. There is no fashion so fleeting as the fashion of the popular heroine and hero. I have seen, in my brief reviewing career, as many fashions as there have been publishing seasons. The athletic girl held the scepter for a while. For one long period of time, about a year ago, she yielded to the woman who lived a dull and dowdy life with its consequent introspection and its one feeble flicker before it sputtered out forever. And just now the reigning monarch seems to be the girl just past her debbing, bored with life, men and her own thoughts, whose conversation would shock any one past 19 and whose actions are a combination of a courtesan by day and a nun by night. She is to be found in every popular monthly magazine, and at least one of her every number of the more entertaining of the weekly blatts. With which excellent observations we come face to face with "Mrs. Warren's Daughter." Sir Harry Johnston had the time of his life, so it seemed, in writing "The Gay Dombeys," the further history of the descendants of Dombey and Son (imagined by Sir Harry). But whatever chuckling joy he had in that performance was certainly nothing compared to the fun he must have had in writing "Mrs. Warren's Daughter." You remember Vivie Warren in "Mrs. Warren's Profession," the independent young woman who set herself to work with her friend Honoria Fraser in a modern business as a blessed surcease from her mother and her scatter brained lover. Sir Harry Johnston has picked up the thread of Vivie's life after she has become a sturdy member of the firm in 1898, an ardent scoffer against men and an eager yearner for the rights of women. And then he has let his imagination do the rest. Any hint about the "rest" would spoil one of the most completely amusing stories of a decade. You can be certain, however, that Vivie's conversation and actions will jolt you on every third page, that the middle two pages will be full of the most astounding pictures of real people of the last ten years. Sir Harry nonchalantly mixes three parts fact and one part fancy and the result is most intoxicating. As Harry Hanson so cleverly and aptly said, Vivie could always be counted on not to cry and not to faint, but the reader can't. It's a daring, jolly piece of work, as delightfully the last word in literary fashions as "The Gay Dombeys" was delightfully mid-Victorian.

"Why Men Strike" is, according to Samuel Crowther, a question easily answered. They strike not for more wages or shorter hours but against capital, against a state of society which they believe to be unfair. If by the proper application of thrift every one may become a capitalist, the dreaded war between capital and labor will be averted. The book is largely an explanation of what Mr. Crowther believes real thrift to be. Mr. Crowther's "Common Sense and Labor" has been out about two months and has found its way into the hands of progressive employers.

"Joan of the Island," by Ralph Henry Barbour and H. P. Holt, is another tale of the south seas—such a lot of 'em there are these days! This is a pleasantly thrilling but not nerve wrecking tale of pearl fishing and love.

"The Real Diary of the Worst Farmer" is something of a companion volume to Henry A. Shute's famous "The Real Diary of a Real Boy." It has the same amusing charm, as it celebrates the experiences of a business man who is sure of making a success of farming because it is so "natural."

The two best selling books in England during February—statistics just reaching this country—were "The House of Baltazar," by William J. Locke, and G. K. Chesterton's "The Superstition of Divorce." They are both published in this country by John Lane.

Elliott McDonnell in his "The Menace of Spiritualism" [Stokes] says that too much social intercourse with the dear departed is sure to lead to insanity, if indulged in too freely. He also says that the devotees of spiritualism are "almost uniformly people of the same type—with pale, restless eyes and ill balanced faces." I'm not championing his theories, merely quoting them. Some one might send him one of those pictures of Sir Oliver Lodge, who has a face as weak and ill balanced as a Michaelangelo Zeus.

Richard Washburn Child, one of the best known of our popular mystery writers, has donned his gum shoes again and solved the mystery of "The Vanishing Men" [Dutton]. After the unaccountable disappearance of three suitors, the heroine believes that she is "hanted" by avenging fate. The hero clears everything up.

"Affinities and Other Stories" [Doran] is a collection of Mary Roberts Rinehart's pleasant short stories of expensive communities. Mrs. Rinehart surely does a light story with deftness. Her popularity with flappers—of all ages—isn't her only claim to fame. She is one of the best craftsmen in the literary business. That she chooses to build country clubs instead of cathedrals is probably the result of the fact that she knows she makes very charming country clubs, with all the modern improvements, including the latest sports styles from Paris and the last word in tinkling tonics, and she suspects that her cathedrals might be a bit drafty. She belongs to the crafts section of the arts and crafts of letters. In her own field she hasn't any rivals.

"French Literature in the Great War" [Appleton] is a thorough, scholarly, and accurate study of the subject, exhaustive in some instances and comprehensive in all. It is an extremely useful reference book for any one interested in the literature which the war produced in France. Albert Schinz, the author, is professor of French literature at Smith college. His judgments are conservative and not too personal. The book lacks somehow the leavening power of a great pen. Instead of being criticism worth reading for its own sake—as the work of the best critics always is—it is worth reading for the sake of the information which it imparts. That is a very useful task for a book to perform and one which, in this case, cannot be given too much gratitude. But what a book it might have been if it had been written by one of the impressionist-cynists of the young French school!

In the first chapter of "Tarzan the Untamed," the new Edgar Rice Burroughs book, a woman and her faithful servitors are cruelly and foully murdered, an estate is left in ashes. Tarzan shuffles off his civilized clothes and becomes again a half beast, has a wearing but successful fight with a panther, and goes to sleep in a terrible thunderstorm. In the second chapter he finds the man who murdered his wife, steals him from the very eyes of his followers, throws him into a gulch to be devoured by a man eating lion, raises his face to the sun and shouts "the savage victory cry of the bull ape." And there I stopped. I can stand just so much murder and gore and pillage, and more than that is gilding the lily. But those who like literary tartar sandwiches will join the queues outside the bookshops demanding in vehement tones, "We want more."

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

TO SLEEP.
By William Wordsworth.

A flock of sheep that leisurely pass by
  One after one; the sound of rain, and bees
  Murmuring; the fall of rivers, winds and seas,
Smooth fields, white sheets of water, and pure sky;

I've thought of all by turns, and still I lie
  Sleepless; and soon the small birds' melodies
  Must hear, first utter'd from my orchard trees,
And the first cuckoo's melancholy cry.

Even thus last night and two nights more I lay,
  And could not win thee, Sleep, by any stealth;
So do not let me wear tonight away;
  Without thee what is all the morning's wealth?
Come, blessed barrier between day and day,
  Dear mother of fresh thoughts and joyous health!

U. S. SHIPS WILL TRADE OVER OLD GERMAN ROUTES

Harriman Interests Put Old Glory Back on Seas.

New York, June 5.—Former trade routes of the Hamburg-American lines, closed in 1914 by the outbreak of war, are to be reopened with American flag tonnage, supplied by the Harriman interests, it was announced today at the office of W. A. Harriman & Co., Incorporated.

Decision to take over these routes followed negotiations with several representatives of the German company, who have been in the United States for a number of weeks, "at the request and suggestion of several members of the United States shipping board," according to representatives of Harriman & Co.

Harriman Succeeds Goethals.

Coupled with this announcement came a second to the effect that Harriman & Co. had acquired, through purchase, a substantial block of the American Ship and Commerce corporation, which for more than a year has been operating a freight service between New York and Hamburg, and utilizing the Hamburg-American company in Hamburg as its agents. At a meeting of the directorate of the American Ship and Commerce company today, Maj. Gen. George W. Goethals was succeeded as president by W. A. Harriman. F. Pryor and Lester H. Monks, representing the Harriman interests, were chosen as directors.

All Fly U. S. Flag.

The agreement whereby American tonnage is to be supplied to reopen the former German service holds for twenty years

It also was announced by Harriman & Co. and by Chandler & Co., who organized the American Ship and Commerce Navigation company, that all ships owned by the affiliated interests "fly the American flag and are owned by American corporations, in which there is no German interest direct or indirect."

Prior to the war the Hamburg-American line operated fast passenger and freight services to New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Savannah, and New Orleans. There were also freight and passenger ships plying between Hamburg and points in the West Indies, Cuba, and Mexico. Trade routes were maintained to the west and east coast of Africa, Arabia, Persia, and as far east as Japan and China. Swift packet lines were maintained with Brazil and the rive Plate.

The American Ship and Commerce corporation, it was said, has at hand $12,000,000 for purchase of ships or for new construction.

GERMANY TO PAY NO FIXED SUM, IS LATEST PLAN

PARIS, June 5.—[By the Associated Press.]—Plans by which a fixed sum would be decided upon for Germany's payments in reparation to the allies will probably be abandoned, says the Echo de Paris, which asserts the supreme allied council will revert to the system of "extensible annuities" by which Germany may cancel her war debt.

This plan was discussed at the meeting of the supreme allied council at San Remo.

Postponement of the allied German conferences at Spa, which is scheduled for June 21, is probable, the newspaper declares.

Premier Millerand sent the Swiss government a note assuring it that the question of changing the seat of the league of nations from Geneva had not been raised.

John Bull's Being Sweet to Sam; Sends Him Sugar

LONDON, June 5.—[By the Associated Press.]—The London Times reports that large consignments of sugar are being shipped from Great Britain to the United States. Some of these shipments, it says, have recently arrived from the West Indies.

PUTTING WALL STREET IN ITS PROPER PLACE

BY PERCY HAMMOND.

The broker in the present market, it is said, is as friendless as the traditional fat man, and so, when Taylor Homles, as a bashful bull (at the Woods) steps upon him and relieves him of his loot, loud are the joyous outcries of a hurt populace.

One suspects that Wall street never got such a trimming as Mr. Samuel Shipman, author of "Tomorrow's Price," gives to it in that rough and relentless cartoon of bandit finance. To be nicked is bad enough, but to be nicked by a boob is terrible. Mr. Shipman is ruthless in his exposé of the weaknesses of the Wall street economists. He proves in "Tomorrow's Price" that all you have to do to beat the ticker is to have ideals, to be brave and upright, to be honest and faithful with your fellow man, and to be willing to pawn everything except the halo, so that in the end you may tell the bankers and the brokers where they get off. You have been following Andy Gump and his adventures with "Carp Caviar." Well, "Tomorrow's Price" is almost as real, and much funnier.

TAYLOR HOLMES.

Mr. Holmes, the star, represents a bland and virtuous maker of rubber tires for automobile wheels. Into the Eden of his laboratory creeps the broker, Mr. Felix Krembs, upon a shapely and reptilian belly. Mr. Krembs would capitalize the Stetson tire and sell the shares at avaricious prices upon the Broad street curb. Mr. Purnell Pratt, who is Mr. Holmes' mercenary partner and pal, convinces the dreamy and reluctant Holmes that Wall street is a more profitable thoroughfare for tires than Sheridan road; and, therefore, the astute promoter (with frock coat and silk hat) receives permission to put Stetson Tires on the Bourse; and the play begins.

Mr. Krembs (who acted the suave German spy in "Friendly Enemies") having put the stock up, now decides to put it down. Of course the pretty stenographer and the slangy and sophisticated office boy are involved; and so is Mr. Holmes' sweetheart, since her father has won and lost, as they saying is, three fortunes in La Salle street. Mr. Krembs is that mean sort of New York broker who would take as margin from the handsome Miss Helen Lackaye the diamonds which she had won in Sims-Petroleum and Infamous Players-Lasky.

Mr. Krembs and Mr. Holmes come to grips in the third act. As fast as Krembs sells, Holmes buys and Stetson Tires ebbs and flows agitatingly. have you got?" "Buy me a thousand "Stetson Tires at fifty-four," calls the curb broker. "Buy a thousand," responds Mr. Holmes. "Stetson Tires at fifty-six." "Get me 500," Mr. Holmes answers. Mr. Lorimer, who is Mr. Holmes' cold broker, in the crisis enters and says, "You are ruined unless you give me money." "Here are $100,000 Liberty bonds," shouts Mr. Holmes, reaching into an inside pocket. "Not enough," answers Lorimer; "what else have you got?" Buy me a thousand Stetson Tires at the market, and here is Felix Krembs' check for half a million!" "Give me still more," says Lorimer, the rapacious, and Mr. Holmes frisks himself of all the U. S. Gypsum, Advance-Rumely, Chile Copper, National Conduit, Bethlehem Steel, Union Carbide, Wrigley and Sears-Roebuck shares that he has in his so-called safety deposit vault.

Mr. Holmes, the noble mechanic of "Tomorrow's Price," takes Wall street by the nose, and in the end leads it to profit for himself and his friends. Mr. Krembs, the broker, is forced to return to his victims their earnings, paper and otherwise, which he does gracefully; and "Tomorrow's Price" ends with every one reasonably happy.

Mr. Holmes, the star, employs all the bizarre mannerisms that have made him what he is—and he beats, stammers, gasps, stutters, and grins as is his wont. Mr. Shipman has given him an awful speech or two—the Mayflower thing, for instance—and he has a heavy load to bear. Miss Ann Davis is rather recognizable as a nice girl, and there are others who do the best they can. The first audiences at the Woods were strong for it.

RESOLUTION ON ARMENIA FAILS TO PASS HOUSE

"A Warning to League," Says Porter.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., June 5.—[Special]—Republican leaders in the house today abandoned their plans to call up the Armenian mandate resolution.

Representative Porter of Pennsylvania, chairman of the house foreign affairs committee, said that efforts to have the resolution passed by the house were abandoned in the face of the Democratic threats to raise points of no quorum if any attempt was made to consider the resolution. The resolution is the same as passed by the senate, refusing to grant the president authority to take the Armenian mandate.

Both Branches Join.

"We owe the duty of impressing upon both the league of nations and the unfortunate people of Armenia that the two branches of congress join, by an overwhelming vote, in declining the mandate," Representative Porter said in a statement issued after adjournment.

Warning To League.

"Our action will warn the league of nations that we are not a party to the league, and do not intend to recognize or adopt any of its covenants and thereby place the United States in a position where it could be contended by the statesmen at San Remo that we had, by implication, ratified the treaty, and stopped the republic from denying that it is subject to the decrees of the council of the league of nations.

Furthermore, the action by both branches of congress will remove any doubt from the minds of the stricken people of Armenia as to the attitude of the United States on the mandate."

FARMERS ASK WILSON TO VETO SHIPPING BILL

Benjamin C. Marsh sent a telegram, on behalf of the all-American farmer-labor coöperative commission and the Farmers' National council, last night to President Wilson urging him to veto the shipping bill recently passed by congress.

The telegram stated that the bill would "turn over the people's ships at a small part of their cost to American and British trusts" which are "not regulated and can, by discriminating tariffs, prevent profitable exportation of American farm products."

SHANGHAI, June 5.—[By the Associated Press.]—At a meeting of prominent southern Chinese leaders, held here today, it was voted to issue a manifesto proclaiming the secession of the provinces of Yunnan, Kwiechow, Hunan, Shensi, Szechwan, and Hupeh from the Canton administration of the southern Chinese government.

The men who took this action were Wu Ting-Fang, former Chinese minister to the United States and a leader in the recent movement for unity between north and south China; Sun Yat-Sen, former provisional president of China; former, Premier Tang Shao-Yi, and Gen. Liah-Chun, who was outlawed for his part in the rebellion of 1913.

These four leaders comprise a majority of the administrative council of the southern government. The manifesto also proclaims invalid the acts of the Canton government.

FRENCH-TURKISH PEACE CRUSHES BRITISH HOPES

Exposes Suez Canal to Red Moslem Attack.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[By Special Cable.]

[Copyright: 1920: By the Tribune Company.]

PARIS, June 5.—Because Prime Minister Lloyd George insists on dealing with Krassin, Premier Millerand replies by recognizing Mustapha Kemal Pasha.

For the same reason that the British prime minister urges peace with the bolsheviki—because Great Britain cannot afford to send troops to fight them—the French premier states he is forced to make an armistice with the Turk Nationalists, because France cannot maintain an army of 40,000 troops in Cilicia and Syria, as they are needed elsewhere, on the Rhine, for example.

French to Retire.

Gen. Gouraud's armistice with Mustapha Kemal, which is a precede to French retirement to the littoral and withdrawal of more than half its forces from Asia Minor, is a bitter blow to the British, because it leaves the route toward Egypt wide open and permits the Turks to make a drive on the Suez canal.

That the Turk treaty of San Remo becomes a scrap of paper through recognition of Mustapha Kemal and that France will draft a new treaty is the belief of the foreign office.

Separate Peace Good for France.

"The Turks never will accept the loss of Smyrna and Thrace," said the foreign office official, "and France never supported Clemenceau's act in sending an army to Cilicia to watch over the British interests there. France will benefit greatly by making a separate peace with Turkey along lines with which the Turks will comply.

"Marshal Foch warned the supreme council it required an army of 300,000 to enforce the Turk treaty, and Mr. Lloyd George believed Venezelos when he offered 300,000 Greeks. But the Greek troops were solely for Thrace and Smyrna and not to protect British, French, and Armenian interests. The bolsheviki occupying Teheran and Mesopotamia, the arising Arabian foment, and the Egyptian troubles sound the death knell to the ambitions of the British in Asia Minor."

FOUND WITH SKULL BROKEN.

Antone Degrone, 52 years old, was found bleeding and unconscious on a bed in the rooming house at 1814 South Jefferson street. Degrone's skull had been fractured. The wounded man apparently had been the victim of a fight.

LLOYD GEORGE RAPS IRISHMEN IN RAIL STRIKE

"Carry Murderers, Won't Carry Soldiers."

LONDON, June 5.—The text of Premier Lloyd George's conversation with national union of railwaymen leaders on Thursday with regard to the refusal of Irish railwaymen to handle munitions, was made public this afternoon. It shows the premier characterized the move as "one calculated to influence political decisions, by bringing pressure to bear through the threat of disorganizing the industries of this country to effect changes which up to the present the electorate of this country has not sanctioned."

"That is a serious issue," the premier added, "I should regard it as a complete abdication of the government if I were in the least to countenance this demand."

Mr. Lloyd George declared there had been forty-eight murders of police and 120 attempted murders in Ireland within a short time. The police, he asserted, were shot down like vermin.

Defies Irish Rule.

"They were shot down in the streets while carrying out the elementary duty of any force of this kind—the preservation of order," he said. "We send a box of revolvers across to these men to defend their lives and the trade union comes in and says, 'If you do this we will stop the whole traffic of Ireland if necessary.' We cannot possibly accept any decree issued by any body, however powerful that body may be, which denies to the government the facilities it regards essential for carrying out the functions for which it has been chosen."

With reference to the trade unions' threat to tie up traffic, Mr. Lloyd George said:

"Murderers in Ireland with revolvers in their pockets are carried back and forth by the railways; I never heard of a strike being organized to stop them from passing to and fro.

Railroads Tied Up.

"Within the last few days," he went on, "there has been a refusal to work trains carrying troops in Ireland. This puts a very serious decision, not on the government, but on the trades union. So far as we are concerned, we have no option; we could not possibly agree to any action which would put it in the power of a section of the community to say: 'We will not carry government traffic.' That would be government abdication. We are here today and will be here tomorrow. A vast majority of the people who choose this parliament are working men, and if the working men of this country want a government of a different sort, they will not have to wait very long. The whole life of a parliament is only five years, and they can choose it."

60,000 Troops in Erin.

DUBLIN, June 5.—Although information regarding the number of troops in Ireland is refused by the authorities, careful estimates place the present number at more than 60,000, which is being increased daily. The troops came from all parts of England and latterly the government has evinced a desire to send seasoned men instead of raw recruits.

The strikers' committee today considered the message from James Henry Thomas, member of parliament for Derby and general secretary of the National Union of Railwaymen, advising the strikers to resume work pending a decision by the trades congress at Bristol on the refusal of the men to handle munitions.

Ready to Negotiate.

It was decided to inform the London and Northwestern railway company that the men are willing to enter into negotiations to resume work.

Application of martial law is said to be in contemplation. Extension of the "curfew" order throughout the government is considered probable.

It was officially announced today that a military patrol was fired upon last night at the police hut in Newtown Sandes, county Kerry. The military returned the fire and captured three men.

WOMAN LAKE VICTIM UNIDENTIFIED.

Scores of persons visited Roberts' undertaking rooms, 5449 East Sixtieth street, yesterday in vain efforts to identify the body of a well dressed elderly woman found in the lake off Jackson park Friday evening. The woman is about 55 years old, 5 feet 6 inches tall, had gray hair dyed auburn, three gold teeth in the upper jaw and two in the lower.

Members of the Service club were surprised yesterday by the news of the engagement of one of the most active workers of that organization, Miss Edna Dixon, daughter of the late Mrs. Arthur Dixon of 70 Scott street, to Paul Walker of Chicago, formerly of St. Louis. Formal announcement of the engagement has been postponed by the family owing to the recent death of Miss Dixon's mother.

Miss Dixon won considerable prominence last fall as the comedienne in the Spanish operetta, "Marcelle," given by the Service club at the Aryan Grotto temple.

It was planned to hold the ceremony outdoors in the grove on the Allison estate, but the rain prevented. Owing to illness in the bride's family, only a few relatives and friends were present.

Mr. Nelson is a Harvard man, class of '18, and served during the war as captain of the Fifth Pioneer infantry. His bride is a Wellesley graduate, class of '17.

After June 19 they will be "at home" to their friends at their new home, 332 Hyde Park avenue, Jamaica Plains.

Standish Hall Weds.

The marriage of Standish Hall of Lake Forest and Miss Helen Jane Brooks of Wichita, Kas., took place last evening in St. John's Episcopal church, Wichita. Following the ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. Percy T. Fenn, there was a reception and dance at the Wichita Country club.

The ushers were John C. Dawson Jr. and Cyrus McCormick of Chicago, and Willard Brooks. Harry Squires Hall attended his brother as best man. Miss Maroussa Russell of Chicago was one of the bridesmaids.

Mrs. Hall is a graduate of Bryn Mawr and of the University of Chicago.

RUTHENIAN AID GOES TO POLAND IN RUSSIAN DRIVE

Warsaw Forces Report Bolshevik Defeat.

COPENHAGEN, June 5.—The Ruthenians have decided to join the Poles in their military operations against the bolsheviki owing to the threat against Minsk, it was announced by the Ruthenian press bureau here today.

Polish troops on the northern part of the front took the offensive against the bolsheviki on Wednesday and drove eighteen miles into the bolshevik lines, according to the official army headquarters' statement issued today. The statement says:

Poles on Offensive.

"After holding predetermined positions for several days we took the offensive on Wednesday between the Dvina, Lake Narocz and Borisov. We broke the bolshevik resistance and reached and occupied the line of the river Ponja, Wilja, Sweerecz and Mardwa.

"Despite the difficult conditions our trooops advanced eighteen miles, although the enemy resisted determinedly, especially along the Dvina, where he held fortified, concreted positions.

"East of Daniliowica we defeated two brigades.

"At the Kiev bridgehead our troops reconnoitered and took some prisoners and machine guns.

"North of the Dniester our Ukrainian allies advanced along the Olszanka river line."

Poles Are Driving Reds.

WARSAW, June 5.—The Polish northern counter offensive is gaining momentum, the bolsheviki being driven eastward all along the line, according to a supplementaary commique given out by the war office late today.

On one sector, it says, the Poles advanced twenty kilometers in a day. The heaviest fighting is reported northwest of Borisov, where the bolsheviki are endeavoring to break the Polish Vilna defense.

Gen. Pilsudski witnessed the opening of the present offensive, which is designed principally to oust the bolsheviki from the territory gained since May 18.

Russ Reports Victory.

LONDON, June 5.—[By the Associated Press.]—The bolsheviki have inflicted severe losses on the Poles in an attack south of Bialatserkiev, fifty miles southwest of Kiev, according to an official statement issued by the Moscow government. Successes for the bolshevik arms are also reported at other points along the fighting front. The statement says:

"South of Bialatserkiev our cavalry is supporting the infantry in holding up the enemy's advance, severe losses being inflicted. Six hundred Poles have been cut down in a dashing attack.

Peace Move Under Way.

VLADIVOSTOK, June 5.—[By the Associated Press.]—Peace negotiations have been undertaken by the so called Far Eastern republic, the headquarters of which recently was established at Verkhne-Udinsk, with the Japanese.

LENINISM EATS HEART OUT OF BIG RUSS TOWNS

Poles Find 1914 Hives of Industry Silent.

In its advance to and beyond Kiev the Polish army entered a region where bolshevism has had full sway for a long time, with a fair opportunity to show what it is good for. Col. Reilly tells in this and following articles what bolshevism actually did.

BY COL. HENRY J. REILLY.

BERLIN, June 3.—[Delayed.]—The country taken by the Poles during their advance to and beyond Kiev was greatly interesting because it had been under bolshevik rule for a considerable time. It included Kiev, the third largest city of the former Russian empire, numerous sizeable towns similar to Zitomir and some rich Russian farming lands.

Kiev, being the center of railroad and river communications, also supported a number of industries, prominent among them being beet sugar. A great deal of the surrounding territory grows beets. The peasantry are Poles and Ukrainians. The people are Roman Catholics, orthodox Greek Catholics and Jews. Therefore the territory represents all economic and religious questions with which any Russian government must deal.

Results Tell Story.

If any government endeavors to rule for a considerable time within such territory, it cannot complain if its efficiency is judged by results. Provided a comparison is made with conditions at the end of the great war and not before.

The Russian front shows all the signs of desolation common to all fronts held for a long period. It differs from the western front only in fewer shell holes and in the fact that wood burnt readily therefore leaving no crumbling piles of masonry nor jagged remnants of buildings outlined against the sky marking where they once stood.

Once the trench lines finally are crossed at a point east of Rovno, the country almost was not touched by the war: the villages are intact and herds of cattle and cultivated fields are seen. Only the railroad stations generally are destroyed.

Few Herds and Farms.

However, closer examination shows many formerly cultivated fields now are untouched, cattle herds are few and small composed of a poor type, and the country people seen are miserably clothed. Around every station are filthy, ragged people.

The question then is, "Has bolshevism done away with the worst misery? Does its rule encourage people to work to better condition because under its government they see an inevitable bright future ahead?"

The first important town visited was Zitomir. It is a railway junction and the center of a rich farming country without large factories, slums, or tenements. There are plenty of working people, small industries, and numerous stores. It has a population of 90,000.

If bolshevism is workable an efficient establishment here seemingly would be simple. The buildings are undamaged.

The first and most noticeable thing along the streets is that a majority of the shop windows are boarded up or empty.

Business Now Dead.

The principal streets are lined with shops for a considerable distance on both sides, and the signs indicate it formerly was a very busy center. Now it is dead. I visited shop after shop of all kinds with practically always negative results.

Frequently, instead of the class of articles shown by the sign outside I found inside a small collection of various articles like clocks, kodaks, ornaments, furniture and other miscellaneous objects uneatable or unwearable.

The townspeople explain all these goods were looted by the bolsheviki and sold at small prices to merchants reduced to trading in anything to keep alive. Even for several days after the occupation by the Poles the Zitomir markets contained little vegetable food and practically no meat.

Meat is offered only in remnants, but immediately it is bought at high prices.

Peasants Sell Fine Wares.

Miscellaneous objects, including in one case a very fine glass table, were offered for sale by the peasants. The explanation is that these objects were traded to the peasants for food. Many peasants sell the food before reaching the market because the townspeople of all classes in a struggle to live meet them on the roads outside the town and endeavor to buy.

Due to various changes in Russian government plus the various occupations the Ukraine country now contains eleven different kinds of paper money. The suspicious peasants frequently refuse all, demanding the barter of desired objects; otherwise there is no sale. The different moneys bear no definite relation to each other and in the majority of cases really are valueless.

The nearest possible estimate is that one American dollar is equal to 20,000 bolshevik rubles. All the people are wretchedly clothed. Stockings are almost unknown and shoes are scarce. Bare legs and sandals are common, although the rest of the things worn show the owners always were accustomed to shoes and stockings.

The material misery is very saddening. The people are broken in spirits.

TEST OF LEAGUE SEEN IN PERSIAN PLEA TO BRITISH

LONDON, June 5.—The final real test of the league of nations as a practical working body will be made when the counsel meets in London on June 14 to deal with the case of Persia versus the bolsheviki. The greatest importance is attached to this case by supporters of the league, partly because the British press hold the recent British-Persian agreement amounts to a British protectorate, and Persia thus has a right to look to Great Britain to defend her from attack.

Otherwise the issue is a perfectly straightforward one. The league could not refuse to take it up if it wished. Prince Firouz Khan, the Persian foreign minister, made a formal appeal to the league, invoking article 11.

The result probably will be correspondence between the league and the bolsheviki.

WOMAN IN AUTO TRIES TO KIDNAP ANOTHER CHILD

No Trace of Lad of 2 Is Found by Police.

Although police and detectives had combed the neighborhood in which he lived there was no trace up to midnight last night of Ray Pallasch, 2 years old, who disappeared from in front of his home at 2058 Clifton avenue Friday noon.

Yesterday the search for the youngster, which had continued unremittingly through the night, widened. Scores of boys and girls, friends of the boy and his older sisters, were enlisted. Chief of Detectives James L. Mooney issued orders for special details to take up the quest, and park police were notified.

See Woman in Auto.

The only tangible clew lay in the story of Miss Lillian Maloney, 2107 Clifton avenue, who from her window saw a mysterious well dressed woman step from a black automobile driven by a gigantic Negro in livery, and accost the child. A few minutes later, when Miss Maloney looked again, car, woman, and child had vanished.

Every basement, alley, barn, vacant house or other hiding place where the baby could have wandered to, was visited. The father, John Pallasch, red eyed and weary, wandered from place to place, asking for news. And at the residence, the mother cried constantly.

One little 6 year old told of seeing a woman leading the baby west on Cen ter street. This neighborhood, also, was combed, with no result.

Attempt at Second Kidnaping.

Mrs. Paul Jansson of 1944 Leland avenue believes the woman who kidnaped the Pallasch boy tried also to kidnap her 10 year old daughter Lillian.

"The woman drove around the neighborhood in a blue limousine," she said. "She was accompanied by a stout woman and two men. The women asked my little girl if she didn't want a ride. Lillian said she didn't. One of the women gave her a quarter for candy. Lillian went into the candy shop, out the back way, and home.

"The women stood across from my home until 5 o'clock. They had no license number on the automobile."

Sleeps in Packing Box.

Little Elfrida Pflugart, 1900 North Mohawk street, who was reported to have vanished at the same time Friday, spent the night in a dry goods box a block from her home and was found by playmates early yesterday morning.

Springfield, Mass., June 5.—The marriage of the Rev. Dr. Philip S. Only Dr. Moxom's close friends knew of his intentions.

GEARY TRIAL SET FOR JULY 6; ASKS FOR DELAY IN VAIN

"Railroading" Plea Fails to Impress Judge.

Gene Geary's trial for the murder of Harry J. Reckas was set for July 6 yesterday by Chief Justice Crowe in the Criminal court.

At the same time Judge Kavanagh sentenced three men to the penitentiary as slayers. They had all been convicted during the recent cleanup of murder and manslaughter cases, some of which have been pending on the criminal dockets for years.

Geary whined of "railroading" tactics and adverse public opinion when he faced Judge Crowe and made a formal plea of not guilty. He seemed to feel hurt because "nobody liked him any more."

Thinks He's "Railroaded."

"No one is giving me any chance at all," he told the judge. "The newspapers are using me rotten and have got everybody down on me. It looks as though I'm being railroaded."

Geary was not represented by counsel. He claimed he had had no chance as yet to procure a lawyer.

Judge Crowe then set the hearing for next Saturday morning and assigned July 6 as the date of trial.

"Can't you set my trial for a little later period, judge? I haven't been given a fair chance," pleaded the defendant.

Asked how much time he figured he needed, he said at least a couple months.

Uncertain About Witnesses.

"Your witnesses are all in town, aren't they, Geary?" inquired the judge.

"I don't know. They might not be. Some of them might be out of town."

But this did not seem sufficient reason to Judge Crowe for further delay. Thirty days would be enough time, he said, but assured Geary that all his rights as a citizen would be protected.

Thereupon, still whining about the "rotten deal" he was getting, he was led across the "bridge of sighs" to the county jail.

Woman Slayer Sentenced.

The three men sentenced by Judge Kavanagh are:

Joseph Kasik, given from one year to life for slashing the throat of his wife last summer. Then he cut his own throat.

Leon Dubinsky, given twenty years for murdering Anna Kalaniewicz, with whom he was living. He induced her to take a capsule containing cyanide of potassium. She was in a delicate condition.

Abe Schwartz, former chauffeur, given from one year to life for hitting and killing Miss Cecelia Grabinski two years ago with his taxicab.

Hearing on a motion for a new trial for James Vinci, found guilty of complicity in the murder of "Moss" Enright, was continued until June 13.

SPUDS SET NEW PRICE MARK, THE SECOND IN 2 DAYS

New potatoes at an average price of $7.20 a bushel, $11 to $12 a hundredweight, yesterday set an American altitude record for the cost of spuds. One car of old potatoes sold at from $6.75 to $7 a bushel. The new potato price reached a record on Friday when the $11 mark first was reached.

The principal reason for the high prices, according to the federal bureau of markets, is that this is a period between arrivals from different markets. Shipments from Florida have ceased and those from Louisiana are growing lighter. But new stock from the Carolinas are due next week.

At yestherday's figures, retail grocers paid about 13 cents a pound for potatoes, which means 18 to 20 cents a pound to the consumer.

$1,338,329 TO CITY EXPERTS IN MAYOR'S TERM

That "experting" for the city of Chicago is a highly remunerative calling is indicated by a report to the city council finance committee giving $97,704 as the sum which the city has paid to building, real estate, and legal experts in the last five weeks.

These figures, which do not include the pay of attorneys employed in traction, telephone, and gas litigation, bring the total paid for "experting" since Mayor Thompson has been in office up to $1,338,329. Over 100 experts, most of them important cogs in the Thompson-Lundin machine, have "got in on" this sum.

Although $12,000 continues to be the average paid each of the hundred odd men, the big slices have gone to Frank J. Mesce, close friend of Fred Lundin, and to Austin J. Lynch.

Mesce has been paid $159,933 as a real estate expert during the five years and has received $97,376 since Jan. 1, 1920. Lynch is only about $1,600 behind him, having collected $158,376 in the five years, $97,327 of which has been since the first of this year.

Since April 27, the payments to the various types of experts and commissioners in connection with city improvements, have been as follows:

A. J. Lynch, $22,406; Frank Mesce, $22,588; E. C. Waller Jr., $12,118; E. H. Lyons, $12,118; J. J. Sullivan, $2,500; R. L. Campbell, $2,500; Roger Faherty, $2,400; W. H. Dillon, $2,350; A. S. Marigold, $12,118; H. J. McDonald, $1,000; J. Geiserowich, $1,005; H. E. Ayers, $2,450; Eugene Dupee, $1,050; W. B. Hoxie, $300, and J. J. Mann, $750.

Glendinning's Estate Is Valued at $2,444,266

Judge Henry Horner of the Probate court approved yesterday the inventory of the estate of the late Robert Glendinning, president of the Patent Vulcanite Roofing company, which scheduled the entire estate at $2,444,266. Mrs. Glendinning was allowed $49,000 a year pending the probating of the will.

FIVE TAKEN IN TRAIL OF $8,100 OF GIRL'S BONDS

Sleuth Sheridan Brusseaux of the Keystone National Detective agency, is a great whistler. His favorite tune is "It's a Long, Long Trail."

A month ago Miss Hetta Dedys, 5900 South Park avenue, while going through her small change, noticed the absence of $8,100 worth of bonds. Brusseaux notified all the banks in the city.

The Lincoln State bank phoned him yesterday. Harry B. West, colored, of the "Live and Let Live Drug Store," Thirtieth street and Cottage Grove avenue, had attempted to sell one of the bonds.

Sheridan pounced upon West.

"Where 'dya get 'em?"

"D-d-d-octor Harry A. Mapsey, 3457 South State street," gasped West.

West went to the cooler. So did Mapsey, after he named Bill Linton, colored editor. Linton followed. So did Edward Stewart, 3735 Vincennes avenue, the next on the list. The last was Alvin H. Malone, who owns a tailor shop at 4428 Prarie avenue.

"Yuh see, suh," he explained, "dem bonds fell outa an overcoat I was pressin' and I jes' plumb forgot to put 'em back." All five will tell their stories all over again to Judge Sheridan Fry Tuesday.

Meanwhile Brusseaux is on the trail of the other $3,100 worth of bonds, which he didn't recover. The rest of them, $5,000 worth, were locked up yesterday in the biggest safe in the biggest bank in the city.

"No more taking chances for mine," Miss Dedys said.

Girl, 17, Tries Suicide Second Time; May Die

Marian Smith, 17 years old, of 2676 North Halsted street tried to commit suicide yesterday. She tried it before—on New Year's day of 1919. At that time she said she had lost her job when a soldier returned from war. Now she is silent, though she has been told she stands small chance of recovery.

GIRL SEIZED AS CHECK PASSER; BLAMES 2 MEN

Miss Lucille Devoe, 19 years old, who has been cashing checks for a week, was arrested yesterday in a loop department store after she had tendered a $50 check for a silk shirt.

The checks she had given, it seems, were made out to Miss Helen Stowers, ostensibly by her brother Ralph, 809 Sheridan road. Miss Stowers was quite surprised the other day when she received a pair of shoes from a downtown store. She made inquiries and learned some one was using her name to swindle State street merchants.

Miss Devoe, whose mother runs a rooming house at 1314 Adams street, said she was helping two men to earn a living. One of them, she said, was Harry Young. The other she knew only as Jack.

Then sent her into the stores, she said, and gave her $2 for each check she cashed, together with whatever article she bought. The balance went to them. The silk shirt she was buying when arrested was for Young, she declared. She said Young told her Ralph Stowers was his cousin.

MAJ. DALRYMPLE STARTS NEW WAR IN MILWAUKEE

Claims U. S. Attorney Is Protecting Wets.

Friction between District Attorney H. A. Sawyer of Milwaukee, and Maj. J. V. Dalrymple over the advisability of issuing search warrants for the raiding of private homes brought forth declaration of war yesterday from the latter agent. The major said it is a fight to a finish before Attorney General Palmer.

Mr. Sawyer has opposed prohibition enforcement ever since we have been operating in Milwaukeee," the major stated. "Last week he refused to issue warrants in eleven cases where we had affidavits that stills were being operated in private homes. He has consistently refused to prosecute cases where the arrests were made by municipal authorities.

Makes Report to Washington.

"I have sent a letter explaining the entire situation to John F. Kramer, prohibition commissioner at Washington, and asked that the facts be presented to the attorney general. A lot of men think they can get away with this stuff but I am going to show them or if I have to go to Washington myself."

District Attorney Sawyer, when interviewed in Milwaukee, denied he had refused warrants when sufficient evidence under the laws had been presented to him. He said his office had refused to prosecute in some cases where the evidence had been illegally obtained.

Some Sawyer Rules.

Some of the rulings, which Attorney Sawyer is accused of arbitrarily setting up are:

It is not a violation of law to manufacture distilled spirits in the home unless it is proved that sales are made in the home.

It is not a violation to possess liquor or transport it on the person.

The government will not prosecute in cases where defendants were arrested by municipal authorities.

ALIMONY

Chicago Woman and Former Husband, Motion Picture Star, Whom She Has Sued for $38,444.

MRS. ARLINE BIEN.
ROBERT BIEN.
(Robert Warwick of film fame.)

WARWICK, FILM HERO, SUED FOR $38,000 ALIMONY

Daughter of F. W. Peck Files Bill.

A new complication has arisen in one of filmland's fractured romances.

Mrs. Arline Bien, daughter of Ferdinand W. Peck, wealthy Chicagoan, and divorced wife of Robert Taylor Bien, whom patrons of the movies know as Robert Warwick, the actor, sued him in the Circuit court here yesterday for $34,444 back alimony. She also asked for a writ of ne exeat to restrain Bien from leaving the state until the money has been paid. She alleges he earns $125,000 a year.

The couple were divorced on Oct. 29, 1909, and Mrs. Bien was awarded $3,000 a year alimony. She charges her ex-husband has paid only $1,500 to date.

She met and became engaged to Mr. Bien in Paris, where both were pursuing musical studies.

They were married in March, 1902, at the home of the bride's father here, the ceremony being one of the most impressive of the society year.

Five years later, to the day, Bien "wilfully deserted and absented himself" from his wife, according to her testimony at that time. Bien, who was the son of a wealthy California land owner, did not contest the case, the divorce being granted by default.

There is one child, Rosalind, now 16 years old.

Mr. Bien, when found at the Congress hotel, refused to comment on the matter. Wetten, Matthews & Pagler, attorneys for Mrs. Bien, likewise refused to talk. Mrs. Bien is at the summer home of her parents at Oconomowoc.

Seven Ransom Letters in Norristown Kidnaping

Norristown, Pa., June 5.—Seven letters demanding ransom ranging from $6,000 to $15,000 have been received by the parents of Blakely Coughlin, the baby victim of the mysterious Norristown kidnaping. At least one of these, in the opinion of the authorities, came from persons who have the baby in their possession.

Mr. and Mrs. George H. Coughlin, the parents, have announced that they were willing to pay any ransom within reason and guarantee the abductors immunity if little Blakely is returned to them unharmed. The parents have requested the police to cease running down clews while an effort is being made to negotiate for the return of the child.

Attorney's Son Sentenced to 2 Years' Term as Forger

A warrant charging Samuel Wallace, former Lake View high school student, with larceny was forwarded by Detective Sergeant Leonard Burch yesterday to Sing Sing prison, New York, to be served on the young man when he completes a two year forgery sentence just passed upon him in that state. Wallace is the 20 year old son of Mrs. George Mason Cook, wife of an attorney residing at 1419 Hollywood avenue.

About six months ago the boy pawned a purloined $600 ring for $385 with the Illinois Pawnbrokers' association, which obtained the warrant for his arrest.

Great Lakes' 95 per Cent 'Hootch' Blamed for Riots

Waukegan, Ill., June 5.—Discovery of Great Lakes authorities that bluejackets and marines had a large stock of 95 per cent Jamaica ginger, has led them to investigate the possibility that bootlegging was responsible to some extent for the recent riots. A full case of the ginger and many more empty bottles were found.

Washington, June 5.—Rear Admiral Albert Winterhalter, a member of the General Board, and former commander in chief of the Asiatic fleet, died suddenly at the naval hospital here today. Pneumonia caused death. His widow and a sister survive. He will be buried Monday in the Arlington national cemetery.

JOSEPH GROSS, inventor of a gas iron, died at his home, 5649 Michigan avenue, yesterday. He was 70 years old. Mr. Gross was born in Hungary, coming to America in 1864. He entered the Spencerian college at Milwaukee, and at the age of 22 decided to go into business for himself. He came to Chicago twenty-two years ago and founded the Gross Star Gas Iron company. Mr. Gross retired two years ago. He is survived by a widow and two children.

'Smiley' Corbett's Estate $285,000; Gains $125,000

The personal and real property of William "Smiley" Corbett, late restaurant owner and politician, has increased in value $125,000 since he made his will a year before his death, according to an inventory filed by Attorney yesterday. The inventory sets the yesterday. The inventory sets the value at $285,000; the will specifies about $160,000. Mrs. Corbett was granted $25,000 yesterday by Judge Henry Horner as widow's award.

Court Denies Increase in Alimony to Mrs. Sellers

Judge Jesse Holden, in the Circuit court, refused yesterday to grant an increase in temporary alimony asked by Mrs. Josephine Sellers, who is suing her husband, Bert Sellers, part owner of the Sellers-Brown Coffee company, for separate maintenance. Mrs. Sellers was recently haled into court after she had jumped on the runningboard of her husband's automobile, in which, she charges, two young women were riding with Mr. Sellers.

TEA

can become a rare and wonderful old friend—if you use the uniformly fine Savoy cup-quality

TEA may be merely a drink or it may be a thing which softens care with mild and bracing sympathy.

As the artist blends his pigments into marvelous hues, so the blending of Savoy tea is a craft—a science and an art.

Connoisseur, that he is, our expert goes over endless number of shipments from the tea producing countries of the world each year, and religiously selects a small parcel of leaf here and there, each for a definite character, that Savoy tea may have the body and color of oriental wine, a charming flavor and the bewitching fragrance of temple incense.

SO it is that Savoy tea always has those qualities which are causing tea to become, more and more, a man's drink.

And so it is that when you ask your grocer for Savoy Orange Pekoe tea or any other of the Savoy blends, you are certain of enjoying 300 to 400 satisfying and stimulating cups from the pound.

You can identify Savoy tea by the Savoy mark of quality on the quarter, half and full-pound packages on your grocer's shelf. If your grocer offers you Savoy, he knows you appreciate the best.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Ann Arbor, Mich., June 5.—[Special.]—In a great meet, featured by the smashing of one records, the equaling of marks in two others, and spirited competition in the remainder, Illinois, coached and trained to a high point of efficiency, today won the twentieth annual track and field games of the western conference on Ferry field with 40 points.

JACK SCHOLZ. [Missouri.]

So close was the meet that Illinois and Michigan were tied for honors when thirteen of the sixteen events had been decided, with 27 points each. Wisconsin threatened at all times, while the showing of California and Notre Dame did not come up to expectations.

Scholz Equals Furlong Mark.

Near of breaking the only record held H. Hoffman of Michigan, who hurled the javelin 172 feet 10 inches. This mark bettered his record made in yesterday's trials by one foot and three inches. Hoffman is practically new to the athletic world. He had never competed in intercollegiate athletics before.

CAPT. EMERY. [Illinois.]

Jack Scholz of Missouri, one of America's leading sprinters, carried off the individual honors with ten points. He won the 100 and 220 dashes and tied the conference record of :21 3-5 in the furlong. This record is held jointly by Archie Hahn of Michigan, D. T. Ward of Chicago, and C. B. Smith of Wisconsin.

Illinois topped its brilliant performances by winning the one mile relay by a yard from Michigan. The Illini quartet, composed of Donohue, Prescott, Polak, and Emery, footed the distance in 3:21 4-5, which tied the record and is only two-fifths of a second slower than the eastern intercollegiate mark.

Victor's Team Well Balanced.

Illinois' victory must be attributed to its all around balance. The team scored in eleven of the sixteen events and had men right up there fighting for points in the others. Spink's running in the half mile and Wharton's poor work of not letting out earlier in the two mile were the only faults to be found with Coach Harry Gill's squad.

EDDIE MEEHAN. [Notre Dame.]

One of the outstanding races was the quarter, mile in which Capt. Emery of Illinois raced Hendrixson of California off his feet. Bad blood had existed between the pair since they met in the final meet at Berkeley, Cal., in the spring. The race was started in the chute at the west end of the field.

Hendrixson Quits Race.

Hendrixson, who won the quarter mile in the eastern intercollegiate in the fast time of :48 2-5, went into the lead at the report of the pistol and had Emery down the back stretch. As the pair rounded the turn into the stretch, the Californian began to tire, while Emery came with a rush. As they neared the tape, Hendrixson faltered and dropped out of the contest twenty yards from the finish line. Emery stepped the distance in :48 4-5.

In the meantime Kasper of Notre Dame had found the racing too fast and dropped back. Through an oversight, the judges lost sight of Bretnall of Cornell college, who came with a rush. The Hawkeye finished second, but in some unaccountable manner the judges awarded second place to Kasper. Coach Finger of Cornell college made such a vigorous protest and had the support of coaches and other runners in the race that the place was given to the Iowa athlete.

Meehan Runs Great Half.

Another great race came in the half mile, which was won by Capt. Eddie Meehan of Notre Dame in the fast time of 1:34 1-5. Spink of Illinois drew the outside position and as the field raced down the backstretch, the Illinois runner held to the outside instead of cutting in to take the pole. In the meantime Meehan held the pole, and as the field turned into the drive for the tape, Meehan had plenty in reserve, while Spink was beaten out at the tape for second place by Sprott of California, who ran a splendid race.

The crowd was brought to its feet again in the two mile when Watson of

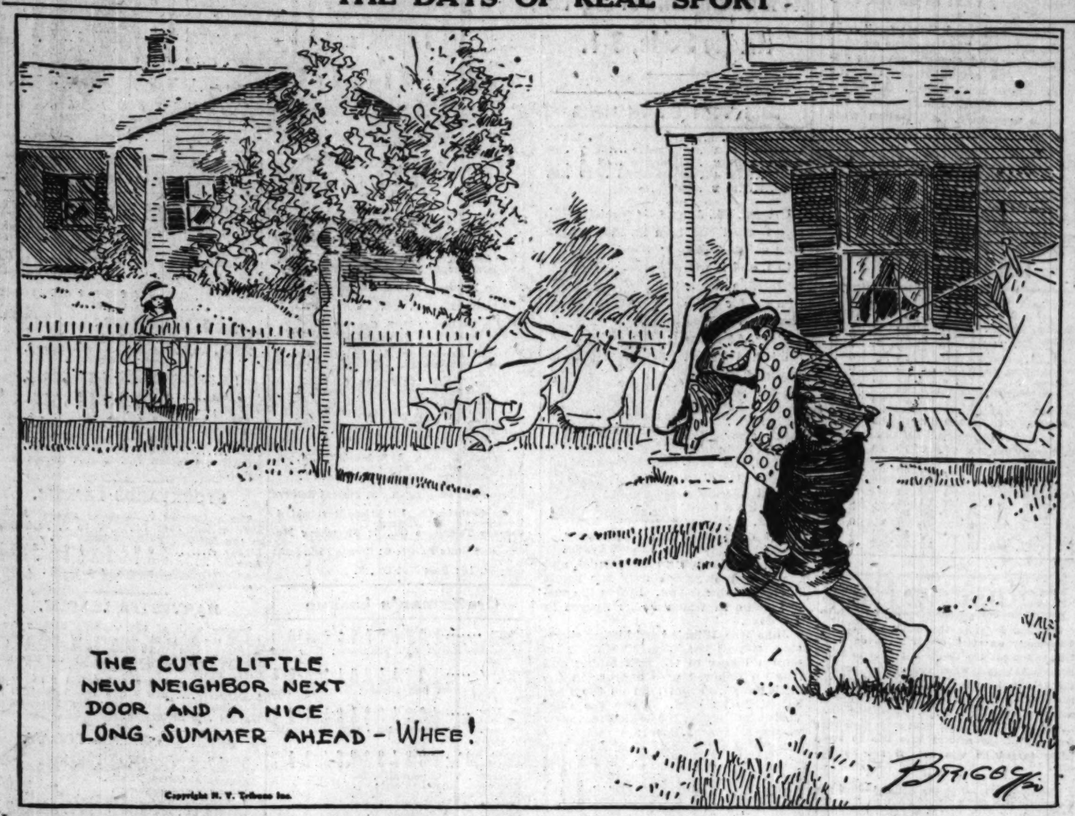
THE DAYS OF REAL SPORT



In the Wake of the News

THE PRESIDENTIAL DERBY.

THIS WAKE IS CONDUCTED BY HARVEY T. WOODRUFF. HELP! HELP!

BECAUSE of the possibility of added starters and because no one entrant stands out above his field, as does Man o' War in the equine convention, experts are somewhat at sea in picking the ante-post choice for the thirty-fourth renewal of the Presidential Derby trial stakes, to be run at the Coliseum oval this week.

Past performances also are more hazy than usual because candidates have not had adequate opportunity in recent years to work out over the presidential course, which has been occupied under temporary lease by a college tenant, who has used it for feats of endurance rather than strength.

For the benefit of its readers The Wake presents its best available dope:

Frank O., br. c., by Lowden-Breg (59)—Past performances all of stake class except one, which must be thrown out by followers of this column to give him a chance, as it was of selling plater variety. That was his veto of a boxing bill, passed by senate and house for the first time. In view of other efforts, this was probably due to an off day.

Frank O. is not quick away from the post and possibly a slow beginner, but possesses stamina and ought to finish well over the full presidential route of four years. Not heavy headed, and needs little guidance when once in his stride.

Has shown impressive speed at Illinois state and county fairs, and will be well supported by those who have seen him run. Generally regarded as a second choice by trainers of other starters. Equally at home on fast or muddy track.

*Candidate, not colt, in this sense.

General Wood, gr. c., by Wood-Hagar (59)—Past performances include brackets at Cuban and Philippine tracks, where he showed courage and an ability to go on. Was tried in Indian wars and originator of the Plattsburg training camp, which developed some good roadsters.

Good actor at the post and likely to get off in the lead. Whether he can maintain this early speed is a problem to his backers. He has suffered somewhat in his preparation by differences between his trainers, which may leave him just a trifle shy for such a gruelling finish. Other jockeys will try to challenge his lead before he gets too far in front of his field.

Hi Johnson, gr. c., by Johnson-De Montfeddy (53)—Fractious at the post and likely to kick up a fuss, delaying the start. Supposed to have a world of early speed, but under suspicion as to gameness under punishment. Sulked badly in California race in 1916 when under pressure.

Unless he can keep free of crowding on the turns he is more likely to suffer from interference than some of the other starters, as several other jockeys have it in for him. He is blamed for bumping them in the Senate mud handicap.

Hi Johnson will get a heavy play in the $2 mutuels, especially from bettors from the industrial centers and the far west. His test will come the latter part of the journey, where he runs danger of being pocketed.

Field—There is much excellent material for a dark horse, but many of their trials have been held on private courses. Herb Hoover is tractable and a good feeder, but has done much of his racing abroad. He is the better known among the outside chances and worth watching if the favorites meet mishap.

Gov. Coolidge, a Massachusetts entry, has shown tremendous speed over New England tracks. He outfooted the Boston policemen when the dicks went on strike by calling out the militia to guard the course. Temperament called ideal for such a contest.

Nick Butler, entered from New York. Would keep up the college sequence in Presidential Derby.

Phil Knox, a tried performer, who has had plenty of racing experience, but doubtful whether he has been worked enough for this race.

Senator Harding, an Ohio entry of considerable promise. He has been groomed by his stable to be ready for a strong finish if the favorites carry one another wide at the stretch turn. His jockey has been given orders to trail and come through on the rail if the opening offers.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

With the prospect of playing a post-season game against the champion high school team of New York City, Chicago's high school baseball teams, which still are in the race for the local championship, will start final games this week with more enthusiasm than ever has been shown by the preps in the national game. The winner will be the team to meet the Gotham boys and indications are there will be some terrific contests to determine the winner.

Austin in the west division, Englewood in the central, Lane in the north and Parker in the south are the schools to fight it out, but there are three others who still have a chance until protests are decided at a meeting of the board of appeals tomorrow afternoon. Hyde Park and Tilden both have filed protests against Englewood's victories, and Carter Harrison has protested one of the Austin games.

Probably Start Wednesday.

At the meeting tomorrow afternoon a schedule of final games is to be framed, and it is likely that the battles will begin about Wednesday. If the protested games do not complicate matters too much, the final and deciding combat will take place a week from tomorrow. Then, barring any delays from the New York end, the intercity contest would be played here at Cubs' park on Saturday, June 19. If the champions cannot be determined by that time, the game might not take place until the following week.

Because of the prospect of meeting the New Yorkers, the Chicago boys are working harder at the game than they ever have before. Long and hard practice sessions are taken every day. More attention to "inside baseball" is being given than at any time. The boys are eager and alert in all their work, and one of the coaches stated that he believed the scheme of an annual contest against New York would increase the efficiency of the high school boys 50 per cent. High school students all over the city have become excited over the prospective game, and indications are that a throng of them will attend the big feature at the north side park.

Financial Support Assured.

That the contest will be properly backed is no longer a matter of doubt. Until expenses for the game are assured, the New York boys are unable to accept the invitation. The plan to have twenty Chicago men and business firms act as underwriters for the expenses by pledging $100 each has made the thing assured. The estimated cost of bringing on the New York team is $2,000. Already $1,600 of the amount has been raised, sixteen having place their names on the list of underwriters It is more than likely that more than expenses will be taken in at the gate

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

Today's Question.

Who is the most valuable player on the White Sox team?

A. W. PIKE, 6113 Dorchester avenue, a photo-engraver—I think Schalk is. He is the hub of the team. He is in there every day, scrapping, cheering, hitting, and playing better baseball than any catcher in the league.

BRUCE McCORMICK, 936 Leland avenue, an agriculture expert—Seems to me Ed Collins is the best. He plays second better than any player ever known to baseball. He can wallop the ball any time he wants to. Yes, Ed Collins is the best.

CHARLES R. RILEY, Rochester, Minn., a railroad agent—Either Buck Weaver or Happy Felsch. Probably Weaver—have you noticed all the homers he has been knocking?

H. J. WAGAN, Winona, Minn., a railroad freight agent—Probably Gleason. Gleason runs the team, and while he never gets much of a hand from the crowd, he certainly is some general. After him comes Schalk.

MISS DODO LEHMAN, 817 North Larmie avenue, a high school girl—Ray Schalk, without a doubt. Perhaps you think because I'm a girl I don't know, eh? Well, I do. Ask Commy who his best player is. He'll say Schalk, and so will I.

BABE RUTH AS SWAT PROF TO JAP NINE

New York, June 5.—"Babe Ruth, official swat professor to the Japanese government."

Something like that is apt to be the full monicker of Babe during the coming winter.

The great Babe admits that he has an offer to go to Japan to teach the ball players there how to hit.

CUBS DROP GAME TO CARDS AFTER SIX TALLY LEAD

St. Louis Gets Eight Runs in Fifth Round.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

St. Louis, Mo., June 5.—[Special.]—With nothing that even remotely resembled a defense Chicago's crippled Cubs submitted to a farcical defeat today, 11 to 6, after having whaled a pair of Cardinal pitchers for six runs in the very first inning.

BRANCH RICKEY.

Having compiled that long lead the Mitchells apparents forgot they had not Alexander or Vaughn on the slab and shut up shop until they had to shed off the advantage in a serio-comic fifth inning. Thereafter, they tried to recoup with their sticks what they had lost by their bungles, but could not come back.

Haines was batted off the mound before anyone was out in the first half inning. Before Sherdel could subdue the Cubs they had slammed the ball for six hits which included a triple by Deal and a home run by O'Farrell.

Poor Support for Martin.

It was up to Speed Martin to cop with that lead in his favor, but Speed was ineffective and his support was imperfect. Not that a lot of errors were charged against the Cubs, but a half dozen hits which ordinarily they would have held were scored as base knocks. The Cards were allowed to grab a run in each of their first three rounds without much effort on their part.

Then came the fifth in which Martin was driven off the slab with nobody out and two Cards on bases. Bailey was sent to the rescue and managed to get one man out on an intentional bunt, but was yanked by Boss Mitchell after the Cards had made four runs and filled the bases. Hendrix rushed to Abe's rescue then and proved worse than either of his predecessors. Before he could get out of the hole, St. Louis had the game sewed up with a five run lead.

Carter and Gaw were asked to pitch one inning apiece in the seventh and eighth and got by safely.

Loses Cinch Triple Play.

In that awful fifth Hollocher muffed a line drive on which he had a cinch triple play if he had held the ball and it would have shut off all eight tallies. Later on in the same inning Hendrix missed a roller on which he could have made a double play that would have left the Cubs within striking distance at least.

How completely "lost" the Cubs were can be best judged by the fact Deal was caught trying to steal third base in the sixth, the Cubs being five runs behind, and Hollocher opened the ninth with a bunt.

NOTES

The Tigers again today. Cicotte will toil for Gleason.

Jack Collins had only five put outs at first base and one of them was on a pop foul.

The crowd numbered in the neighborhood of 10,000. With warm weather probably twice as many would have been present.

Cobb, who made two of the four Tiger hits, singled in the seventh with one gone. Veach followed with an easy bounder to Williams for a double play via the second to first route.

Ted Jourdan, who has been out for several days with a twisted ankle, is almost ready to resume play, but Jack Collins is going so well at first base that Gleason may hesitate about switching.

Notes

St. Louis, Mo., June 5.—[Special.]—One more game here tomorrow.

The Cubs made enough hits to win half a dozen games, but wasted a lot of them by headless work after the fifth inning.

An X-ray machine disclosed the fact that a small bone in Killifer's throwing hand is broken. His mitt was put in splints today and it will be at least ten days before they can come off.

A. M. Joyner, a pitcher from Palestine college in Texas, reported to Manager Mitchell today. If he even thinks he can pitch he may get a chance tomorrow after some of the near-pitchers on the staff get theirs.

Heathcote made four hits including a triple and double off Martin and Hendrix. The double came with the bases loaded in the fifth and was good for three runs. He tried to make three on it, but was thrown out at third.

BETTING BAN ON SARATOGA TRACK

Albany, N. Y., June 5.—[Special.]—The "quiet" form of racetrack betting which has been tolerated at the Saratoga Springs races, will not be permitted this year, according to Charles B. Andrus, district attorney of Saratoga county. Mr. Andrus is one of the Saratoga officials on whom Gov. Smith served notice that gambling houses in Saratoga must be closed. "I will close the racetrack up so tight that not a nickel will change hands," said Andrus.

Dr. Norman (Red) Paine to Coach Iowa Grid Team

Dr. Norman C. Paine, who as senior interne at the county hospital, led courageously in combating a recent series of anthrax cases there, is going back from medical work to his first love—football. Dr., or, rather, "Red" Paine, as he always was known with the University of Chicago football and baseball teams seven and eight years ago, has been engaged as football coach at Iowa State university, and will take charge at Ames next autumn. Maury Kent, formerly at Iowa university, then at Wisconsin, has been engaged as baseball coach at Ames.

Submarine Base Chosen for the Olympic Tryouts

New London, Conn., June 5.—[Special.]—The navy department at Washington has notified local officials that the submarine base here has been selected as the central station for the Olympic tryout preliminaries for the Atlantic seaboard.

WILLIAMS GIVES TIGERS 4 SWATS AS HOSE WIN, 4-1

Two Bingles in the Ninth Avert Shutout.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Mr. Claude Williams' wrong arm performed in most delightful fashion yesterday and enabled the White Sox to cop the second of the set from the Tigers, 4 to 1. Jennings' supposedly powerful swatters could accomplish nothing against Claude's wares, while on the other hand the champions had no trouble collecting enough tallies to insure victory.

TY COBB.

Howard Ehmke, who is long and loose and works with his right wing, was nominated to stop the south siders, and, although he stuck the route, he was beaten because of a few bumps along the way. He encountered several jolts in the second and third innings when the Sox counted three of their runs. The only other shakeup he suffered occurred in the seventh, when his foes harvested a tally they did not need.

Four Hits Off Williams.

The work of Williams was easily the feature of the occasion. By mixing up his chief stocks in trade he so completely fooled the hostiles that only four safe blows were registered against him. Two of these didn't happen along until the ninth, when the Tigers managed to escape the humiliation of a shutout, Bush singling and scoring when Cobb peeled off a two-bagger down the right field line.

The peculiar thing about Williams' pitching was that only four Tiger batters were retired on ground balls. The best thing they did was to lift tall ones that the infielders had no trouble taking care of. In the first three innings every batter—and only nine faced Williams during those periods—lifted the pill into space for a putout. The first gent who kept the ball on the ground was Cobb, who poked a puny bounder at Williams for the third out in the fourth inning.

Great Throw by Felsch.

The first Tiger to get to base was Veach, who pried open the fifth with a clean line single to center, and this made possible the only spectacular play of the afternoon. Veach wriggled his way to third when Eddie Collins let Flagstead's roller get through his paws. Pinelli then soaked a fairly long fly to Flesch and Veach started for home after the catch. Felsch had a running start when he speared the pill and he shot it home on a line. It hopped into Schalk's hands right on top of the plate and the backstop had time to turn and meet Veach as he slid into the counter.

Ehmke showed signs of being unsteady in the first round but got by undamaged. In the second, however, he wasn't quite so lucky. Jack Collins opened the session with a single over third and Risberg walked. Schalk's sacrifice moved the runners ahead. Williams bunted to squeeze J. Collins across and Ehmke, who fielded the ball, threw wild to Stanage so Risberg also scored.

Fly Scores Jackson.

Jackson cracked a single to center with one down in the third and a passed ball gave him opportunity to reach second. He went to third when Felsch caromed a hit off Ehmke's glove. J. Collins let loose a long fly to Veach and Jackson ambled home after the catch. On a hit and run play Risberg singled down the third base line and Felsch tried to score all the way from first on it but was cut down in a close play, Veach to Pinelli to Stanage.

HOME RUN CLOUTING NOT DUE TO BALLS, B. B. JOHNSON SAYS

THE big increase in home runs this season is not due to any change in the ball, according to President B. B. Johnson of the American league, who visited the factory while on his last eastern trip.

"The ball used this year," said Mr. Johnson, "is the same as used last year and several seasons before. The specifications call for the same cork center, the same size and weight of rubber, and the same horsehide. Australian wool yarn, not available in war time, has been secured.

Mr. Johnson said his theory was that the abolition of freak deliveries, including the shine ball, or "sailer," is the cause of the hard hitting.

Urbana, Ill., June 5.—[Special]—Illinois handed Michigan its first conference defeat today 8 to 1, and it was a terrible drubbing for the champion Wolverines. After the Illini had batted Parks all over the lot for seven innings, he was withdrawn, but just after the eighth round started, the Wolverines elected to yield the game and catch a train.

POTSY CLARK. [Illinois Coach.]

Capt. Mickey Ryan of Illinois pitched a grand game, his hits being all scattered, and the lone Wolverine's tally the result of Newell's home run. It was the second game in which Parks figured in two days.

Julie Mee, Illinois hard hitting shortstop, started the Wolverine Waterloo with a homer in the first inning and English followed with another in the same round. From then on the Illini batted Parks hard. While the Illini fielded faultlessly, the Wolverines blew up several times. Score:

BIG TEN HONORS TO ILLINOIS MEN; MICHIGAN NEXT

Javelin Mark to Hoffman; Two Records Tied.

the Kansas Aggies, winner of the mile and two mile in the Missouri valley conference, and Furnas of Purdue hooked up in an interesting struggle. Watson jumped the field at the start and at the end of the first mile had a lead of thirty yards. The Boilermaker then set out to catch the Jayhawker and drew up on even terms at the end of the third half mile. Watson tried to hold Furnas' pace, but his reserve had been spent in the earlier stages.

Furnas Wins by Himself.

Furnas gradually drew away from his tiring contender and won off by himself. Wharton of Illinois, who failed to keep up with the leaders, then started to make his race. He let out with an unlooked-for burst of speed which enabled him to catch Watson and pass him for second place. Finishes between the other runners for places caused plenty of excitement.

Coach Schlute of Nebraska, a former Michigan football player, uncovered a promising hurler in Wright, who won first place in the 120 yard high barriers and was third in the low timbers. This seven points and the three won by Dale in the shotput gave the Cornhuskers a total of ten points.

Despite early overcast skies and the rain, which started to fall shortly after the start of the meet, 5,000 spectators saw the events, which were featured by the best competition of any recent conference championship track games.

SUBURBAN RACE FOR PAUL JONES; WINS BY A HEAD

New York, June 5.—Taking the lead at the start and holding it to the finish, just as he did in the recent Kentucky Derby, Ral Parr's 3 year old gelding Paul Jones by Sea King—May Florence, won the famous Suburban handicap at one mile and a quarter, at Belmont park today.

Commander J. K. L. Ross' 5 year old horse, Boniface, finished second, beaten only by a head, while W. L. Klimen's Exterminator, carrying top weight of 123 pounds, ran third, five lengths away and a length in front of Upset, while Thunderclap, always outrun, was last.

Rain Reduces Field.

Rain and a sloppy track reduced the field to these five starters, the smallest number that ever contested for this classic. After a brief delay at the barrier all but Upset got away with Paul Jones showing in front. Before they had gone a quarter of a mile Upset overtook the leaders and was running in second place as they turned out of the backstretch.

Paul Jones opened up a gap of four lengths at this stage, but as they turned into the homestretch, Jockey Sanders sent Boniface right along after the leader. Boniface was fast overtaking Paul Jones as they neared the eighth pole, but Sanders could not keep him straight as the horse bolted clean to the outside rail.

Boniface Gains in Stretch.

When Sanders got Boniface straightened out he began gaining rapidly on the leader, which was on the rail and tiring fast. Jockey Shattinger, however, managed to keep the derby winner going on to win by a very scant margin from Boniface, which finished on the extreme outside of the track.

The time, 2:09 3-5, was fair, considering the weather and track conditions.

The winner's end of the stakes was $6,350.

Pugilistic Pointers By Ray Pearson

WHILE World's Lightweight Champion Benny Leonard and Charley White are battling for the title at Benton Harbor on the afternoon of July 5 a flock of soldiers will be on guard to see that there is order. Pomote Floyd Fitzsimmons has made arrangements for the military police at Camp Custer to appear at the Harbor and work both inside and outside the inclosure.

Willie Green, formerly of the Great Lakes and a clever lightweight scrapper, has been matched with Teddy Murphy for a ten rounder at Pontiac, Ill., on the afternoon of July 5.

Judging by the way the tickets are being disposed of locally a flock of fans will journey to Milwaukee on Wednesday to see Lew Tendler and Richie Mitchell swap wallops.

Here Are Silk Shirts At Pre-War Prices!

We've had some big luck and are including you in it.

We've got hold of a huge quantity of the finest silk shirts made—shirts we have been selling for $15, $18, $20, $22.50—which we can sell to you at $11.85 each

We've had some famous silk shirt sales here in our time, but never such a smashing one as this. All the recent price flurries haven't brought out anything like it. It beats pre-war prices.

We are selling these shirts now for less than we have been paying for most of them at wholesale, and for less than we are likely to have to pay for them again. Everybody knows that such silk shirts cannot stabilize at such low prices for months—for a year or two, perhaps.

They are regulars with us. We have a lot like them on our shelves. We got them from a manufacturer who supplies us heavily right along with our best silk shirts. When the Japanese silk hoarders got panicky and began to let go, he wanted to unload. He told us what he had, named a price, and we took them.

There are no seconds among them. They are all of the best grades—crepe de chine and broadcloth silk—best for shirts.

The first will be sold at 8:30 Monday morning, June 7th. The last will be sold—who knows when? Not before you get here, we hope.

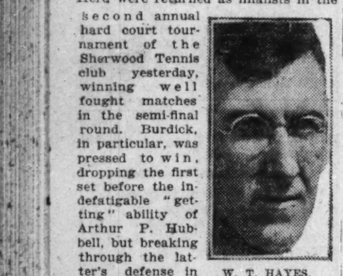
BURDICK TO PLAY HERD FOR TITLE THIS AFTERNOON

Former Defeats Hubbell; Latter Beats Brain.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

Ralph H. Burdick and Clifton B. Herd were returned as finalists in the second annual hard court tournament of the Sherwood Tennis club yesterday, winning well fought matches in the semi-final round. Burdick, in particular, was pressed to win, dropping the first set before the indefatigable "getting" ability of Arthur P. Hubbell, but breaking through the latter's defense in the second set and winning, 2—6, 6—4, 6—3, 6—2.



W. T. HAYES. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Hubbell was unable to match the swiftness of Burdick's strokes, but almost seemed to have gotten the latter's goat in the first set, when he kept returning points that Burdick meant for "kills." Hubbell would skid and veer over the court, chasing hard shots to the corners, but had the knack of getting them back. Burdick warmed up and increased the vigor of his shots after Hubbell seemed on a fair way to win the second set, and after that kept Art rocketing from one side of the court to another, playing a losing game.

Herd Victor Over Brain.

Herd, who developed his game along the smashing California style while he resided on the coast, swept Phillip Brain, the Minneapolis city champion, to defeat in the other singles semi-final, 6—4, 6—2, 6—4. Brain played steadily, but his style was tamer than Herd's, and the superior pace told against him.

In doubles the team of Hayes and Burdick made its reappearance after a year in which the partnership was dissolved. These former western doubles champs defeated Brain and Lucian E. Williams, the Illinois state champion, 8—6, 4—6, 6—2, 6—3. Herd and Jerry Weber, the former Yale university star, dealt a signal defeat to Alex. Squair and Preston Boyden, 6—0, 6—0, 7—5, relaxing in the third set.

Final Matches Today.

The old smoothness of the Hayes-Burdick combination was not in evidence, and it was the opinion of a good sized gallery that the ex-champions will have their work cut out for them today against Herd and Weber. This match will take place around 4 o'clock, following the final in singles between Burdick and Herd at 2 p. m.

MICHIGAN FISHING LAWS.

THE lakes, streams, and forests of Michigan annually attract thousands of tourists, resorters, and sportsmen — vacationists who bring much money into the state and leave it there. As a result Michigan looks upon its fish and game resources as both a means of pleasure to the people of the state and as a source of great revenue. Naturally the state is trying to conserve its fish, game, and forests, and with this in view Michigan has well thought out programs of protection and strictly enforced fish and game laws. The angler intending to fish in Michigan should be posted on the laws, the principal ones of which are given here.

Michigan, this year, reduces the cost of nonresident fishing licenses but requires one of every nonresident, male or female, over 21 years old. License fee for general fishing, including trout, is $3; for all fishing except trout, $1. The Angler must have the license in his possession while fishing. Note that for the first time grayling are not included in the general license privilege, for the reason that Michigan now has a year around closed season on these fish.

Open seasons this year are as follows: Trout and salmon, except lake and Mackinaw trout, May 1 to Sept. 1, inclusive, on both peninsulas; large and small mouthed black bass, June 16 to March 1, inclusive; walleye pike, May 1 to Feb. 1, inclusive.

There are no closed seasons on muskellunge, pickerel, white bass, rock bass, calico bass, bluegills, sunfish, crappies, perch, whitefish, ciscoes, suckers, mullets, redsides, carp, or grass pike.

Size and daily limits are: Trout and salmon, 7 inches, 35 per day, 50 in possession: black bass and walleye pike, 10 inches, 10 per day, 10 in possession; white bass, calico bass, and rock bass, 6 inches, 25 per day, 25 in possession; bluegill, sunfish, and crappies, 5 inches, 25 per day, 25 in possession; perch, 5 inches, no daily or possession limits.

It is unlawful to buy or sell at any time any black bass, trout, salmon, walleye pike, white bass, calico bass, rock bass, bluegills, sunfish, or crappies. Perch of 9 inches or more may be sold. It is unlawful for a resort keeper to make a charge for serving any of these fishes, although a guest may be served with fishes caught by himself.

"Hook and line" is defined by law to be a single line or single rod with line with hook or hooks attached, while held in the hand or under immediate control when being used for still fishing. "Casting and trolling is defined as a single line or single rod and line with hook or hooks attached or with a natural or artificial bait, not to exceed six inches in length, and one of more hooks or gangs of hooks attached, to be used for casting or trolling for fish, and the method of capturing fish shall be by means of fish taking bait or hook in the mouth."

Grab hooks, snag hooks, set lines, night lines, artificial lights, explosives, poisons, and firearms may not be used for taking fish. It is unlawful to use or have in possession within one-half mile of any inland lake or stream any nets or seines, except dip nets and minnow seines. Minnow seines must not exceed twenty feet in length and may be used for taking minnows for bait only.

Nonresident general licenses contain two coupons, one each for trout and bass, and the dollar licenses have one coupon. Whenever the nonresident ships or carries fish from the state one of these coupons must be attached to receptacle containing the fish.

Put this in your fly book. Michigan fishing laws for 1920:

Trout, salmon—May 1-Sept. 1, inclusive; size, 7 inches, 35 per day; 50 possession.

Black bass—June 16-March 1, inclusive; size, 10 inches, 10 per day; 10 possession.

Walleyed pike—May 1-Feb. 1, inclusive; size, 10 inches, 0 per day; 10 possession.

Grayling—Protected. No closed season on other fishes.

White bass, calico bass, rock bass—6 inches, 25 per day; 25 possession.

Bluegills, sunfish, crappies—5 inches, 25 per day; 25 possession.

Perch—5 inches; no other limits.

Plan to Seat 5,000 Crowd at National Net Tourney

Details and preliminary work for the annual national clay court tennis championships, which this year for the third consecutive season will be decided at the local South Side Tennis club, were arranged at a meeting of officers of that organization. The tourney will begin at 2 o'clock, July 10, and continue until the finals on Sunday, July 18.

This Should Be a Game Worth Going Miles For

The detective bureau team and newspaper reporters will battle on diamond No. 2, at the foot of East Eighth street in Grant park, this morning at 9 o'clock instead of at the Monroe street bridge, as previously announced Chief of Detectives James L. Mooney will umpire the game. John H. Gehlhardt has offered a silver loving cup to the winning team.

BIKE RIDERS IN OLYMPIC TEST FROM MILWAUKEE

All arrangements are complete for the Milwaukee to Chicago Olympic elimination bicycle trial today. The starting gun will be fired promptly at 6 o'clock this morning in Milwaukee. Riders and officials went to Milwaukee last night.

The leaders are expected at the finishing point in Humboldt park about 11:30 this morning. In order to complete the full Olympic distance of 108.74 miles the riders must continue the race approximately five laps around the Humboldt park course, the finish being at the Kosciuszko monument.

The six riders making the fastest time will be sent to New York to represent the Chicago district in the final eliminations.

WALK FROM MILWAUKEE JULY 4.

George Stokes, old time pedestrian, will attempt to beat Henry Schmehl's walking record from Milwaukee to Chicago of 19 hours and 56 minutes, July 4. Stokes will bring a letter from the mayor of Milwaukee to Mayor Thompson.

Rainbow Makes Local Debut, Beating Sari in 9 Mile Event

Commodore Sheldon Clark's Rainbow, flagship of the Chicago Yacht club, celebrated its local debut yesterday by administering a decisive defeat to Samuel Dauchy's Sari of the same organization. The brush between the two crack class R boats was the leading feature of the first race of the opening series sailed around the nine mile course off Belmont avenue.

Rainbow, formerly Pam of the Cleveland Yacht club, which was brought to Chicago by Commodore Clark last spring, made a favorable impression on the critics.

Fifteen yachts answered the starting gun and put up snappy contests in most of the seven classes represented.

Ideal weather conditions prevailed. A fresh northeast breeze gave the racers a broad reach to the Harrison crib, a beat to the Lake View crib, and a balloon run back to the Belmont gas. Summaries:

Proves Monroe the Leader of the World

Against the greatest competition ever offered in the history of Motorcardom, Gaston Chevrolet piloted a Monroe to victory in the Eighth Annual International Sweepstakes held at Indianapolis.

In this extreme test of stamina, Monroe proved itself to be the greatest piece of mechanical perfection that automotive science and human genius could produce.

The same infallible principles of construction that caused Monroe's victory on the track are built into every stock chassis turned out of the Monroe factory.

The four cylinder overhead valve motor that proved its worth under terrific strain gives that smoothness and flexibility heretofore known only to the drivers of heavier cars.

Perfect balance and a unique spring construction have made Monroe known as "the easiest riding car."

Twenty-five thousand children from the parochial schools will take part. There will be 112 floats, several bands, military units, and tableaux.

Among the historical subjects to be represented in the pageant will be incidents in the life of Joan of Arc, which will be depicted by members of St. Edmund's parish, Oak Park. Miss Lloyd will take the part of Joan and will ride on a white charger.

The Ninth district of the International Association of Rotary clubs, through its governor, H. E. Van de Walker, has sent to all clubs in the district an urgent appeal to give the American Legion posts the greatest support possible. Members of Rotary clubs who are eligible for the legion are urged to get in line at once.

At an entertainment and luncheon Friday evening at the home of Mrs. W. H. Turney, 3703 West Sixty-third place, the U. S. S. Grant post, G. A. Prevost's counsel will appeal immediately.

93 Chicago Women Out of 106 Choose Danish Pride

Evaporated Milk "The Cream of the Country."

THOUSANDS of Chicago women want to know which is the best Evaporated Milk on the market. A public meeting for the purpose of testing the various kinds of milk was held in Cameo Hall, Morrison Hotel, November 21st, 1919. The above picture is a reproduction of a photo taken of that gathering. 106 Chicago women voluntarily acted as judges. They sampled the different kinds of milk from bowls numbered so that they did not know what the brands were. The women tasted the samples, tested each for its flavor, creaminess, richness and color. Estimated its value for coffee making, cooking and for use with cereals and fruit, in fact, judged it from every angle and for every purpose for which Evaporated Milk is used. When the vote was taken 93 out of 106 pronounced

Danish Pride The Best They Ever Tried

Just think! These women found after careful test that Danish Pride Evaporated Milk has a superior flavor and is richer in nutritive qualities than any other kind of milk they ever tried and they therefore cheerfully recommend it to anyone wishing a pure, tasty, creamy Evaporated Milk.

The Winning Points About Danish Pride

1. It comes from the richest dairying country in the world—The "North Shore" lands.
2. It is produced by the most famous dairying people in the world—people who have made it their lifetime study and vocation, and taken profound pride in it.
3. It comes from the best and healthiest dairy cows in America. Cows that eat most nutritious grasses in summer and are housed and fed the richest feeds in winter. They produce the richest milk possible.
4. It is put up and prepared under the scientific Enz process of evaporation and sterilization. Most emphatically and unquestionably PURE.
5. Danish Pride Evaporated Milk contains absolutely no flavoring, no sugar, no preservative. Nothing added and nothing taken away except water.
6. Put up in air-tight cans that are first made scrupulously clean and pure. This milk is guaranteed to stay sweet for years.

After opening treat as you would regular milk.

Don't Experiment—Buy Danish Pride

The test made by 106 Chicago women should convince you that further experimenting on your part is unnecessary. Try buying a can or a case of Danish Pride, then you will be able to verify the statements made above. You owe it to yourself and your family to have and use this pure milk every day. It is wholesome, nutritious, pure, clean and rich in body building elements.

For Sale at First Class Grocery Stores

If your grocer does not have Danish Pride on hand, ask him to get it for you. Don't accept any other kind until you have tried Danish Pride. Also ask him, or write us, for the Danish Pride Idea Book. It's full of useful recipes. "Anyone can be an economical cook with the Danish Pride Idea Book," by one of America's leading authorities on cooking.

History of Danish Pride Evaporated Milk

For generations past the people of Denmark, Europe, have been famous for the excellence of their dairy products, including evaporated and condensed milk. Their Evaporated Milk was introduced on the market of the world over 70 years ago. The health and milk-producing quality of their dairy cows, the cleanliness of their dairies and the rare, rich quality of their milk and cream products rivalled the world.

To America there came many years ago the descendants of the old dairy folk of Denmark, and they established their colony in northern Wisconsin and called it "Denmark." Here they found an ideal country for dairying—rich, luxuriant grasses for summer feeding, all of it the kind of feed that produces the richest, creamiest kind of milk, the sure indication of healthy, well-fed cows.

And here it was that the Danish people established the first one of their great milk condenseries and proceeded to build up a wide trade for the pride of their colony—the Danish Pride Evaporated Milk. America or the entire world never saw, never tasted an evaporated milk superior in any way to Danish Pride. Its equal was never produced by the physical and scientific combination of healthy cows and expert chemists.

This milk is fittingly called "Danish Pride," for it IS THE PRIDE OF ITS MAKERS, and wherever a can of it may go a pledge for perfection of product and service that spells satisfaction goes with it.

Yours for Health,

Pres.

$200,000 WAGE BOOST FOR CITY LABORERS URGED

Arbiters Suggest $4.50 for "White Wings."

Pay increases which will cost the city more than $200,000 if the council approves them were recommended for street laborers and city chauffeurs yesterday by the city arbitration commission. The laborers and the chauffeurs struck a month ago and returned to work a week later pending arbitration. Under the recommended scale the 1,500 "white wings" involved will receive either $4.50 or $4.60 a day, depending on whether they furnish their own uniforms. Their present pay is $4.05 and $4.15. They asked for $5.60.

The scale recommended for the 160 chauffeurs runs from $33.50 a week for those operating one ton trucks to $40.50 week for those in charge of six ton trucks. The chauffeurs asked for from $140 to $180 a month.

Plan New Taxes.

With a view to increasing municipal revenues, the city council committee on revenue, compensation and elections yesterday ordered its revenue commission to prepare the following measures:

An ordinance requiring baseball clubs to pay the city $6 a day for each policeman detailed to baseball games.

A resolution requesting the boards of assessors and review to assess public utility corporations on the values which the public utilities commission has authorized to be used in determining rates.

Ordinances licensing cabarets, revising the theater ticket brokers' license law and one licensing billboards.

Restrains Labor Agency Tax.

Judge Denis E. Sullivan issued an injunction yesterday restraining the city from collecting a license fee from thirty-eight employment agencies on the grounds that the state now licenses them.

Joe Carville Held for 'Jobbie' Hurley's Murder

A coroner's jury yesterday ordered Joseph Carville, 3436 South Halsted street, held to the grand jury for the murder of Joseph ("Jobbie") Hurley, 3813 Wallace street, a pal of "Moss" Enright, "Smiling Jack" O'Brien and the elusive "Sonny" Dunn. Hurley was killed in a fight with Carville which started in "Stubby" McQuade's saloon at 3455 Wallace street on the night of March 16.

HIS FEDORA HAT CAUSES ARREST AS $30,000 THIEF

Chicago Fugitive Spied by Bank Clerk.

Adolph Meyer Glassman kissed his wife and two children good-by the morning of May 1, and disappeared. About $30,000 of the money of the Hollister-Wilson laboratories, 4221 South Western avenue, vanished, too.

The firm had confidence in Glassman. Through his brilliancy he had risen in three years from a lowly employé to the managership of the plant with full power to write any old kind of checks.

When Glassman disappeared Phillip E. Geague, assistant superintendent of the Pinkerton detective agency, was called in. Geague, with the assistance of Detective Sergeant George De Mar of Chief Mooney's office, got their heads together.

"He's smart," said Geague, "but he's got a weakness. He always wears the same sort of hat and tie."

Circulars with a picture of Glassman wearing his black fedora and black tie were sent broadcast. The hat and tie won the day for the detectives. Yesterday he was seized at Los Angeles when he made a deposit in a bank under the name of "A. M. Gilbert."

The bank clerk had one of the circulars. He spotted the likeness of the man at the window and the picture and called a policeman. At several other Los Angeles banks Glassman had made deposits. Detective Sergeant De Mar is going to bring Glassman back to Chicago.

YOO-HOO, SKINNY! DAD PLAYS WITH YOU THIS WEEK!

Have you forgotten how to play? Do you remember those old vacant lot games? Tug 'o' war, duckie on the rock, pom pom pull away, baby in the hole, piggy, and all the rest? Could you step out with your kiddies and join them in a game of "dodge ball"?

If you can, do it this week, and if you can't, learn how. This week is "play week." Starting on June 7 and continuing until June 14, which will be "neighbor's day," the kids of Chicago and their parents will play all of these games and more.

The Community Service of Chicago is back of the movement. The programs it has planned for the week tell you how to get down to earth with the children again.

"Don't be afraid to play, you above 40," reads the program. "You will find it exhilarating, even though the snows of life's winter have drifted upon your shoulders. One reason why people grow old is because they neglect to stretch, and romp, and frisk now and then."

"Play Pirating" Suit Against Collier and Mapes

New York, June 5.—[Special.]—William Collier and Victor Mapes, authors of "The Hottentot," in which Mr. Collier is appearing, and Sam H. Harris, the producer, were sued in the Supreme court today by David Gray, author of the play "Gallops," for an injunction restraining them from continuing with "The Hottentot" unless the defendants concede that he is the author and agree to give him royalties from the production. Gray alleges parts of his play are used in "The Hottentot."

CHICAGO TO NEED 25,000 TEACHERS WITHIN 3 YEARS

Chicago must have at least 25,000 trained teachers within three years, Dr. William Bishop Owen, principal of the Chicago Normal college, told several thousand school teachers at the college yesterday afternoon. The occasion was the annual "Teachers' day" event given by the Chicago Normal Alumni association.

"The law requires after 1923 every youth in industry to have at least eight hours of schooling a week until he is 18 years old," said Dr. Owen. "That means that Chicago must dig deep into her pockets if an efficient teaching staff is to be maintained."

Coöperation between the business men of the city and the schools for the purpose of producing efficiently trained workers ready to step into responsible positions upon the completion of their education was the keynote of Supt. Peter A. Mortenson's speech.

Real Estate Men Vote to Meet in Chicago in 1921

Kansas City, Mo., June 5.—Chicago was chosen over Baltimore for the holding of the 1921 convention by a vote of 73 to 40 in the convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards here today. New York received five votes. Balloting was by cities.

This man put up a building. He put it up in the summer time when the sun was shining and the daisies were smiling in the fields. He wasn't thinking about cold weather, or heat, or coal and didn't care what kind of a boiler he put in.

Zowie: Then the wintery winds began to blow. B. V. D's were discarded in favor of "heavies" and the man skurried to the coal man and said; "Send me a lot of fine coal quick." And the coal man grinned at him and said; "Nothing doing Algernon, we haven't any of that kind of coal; you've got to take some poorer stuff."

But his boiler was not made to burn cheap soft coals and so it wasted most of it up the stack as smoke. Then the Smoke Inspector pinched him for mussing up the City. And now he moans and tears his hair and wears a face that looks like he had just paid his income tax.

KEWANEE

Now listen here Old Top. Take a tip from the "Old Man Behind the Boiler" and put in a Kewanee Smokeless Boiler when you build. Think about the boiler first. It's the heart of your building and the corner stone of profits.

The Kewanee Smokeless is one boiler that will burn any coal without wasting any of it. That's why it is smokeless. The days of fancy coal have passed and you have got to have a boiler that will burn what you can get. Any building owner with a finicky boiler is sure out of luck.

But if you put in a Kewanee you can burn any old coal without waste and instead of weeping about big coal bills your building will be making you real money and you can spend your winters in California where the daisies always smile.

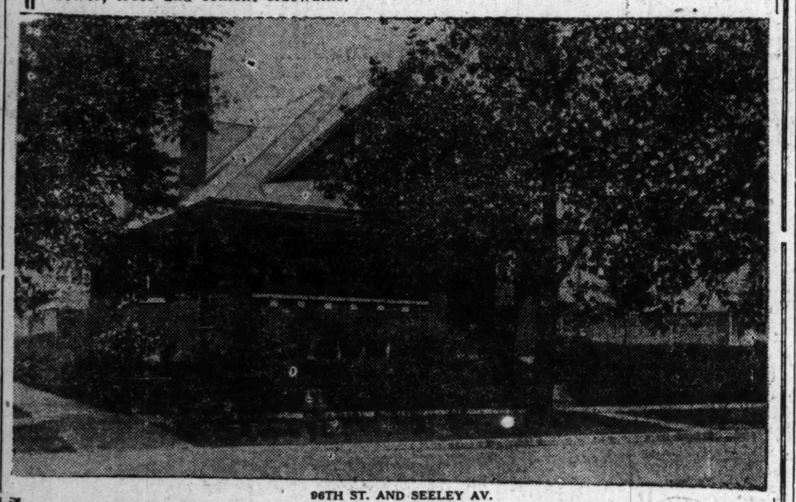
Beverly Hills, Where Pre-War Prices Are Being Maintained

Although fully developed, ready to market, John Bain & Co. decided that the men engaged in putting the finishing touches to BEVERLY HILLS addition might better be employed in WAR WORK, and so, in 1917, this subdivision was taken off the market. It had, at that time, modern improvements, such as street paving, water, sewer, trees and cement sidewalks.



96TH ST. AND SEELEY AV.

This highly improved property is on the market again, and is being offered at PRE-WAR PRICES. Located, as it is, in the midst of beautiful BEVERLY HILLS, it is an ideal homesite. Parks, stores, schools, churches and amusements are convenient to this property. It is the highest point in Cook County, being 100 feet higher than Lake Michigan. Owners of homes in this section are independent of profiteering landlords, and one should lose no time taking advantage of the prices now offered. Lots 40 and 50 feet wide by 125 feet deep, may be bought on terms of 10% cash and 1% per month, and we will finance the building of the home. At this time it might be a wise idea to figure on building a home in the very near future, as it is the concensus of opinion that prices generally will see a sharp decline and that labor will be plentiful. This applies to building material, as well as to other commodities.

This property is located 2½ blocks from the Rock Island station, with 60 trains a day and a 9½c fare, and is less than 30 minutes to the loop. The number of close-in lots available for building purposes that are convenient to good transportation in Chicago today is limited. Investigate these now.

RAILROAD TIEUP MAKES U. S. BUY 2 GRAIN CROPS

See Solution in Deep Waterway to Ocean.

Duluth, Minn., June 5.—[Special.]—The federal reserve banks of the country are buying two grain crops because of the failure of the railroads to move wheat from the farms and country elevators to the Atlantic seaboard, J. F. Ebersole, assistant federal reserve agent of the Ninth district, told the international joint commission in session at Duluth today.

Mr. Ebersole said his bank is issuing propaganda for the proposed St. Lawrence channel for ocean ships, because its officers are convinced that the St. Lawrence route would relieve the federal reserve system of the burden of meeting abnormal transportation conditions. He said the St. Lawrence route would be good insurance against a transportation tieup similar to that from which the country is now suffering.

"We conceive it the duty of the federal reserve system to stabilize business conditions, not to eliminate the ups and downs, but to decrease their magnitude," Mr. Ebersole said, "in asking for the St. Lawrence improvement we are asking, as bankers, for a margin of safety in our transportation system."

Mr. Ebersole said that from Aug. 29, 1919, to the present time his bank's loans had grown from $4,000,000 to $35,000,000, and from Aug. 30, 1918, to a year ago its loans decreased from $60,000,000 to $5,000,000.

"We believe that it would pay the country well to provide a deep channel for ocean ships in the St. Lawrence, so that the country's resources could be tapped at any of the lake ports," he said.

Mr. Ebersole said it will take five years at least to bring the railroads up to their requirements, without providing for any expansion on the part of the nation's business.

SENATE REPORT TELLS OF PROFIT IN PRINT PAPER

Urges Action Under Anti-Trust Laws.

Washington, D. C., June 5.—Holding that scarcity of newsprint paper which has handicapped American newspapers to be "more the result of artificial obstructions than of natural laws," the senate committee, which investigated the paper situation today, recommended the department of justice institute proceedings under the Sherman and Clayton acts against print paper manufacturers.

Manufacturers were charged by the committee with "unjust, illegal, and discriminatory" practices. Present prices for newsprint paper were held by the committee to be "excessive and unwarranted."

Other recommendations made by the committee include:

Establishment of a federal newsprint board "to supervise the manufacture and distribution of print paper" should government efforts to maintain a reasonable price fail.

To Punish Profiteers.

Amendment of the Lever food control act to penalize profiteering in newsprint paper.

Imposition of an excise tax of 10 cents on Sunday newspapers weighing more than 1.28 pounds a copy so as to limit such editions to eighty pages until an adequate paper supply can be secured.

Appropriation of $100,000 for the purpose of experimenting with substitutes for wood pulp.

Establishment of a rate of 1 cent a pound on sheet print paper to any part of the country when sent by parcel post without increasing the present limit of seventy pounds provided under the postal regulations.

Report Is Signed.

The report, which was submitted to the senate just before adjournment, was drafted by Senator Walsh, Democrat, Massachusetts, and was signed by Senator McNary, Oregon, and Gronna, North Dakota, Republican. Senator Reed, Democrat, Missouri, who was chairman of the investigating committee, was unable to go over the report because of his duties on the campaign expenditures investigating committee, and did not sign the report.

The report is based on extensive hearings held by the committee, at which testimony was heard from newspaper and periodical publishers and paper manufacturers, dealers and jobbers.

Unsafe to Criticize.

Publishers of small newspapers were declared by the report to be in the hands of "unscrupulous profiteers and exploiters, while even the large newspaper publishers are at the mercy of the manufacturers." The report added that it "was not and still is not safe for a publisher in any way to criticize or protest to a manufacturer," while the "big publishers, not having mills of their own, are in a 'holdup market,' while the small publishers are being driven from the business by threatened bankruptcy."

The report concluded with a protest against the adjournment of congress without enactment of legislation to relieve the print paper situation.

CHILDREN STAGE JUNE FESTIVAL IN JACKSON PARK

The wooded isle in Jackson park was a happy spot all day yesterday, a land of smiles, the playground of many children. It was the occasion of the June festival, which began at 10 o'clock yesterday and ended at 9 o'clock last night, brought about through the cooperation of the South park commissioners, the Junior Drama league, and the Wild Flower Preservation society.

At 11 o'clock Miss Georgene Falkner, "the story lady," told nature tales to the children. Then began a program of local plays, directed by Cora Mel Paten and Bertha Iles, and enacted by children.

After the plays there was a farewell ceremony to the Field Museum, and after supper on the green, Synge's "Well of the Saints" was presented by the Dramatic club of the Woodlawn Community Service.

School Memory Books

EVERY Graduate wants to remember the Golden Days. Snap-shots, autographs, records of class parties—all should be kept. What could make a better gift than one of our memory books? Beautifully illustrated, in real leather and attractive board coverings, they make one of the most pleasing gifts for the Graduate.

And do not make the mistake of thinking only girls appreciate these record books. Some of ours are especially designed for boys as well.

Not only on Commencement Day but in all the years to come the Graduate will thank the thoughtful person who gave the Memory Book.

GASOLINE UP AGAIN; 37 CENTS NEW PRICE

Garages to Advance Retail Rate Two Cents, Following Increase by Standard Oil.

TO BE 30 CENTS WHOLESALE

Raised from 28½ Cents—The Total Increase Is Six Cents Since Jan. 1.

Motor car owners will experience another shock this week when thy find that their garage man has added 2 cents extra on the cost of gasoline. Notice to many of the leading garages has gone forth from the Standard Oil Company that the wholesale price will be advanced from 28½ to 30 cents a gallon. The new rate will be effective at midnight tonight. To meet this increase the manager of one of the large upper Broadway garages said yesterday that after that time the prevailing retail price for motor car fuel will be 37 cents. The New York garage price is now 35 cents. The Automobile Club of America has been charging its members 34 cents and it has been possible to buy gasoline at most of the way stations for 31 or 32 cents.

The present rate went into effect two months ago. It followed an increase of 3 cents since the first of the year, the new rate effective this ... an advance of 6 cents ... and a half ... large taxi...

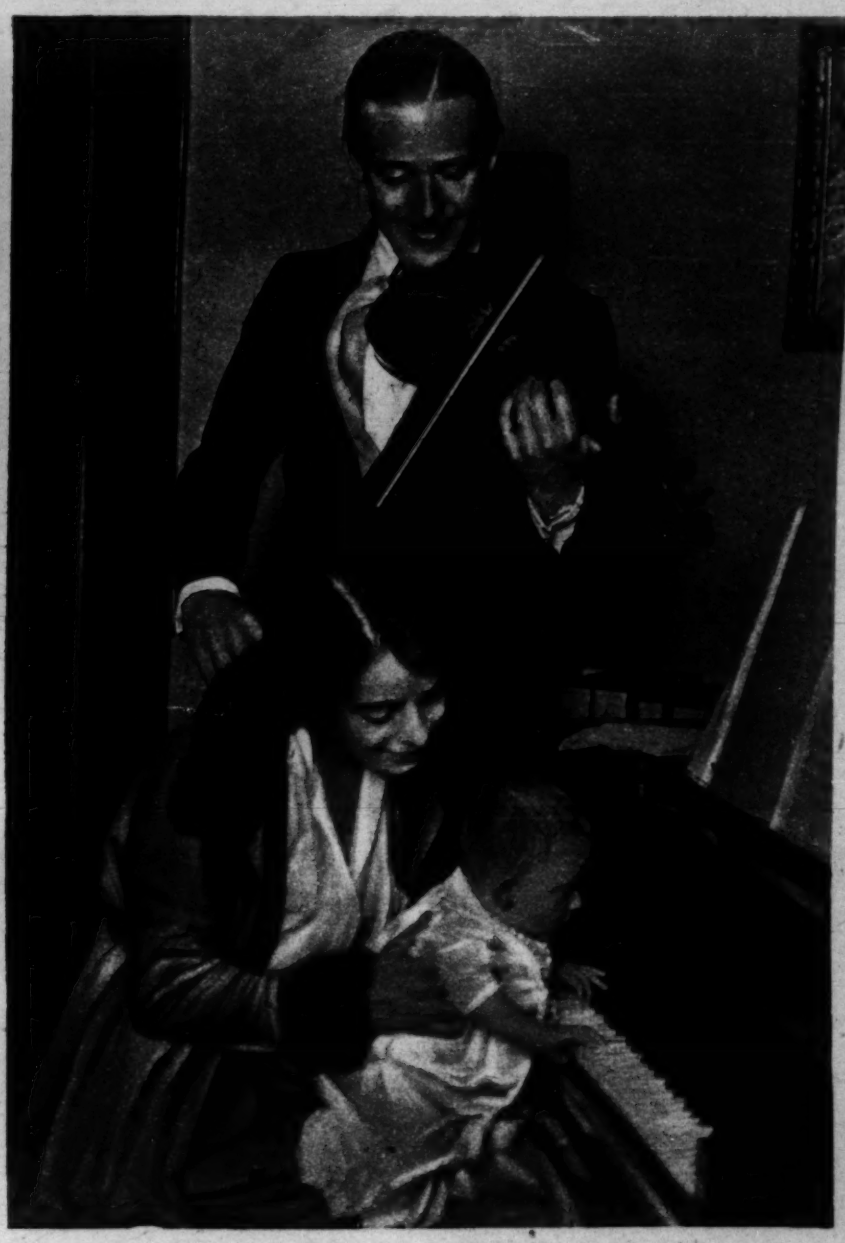
EDITH ROBERTS is a Universal star. She's not so well known now as her sponsoring company declares she's going to be. We await with interest developments in her case.

Miss Roberts was born in New York City and educated in the public schools there. She's been in the limelight since she was 6 years old, having then made her first appearance on the stage. Since playing for the screen she has always worked for Universal.

The lady in question is a pretty little trick, 5 feet 1 inch tall, 105 pounds in weight, fair of face and brown of hair and eyes. Nice smile, too, hasn't she?

Mae Tinee.



THE WALLACE REIDS are here shown doing a private vaudeville act for their own amusement. Wallie Sr. presides at the fiddle, Wallie Jr. makes the ivories hum, and Mrs. Wallie holds her baby "just so," in order that him's little back may be straight.

(Do you remember when male movie stars all used to deny that they were married? How quite passe, my dears, has the practice become!)

Mae Tinee.

WILLIAM S. HART was approached one day by the artist who drew this picture and humbly requested would he sit for his portrait. Mr. Hart, being one of those obliging bandits, agreed. So he postponed an important train robbery, the rescue of a maiden in distress, and a few of the other little things he's always doing, with the accompanying result.

Now, all together, what do you think he looks like?

Mae Tinee.

BILLIE BURKE ZIEGFELD ET DAUGHTER PATRICIA were having a nice little tea party one day on the lawn of their home, Burkeleigh Crest, Hastings-on-Hudson, when along came a photographer.

Now maybe everybody knew that along was coming a photographer and maybe the tea party was staged for that vurr' event. Anyhow, here's the picture. And isn't daughter Patricia a darling, and would you look at the Mother Goose characters marching over the chairs, and what do you suppose is in the bucket?

Beautify your Hair with "DANDERINE"

35c a bottle! Freshen your scalp! Stop falling hair! Remove dandruff! Have lots of wavy, glossy, beautiful hair! You can!

IF YOU care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair; besides, it eradicates every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scruf robs the hair of its luster, its strength, and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp, the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy, or too oily, get a bottle of Knowlton's Danderine, apply a little as directed, and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually, why not now?

GALLITO, SPAIN'S MOST FAMOUS TOREADOR, who was killed by a bull recently at Place de Talavera, near Madrid, while trying to save another toreador who was in danger. His death caused more emotion in Spain than that of a monarch. Gallito, though only 23, had amassed a fortune of 8,000,000 pesetas (about $1,300,000), all earned in the bull ring. His real name was Joselito Gomez.

Clear-eyed, keen — the American business man meets the world's problems

IN every country where the impossible is demanded, the American business man is sent for—America's greatest product.

The architect who raises dream palaces to the clouds—the engineer who throws steel highways over rivers and tunnels under harbors and mountains—the inventor who dreams today and tomorrow brings it true—the financier who holds the purse strings of the world.

American business men the country over start their day on coffee. Coffee clears their brain, quickens their wits, gives them a fresh, eager enthusiasm.

The men who are most critical of their coffee drink Yuban—the coffee that was chosen by men for men.

Years of conscientious study of coffee production resulted in Yuban—a coffee that is actually different from the numberless brands that come and go—distinctive in flavor, even in fragrance.

In New York—in Chicago—in every city where Yuban has been offered to the public, it has become the most popular coffee.

With every step you, too, receive a blow

In early China and Persia there was a form of torture—horrible not on account of its violence but because of its refined cruelty

KNOWN as the Bastinado, this punishment consisted of light blows on the feet of the victim with a small stick or lath of bamboo.

Not in the severity of the blows, which were scarcely more than taps, but in the constant repetition of this tapping, which reduced the strongest man to nervous exhaustion, lay the terror of the punishment.

This grim torture was a product of a savage civilization. Yet at the present time millions of Americans are inflicting like punishment upon themselves—because they fail to adjust themselves to the changed conditions of modern life.

Today even the smallest cities and towns have miles of hard paved streets and even harder sidewalks. The floors of homes and offices, too, are hard and unyielding.

Every step you take with leather heels or ordinary "dead" rubber heels on modern streets, sidewalks and floors is a hammer blow and, like the Bastinado, a shock to the nervous system.

You take on the average 8,000 steps a day. Every day you receive 8,000 of these shocks. Their constant repetition tends to destroy that store of energy so vital to success.

How to save your energy

You can do much to prevent this condition. You can eliminate the shocks of pounding hard heels on still harder pavements. O'Sullivan's Heels are specially made to absorb these jolts and jars.

To secure the resiliency, the springiness, of O'Sullivan's heels the highest grades of rubber are blended by a special formula. With this blend of live, springy rubber are "compounded" the best toughening agents known. The compound is then "cured" or baked under high pressure.

O'Sullivan's Heels absorb the jolts and jars of walking. The same process that makes O'Sullivan's Heels resilient gives them their great durability. O'Sullivan's Heels will outlast three pairs of leather heels—they often outlast two pairs of ordinary rubber heels.

Stop pounding away your energy. Go to your shoe repairer today and have O'Sullivan's Heels put on your shoes.

NOAH MAY HAVE HAD HIS TROUBLES, but unloading the Ark must have been child's play compared with getting the animals and things out of the old Field museum in Jackson park and into the new structure at the foot of Twelfth street. Never has the mastodon seen such goings-on, or submitted to such indignities, as since they laid the spur track up to the door of the crumbling old building on the south side and the picturesque hegira started.

"How do you do it?"

"Earth hath put off her Winter garb of gray and drab and dun
And robes herself in raiment green of love and laughter spun
Wood bloom and wood perfume and colors of the sun
O hark, my heart, O hear, my heart, where her wild footsteps run!"
Madison Cawein

I CAME across this bit of loveliness just now, and I have to laugh quietly all to myself. What a description of my favorite soap! Doesn't it sound just as if it had been written especially about Pears'? "Wood bloom and wood perfume and colors of the sun"—how enchantingly real.

It's really lovely to have friends who want you. It's awfully nice to be called, "that beautiful Mrs. Drake, our society leader," but if it weren't for these mornings with the children, or a book of poems, and an occasional afternoon lark, when Bob and I run off to the woods and act our engagement time all over again—I'd not be happy at all.

For it's the normal, healthful things that really make us the happiest, now isn't it? We all can't help but love the clean, growing life around us—and in us. That's why I like Pears' soap. It knows the skin is trying to do so much for us, breathing out impurities, letting the real beauty shine through. Somehow, it seems to say to me, "Let me help, too! I've been made to purify and care for your softness and beauty—let me help, too!"

Bob says I'm just as particular about the soaps, creams and powders I use as any stage favorite could be. Well, I am—we have to be particular when we know that dust and powder and things destroy the glowing, live beauty of us!

And we have to be careful when we know also that the tiny little soap bubbles can go too deep in cleansing the skin. But all the harshness has been faded out of Pears' by their heat-toning process, because Pears' is the only soap that really agrees with my skin.

But what a lot I've written about it this morning! And yet—can you blame me?—I owe a lot to Pears'. For this very morning, when Bob kissed me goodbye—he held me close, close, and whispered in my ear, "How do you do it, dear? You're actually lovelier than on the day we were married!"

Ah—but I'm happy!

A Great Woman Editor—

who receives thousands of letters from women asking how to improve their Complexions and their Hands, gives this simple prescription as the "great secret"—

"Find the soap that agrees with your skin"

Why "Heat-Toning" makes soap agree with most skins

Up to a certain point Pears' is much the same as any other pure, carefully made soap—the same up to the point where others are ready to tint, scent and wrap for sale.

At this stage the makers of Pears' consider all soaps as still "green" or raw. To make it absolutely in agreement with the texture of the most delicate skins, Pears' is then Heat-Toned by the process worked out by Mr. Pears, 131 years ago.

Pears' Heat-Toning Process

In the Heat-Toning retorts, Pears' mellows from its first creamy color to a dusky topaz and then to white color. There is not a bit of artificial coloring in Pears'; its coloring is as natural as the beautiful bloom is to the rose.

Just so, Heat-Toning is a natural, scientific process which refines soap, taking away the harshness and leaving it a beneficial cleansing agent which soothes the skin while it cleanses the pores. It is this toning process which makes Pears' different from all other soaps which brings this one soap into harmony with the inner life of the skin.

What Pears' Does For You

"Raw" soaps are not good for the skin. The reason is that they are entirely too strong, go too deeply into the millions of tiny pores, and take away much of the natural oils which help to keep the skin young looking and fresh.

Pears', through its Heat-Toning process, is mellowed to agree with the skin. This toning, together with fine ingredients, produces the soap which looks after your skin health and, at the same time, gives you a grateful smoothness and a delicate, elusive fragrance.

THE RIGHT WAY TO KEEP YOUR NAILS PERFECTLY MANICURED

Just a little regular care keeps your hands beautiful

NAILS like rosy pearl inlaid in a delicate setting—a setting of smooth, unbroken cuticle, a perfect curve which repeats the curve of the nail tips!

It is easy for anyone nowadays to have this alluring grace of perfect nails and cuticle—so easy that people no longer excuse the lack of it.

Today, ill-kept nails are as unpardonable as ill-kept teeth. For it takes but a few minutes of regular care each week to keep your fingernails always perfect, your cuticle smooth, thin, unbroken.

The sensitive nail root is only one-twelfth inch below the cuticle. When you look through a magnifying glass you see the unpleasant results of cuticle cutting.

Make some day of the week your regular day for manicuring. Then regularly on this day give your nails the care they need.

Do not forget that the most important item in the appearance of your nails is the care of the cuticle. Broken cuticle is like a broken setting to a jewel. Coarse overgrown cuticle is equally unsuitable.

Yet many people ruin the cuticle through ignorance of the proper method of caring for it. Never cut it. Specialists agree that this is ruinous.

The nail root is only 1-12 of an inch below the cuticle. When the cuticle is cut, it is next to impossible to avoid exposing the nail root at the corners or in some other little place.

The root of the nail is so sensitive that Nature will not permit it to remain uncovered. The moment a tiny bit is exposed, new skin grows very quickly in that place to cover it. It grows much more rapidly than the rest of the cuticle. This spoils the symmetry of the curve at the base of your nails. It causes uneven cuticle and hangnails. It gives a coarse, ragged appearance to the border of your nails. Your cuticle should have the same unbroken curve, the same grace and symmetry that your nails have.

Realizing this, an expert set himself to the task of discovering a safe, effective way to remove overgrown cuticle. After years of study he worked out the formula of a liquid, which gently, harmlessly softens and removes the surplus cuticle. This he called Cutex.

Wrap a little cotton around the end of an orange stick (both come in the Cutex package), dip it into the bottle of Cutex and work it around the base of the nails, gently pushing back the cuticle. Instantly the dry cuticle is softened. Wash the hands, pushing back the cuticle with a towel. The surplus cuticle will disappear, leaving a firm, even, slender nail base.

If you like snowy white nail tips apply a little Cutex Nail White underneath the nails directly from its convenient tube. Finish your manicure with Cutex Nail Polish. For an especially brilliant lasting polish, use Cutex Paste Polish first, then the Cutex Cake or Powder Polish. You can get the Cutex Polish in cake, powder, paste, liquid and stick form.

If your cuticle has a tendency to dry and grow coarse, apply a bit of Cutex Cold Cream each night. This cream was especially prepared to keep the hands and cuticle soft and fine.

Give yourself this manicure regularly. Make it as much of a habit as keeping your shoes shined. You will find that it is no trouble. It takes only about fifteen minutes a week to give your nails this complete manicure. But do not neglect this duty. Do not do it one week and forget it the next. It is true that one Cutex manicure makes your nails look lovely, but you cannot keep them well groomed by irregular care. Give your nails a Cutex manicure regularly, and your hands will always have that peculiar attractiveness which adds a subtle appeal to one's whole appearance.

Cutex Cuticle Remover, Nail White, Nail Polish and Cold Cream are each 35 cents. The Cuticle Remover comes also in 65 cent bottles. You can get Cutex in any drug or department store in the United States, Canada and England.

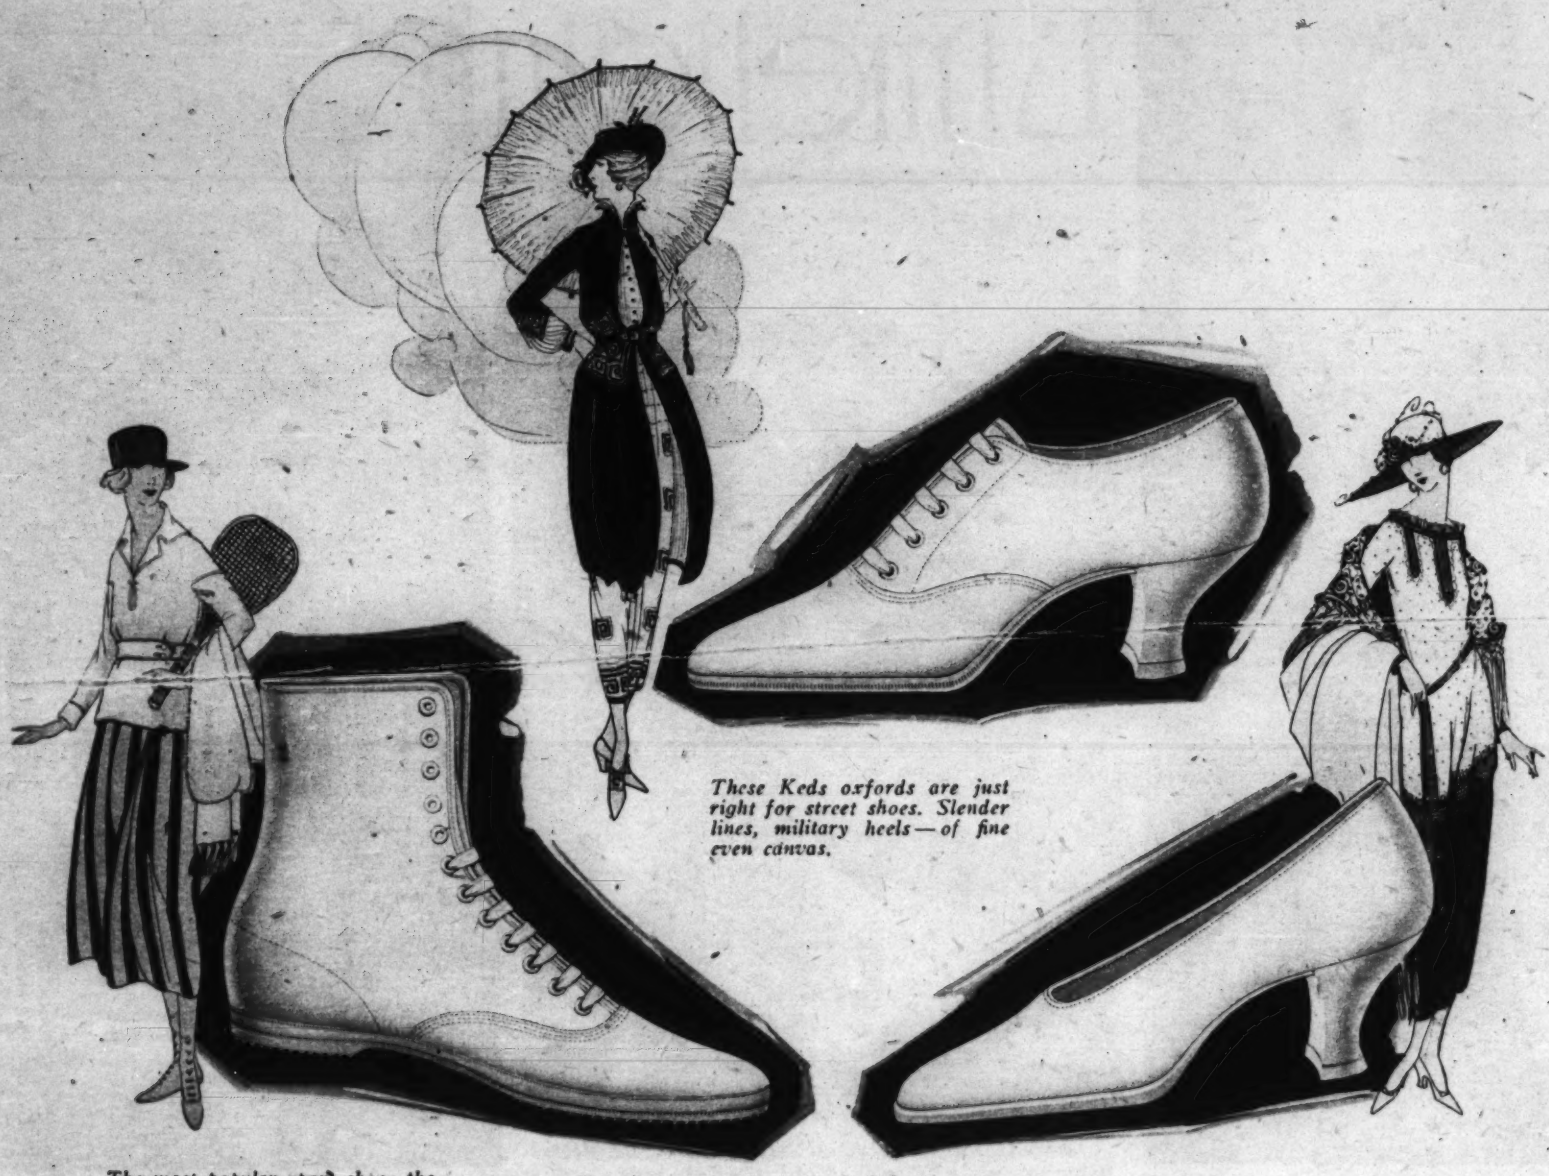
Makes NEW Again



These Keds oxfords are just right for street shoes. Slender lines, military heels—of fine even canvas.

The most popular sport shoes the country over. These Keds are being worn at all the fashionable resorts. Snugly fitting ankle, light and springy. Also low oxford models.

Pumps that are correct with the dressiest frocks. These Keds have half Louis heels, long, graceful vamps.

How to select the right shoes for your summer gowns

Various new models and the costumes with which they are correct

IF you would be correctly dressed this season, you must select shoes that will be right with each gown.

For muslins, organdies and fluffy summer frocks, there are various trim pumps. Oxfords are correct for street wear and shopping. Sport shoes are to be worn more generally than before, but only with tailored costumes.

The most popular fabric for shoes this season is canvas. Keds represent a whole family of canvas rubber soled shoes with all the newest lasts and styles, and the various types of heel that are most seen: the Louis XV, the military, and the low athletic type.

Well-dressed women say they can find Keds that are appropriate for every gown. And so very reasonable are they that it is possible to have a wide variety of models in your summer wardrobe.

Some of the latest Keds models are made on entirely new lines and have leather shoe construction, welt construction soles and the reinforcements that give a shoe body. This makes a canvas rubber soled shoe that is just as dignified and as dressy as many of the most expensive leather shoes.

There are Keds for everyone—models for men and boys and many different kinds for children. Keds are made only by the United States Rubber Company. They have spent many years developing a line of stylish practical canvas shoes.

Your dealer will show you Keds. The appearance, the fit and the price will delight you. Look for the name Keds on the sole. For men and women, $1.50 to $7.00. Children, $1.15 to $4.50.

what is hair beauty?

THERE cannot be hair beauty unless there is first hair health. And hair health depends entirely upon the condition of the scalp and the tiny hair roots—they must have proper nourishment.

If Nature does not supply enough of the oil-food that nourishes the scalp and hair, the scalp becomes dry, sterile. Then comes dandruff, falling hair, perhaps baldness.

Everywhere men, women and children are preserving and beautifying their hair by the daily use of Pétrole Hahn. This daintily perfumed tonic contains just the proportion of oil-food (refined petroleum) necessary to the health of the scalp and hair.

Pétrole Hahn is a delightful hair dressing as well as a tonic. Become a daily user of Pétrole Hahn. Start with a bottle today and safeguard the health of your scalp and the beauty of your hair.

The War Gave Us This

The new antiseptic which healed wounds like magic. Now used for infected gums, skin eruptions and other ailments.

Package gives full directions for making proper strength solutions for all uses. The liquid keeps perfectly in a bottle, ready for use.

Thousands of soldiers died from blood poison and lockjaw in the early days of the war. All the old antiseptics, used for centuries, failed to control the wound infection. American scientists met this war emergency by producing the now famous chlorine antiseptic. With it, wounds often healed in one-fourth the usual time.

This same quick-healing antiseptic can now be supplied by druggists, in tablet form named Kloria. It is used, with surprising economy, by dissolving a few tablets in ordinary water.

Kloria is non-poisonous, doesn't smart, is soothing and harmless. Yet it destroys the most virulent germs on contact. No other antiseptic is anywhere near so effective.

For tender, bleeding, shrinking gums Kloria has proven itself the germ-destroyer which dentists have long sought. All gum soreness and bleeding usually disappear within one week. Likewise, it makes the most effective mouth-wash known for preventing tooth-decay, gum infections and contagious diseases.

Kloria has a quick-healing effect never before known in salves and other healing agents. Eczema, barber's itch, poison ivy and other skin infections fade away with amazing promptness. One application usually removes every particle of dandruff. Cuts, sores, boils and burns heal like magic—often in one-fourth the usual time. It has dozens of other uses in every home and factory.

This celebrated "million-dollar fire" of airplanes in France after the Armistice aroused a storm of mistaken criticism in this country. An investigation made later by Congress proved that only worn-out planes and parts had been destroyed.

Copyright by Underwood & Underwood, N. Y.

Like a powerful man who has not learned to rest

THE best commercial planes can fly only 135 hours without complete overhauling. The famous "million-dollar bonfire" of airplanes after the Armistice brought out even more surprising facts about military planes. During the war the average plane had to be scrapped after a few months.

Throughout hours of flight the airplane must be continually driven at furious, racing speed. That is why its life is usually measured in months, while the automobile's life is invariably measured in years.

Many men and women force themselves day after day to an exhausting pace in just this same way. In business or in pleasure they constantly tax their strength to the utmost.

Every one realizes that rest must alternate with work. But most people have not discovered the secret of a brief moment's relaxation at the proper time.

The leaders in world achievement have learned how to snatch moments of rest in the midst of crowded days. It is only this secret of momentary relaxation that has saved them from breaking down under the strain of their efforts.

Harriman, the great railroad builder, even at the most critical moments, could drop all business problems and in an instant become absorbed in his favorite author. Roosevelt used to pause to read jingles. Today many hard-driven business leaders gain this momentary recreation, as Woolworth did, from gorgeously furnished offices —from a vase of flowers or a beautiful statuette on their desks.

Each of these men had his own special way of getting momentary relaxation. It is surprising to find what extremely simple things—and how many different things—can afford this quick, refreshing rest.

Most of us have noticed, for example, that just washing or rinsing the hands is often wonderfully restful.

Today there is a new way—an inexpensive luxury—that makes this ordinary, pleasant act twice as effective. Next time you wash your hands in the middle of a busy morning or afternoon let this be a real momentary relaxation. Use Jergens Violet Soap. See what a delicious feeling of cool, fragrant cleanliness it gives you—how it soothes both mind and body.

This soap contains a remarkable cooling agent that refreshes and stimulates. The instant the cake touches the water it releases the living fragrance of violets.

Whenever you feel nervous or fatigued—after a trying conference—use Jergens Violet Soap. Use it for each of the five or six times you wash your hands every day—whether in the office or at home. The qualities that give it its unusual refreshing value make it delightful for general use. Only after using Jergens Violet Soap do you realize how refreshing, how magically rejuvenating the simple bathing of the face and hands can be.

You can get Jergens Violet Soap wherever soap is sold—15 cents a cake.

Send 6 cents—learn its instant refreshment

For 6 cents we will mail you a small size cake which will give you a new idea of how refreshing the simple act of washing your face and hands can be. Send today to The Andrew Jergens Co., 6531 Spring Grove Avenue, Cincinnati, Ohio.

If you live in Canada, address The Andrew Jergens Company, Limited, 6531 Sherbrooke Street, Perth, Ontario.

JERGENS VIOLET SOAP

TRANSPARENT

An Easy Way To Remove Wrinkles

Smiles and frowns—both cause wrinkles—because they stretch and crease the outer skin. But if neglected, wrinkles soon become deep and are hard to remove.

A healthy, vigorous skin is quite elastic, expanding and contracting naturally. But if the skin is neglected, it becomes too dry or too oily and loses its firmness and elasticity.

If your skin has become loose, flabby, or sags and is wrinkled, the new astringent skin treatment, with Graham Beauty Secret, will quickly restore it to its natural, healthy, vigorous condition.

Try this treatment: Before retiring, wash the face with warm water—not too hot. Do not use soap. Dry thoroughly—and apply Graham Beauty Secret—a soothing, astringent gray paste. Do not rub or massage the skin. When the paste has dried thoroughly, remove it with warm water, and apply Graham Skin Pure.

This treatment will tighten the cuticle or outer skin—nourish the cutis or inner skin tissues—smooth away the wrinkles—restore the natural elasticity—stimulate the circulation of the blood in the underlying tissues, and make your skin delightfully smooth, fine textured and vigorous—radiant with the glow of health.

The astringent skin treatment tightens the skin—also contracts coarse, enlarged pores, draws out blackheads, lifts up sagging skin, and bleaches a sallow, discolored skin without the slightest irritation or injury.

HOW TO GET GRAHAM BEAUTY SECRET

The better class of shops and toilet counters can supply you with Graham Beauty Secret and Skin Pure. If your dealer cannot—send us the coupon with $2.25, and we will mail you a full size jar of each—postage and war tax prepaid—with booklet, "Graham Astringent Skin Treatment," that gives complete instructions. Or—we will send the booklet Free if you will give your dealer's name.

Thin, stringy, oily hair—and a dandruff-choked scalp, make a girl painfully self-conscious when she knows some one is looking at her hair.

If her scalp is clean and soft and sweet as a baby's—

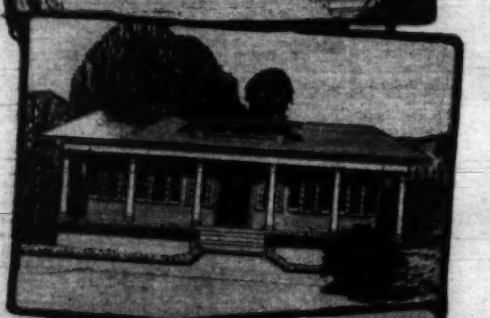
Aladdin Homes
Going up - Everywhere



THERE is no stoppage in the construction of Aladdin homes—they are going up everywhere. Uninterrupted building by this method of readi-cut construction continues throughout the country, reaching into every State of the Union. The Aladdin idea "carries on"—triumphant over material shortage.

Wherever you are, there is an Aladdin home being built near you. Preparations were completed long in advance by us to meet the needs of a tremendous call for new homes. Now that the crisis has come to the building industry, The Aladdin National Service rises supremely to the occasion—standing the heaviest tests—and meeting every demand.

Country-wide lack of material, strikes of the timber men, and all the difficulties of lumber manufacturing have not affected Aladdin production. Aladdin's foresight guarantees to prospective home builders the possibility of immediate accomplishment.

30% Saving on Labor

It doesn't take near as long to nail a cut-to-fit piece of lumber in place as it does to measure, saw, and then nail it. There you have the difference between the Aladdin System and the old fashioned System of construction. It's not surprising that our customers claim savings of $300, $425, $675 up to $1000. A carpenter's time is valuable. You can't expect to cut down your building cost if you waste his time. One man will do in six days, with Aladdin materials, what it requires ten days to accomplish without Aladdin's System. The Aladdin System scientifically prepares the materials and conserves the labor. You can save 30% on the cost of the labor when you build the Aladdin way. Certified records of thousands of Aladdin Home builders in every state prove these statements. You can prove these statements for yourself, for there is an Aladdin Home near you wherever you live. The book, "Aladdin Homes," sent free to prospective buyers, explains this completely.

18% Saving on Lumber

The lumber that's wasted costs just as much as the lumber that's used. The only possible way to reduce present high prices of lumber is to save the usual waste. The Aladdin System prepares all the lumber in our mills ready to be nailed in place. Waste of lumber is reduced to less than 2%.

The Aladdin System of Homebuilding has been practicing for 14 years the principle the world has only learned during the war—the elimination of waste. The Aladdin Book explains this system thoroughly, shows how 20 feet of lumber is cut from a 16 foot board. The great Aladdin Organization, composed of experts in every branch of homebuilding, stands ready to help you build your home at a saving. Put this group of experts to work on your problem.

Write for 100-Page Book Today

The Aladdin Book of Homes has a message for you. Amongst its pages, profusely illustrated in colors, leading home designs are presented to you. Aladdin's Dollar-a-Knot guarantee is proof of the high quality. Knotless lumber—the purest and clearest that ever came out of the forest—is the kind that is used in Aladdin Homes. This is evidenced by our famous Dollar-a-Knot Guarantee, which has now been in effect for over four years. This material is shipped to you in a sealed box-car, complete, ready-to-erect. PROPER SHAMPOOING is what makes beautiful hair. It brings out all the real life, lustre, natural wave and color, and makes it soft, fresh and luxuriant. Your hair simply needs frequent and regular washing to keep it beautiful, but it cannot stand the harsh effect of ordinary soap. The free alkali, in ordinary soaps, soon dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it. This is why leading motion picture stars, theatrical people and discriminating women use

WATKINS MULSIFIED COCOANUT OIL SHAMPOO

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

This clear, pure and entirely greaseless product cannot possibly injure, and does not dry the scalp or make the hair brittle, no matter how often you use it. Two or three teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and has the appearance of being much thicker and heavier than it is. It leaves the scalp soft and the hair fine and silky, bright, fresh-looking and fluffy, wavy and easy to do up.

You can get MULSIFIED COCOANUT OIL SHAMPOO at any drug store. A 4-ounce bottle should last for months.

Don't you know me? I am your caller of this morning. Your friend and believer. Who has doubted your success?"

to see poorly. But of course you are Genaro." He burst into loud laughter. "To you my life is valuable, even if it is not to myself. Well! I may as well tell you. I can never re-little know what you owe me—the torture of disgust I have gone through to keep that man good natured to you a little while longer. Every minute of it was a burning shame. But I endured it. I hoped and hoped, as you you have said—that I should be here. I wonder at it myself. Because it is so fortunate, I am not"—he waited to see how his words would be taken—"not altogether poor after all."

THE TEENIE WEENIES.

THE LITTLE FOLKS BUILD A SPRINKLING WAGON. By Wm. Donahey.

"W-W-W-WOW! ouch," j-j-jimminie f-f-fish hooks!" bellowed the Dunce, dancing around on one foot and rubbing frantically at his eye with the back of a very dirty hand.

Teenie Weenie heads popped out of the shoe house windows and from all directions the little folks came running, for the Dunce had a powerful voice and every one had heard his howls.

"What in the name of goodness is the matter?" asked the Old Soldier, stumping down the front steps of the shoe house.

"Oh c-c-c-crickety! Jimminie c-c-christmass!" howled the Dunce. "There's somethin' in my eye."

"Let me look at it," said the Doctor, hurrying up to the dancing Dunce.

The little Doctor examined the Dunce's eye and then very carefully wiped the corner of it with his tiny handkerchief.

"Well, here is what was giving you all the trouble," said the Doctor, holding up the handkerchief. "It's a bit of dust."

"J-j-j-jinks!" exclaimed the Dunce. "Is that all? I-I-I thought it was somethin' big. It felt almost as big as a w-w-w-wälnut."

"I know just how it felt, Dunce," said the Lady of Fashion, putting her soft white arm around the Dunce's neck. "I had a bit of dust in my eye yesterday and it hurt dreadfully."

"Allie same too muchie much dust," said the Chinaman. "Me allie time have muchie trouble gettin' dust on my clothes when me hang them out to dry."

"And it is almost impossible to keep the house dusted properly," added the Lady of Fashion. "I spend half my time dusting the furniture."

"It's mighty unhealthy to have all this dust flying around, and it seems to me that we need a sprinkling wagon very much," said the Doctor, nodding his head at the General.

"Quite right, quite right," said the General. "We'll have one right quick," and the General called the Turk and Paddy Pinn into the library, where the three talked about building a sprinkling wagon for some time.

For several days the little men worked hard and with the aid of a baking powder can, two spools, some wood and a bit of wire they made a very strong and handsome sprinkling wagon.

"I choose to drive the wagon," shouted the Dunce when he saw the snug little seat on top of the can, which had been provided for the driver.

"You couldn't drive, Dunce," said the Turk. "It takes somebody who understands mice."

"Well, I think I ought to drive, for if it hadn't been for me gettin' that dust in my eye we wouldn't have a wagon. I think I was re-re-responsible for the wagon, wasn't I?"

"Yes," smiled the Turk. "You might have been responsible for the wagon, but you are not responsible enough to drive a team of mice."

The Scotchman was chosen to drive the wagon, for he was very handy with the reins and an excellent mouse-man.

The wagon was filled at the creek, which ran back of the rosebush, and every day the Scotchman drove the tiny wagon around the Teenie Weenie houses and settled every last particle of dust.

TEENIE WEENIE GOSSIP.

The Old Soldier is carving a very handsome baking dish out of a hazelnut shell, which he intends to present to Mr. and Mrs. Lover on their wedding anniversary.

The Chinaman was painfully scalded one day last week when a thimbleful of clothes, which he was boiling, fell off the laundry stove and splashed over his right foot.

The Lady of Fashion and Mrs. Lover have been quite busy sewing for the last few weeks. The busy little ladies have made six comforters, eight pairs of curtains, four pillow-covers and three petticoats out of an old silk necktie.

One of the Lover twins fell into half an English walnut shell full of rainwater yesterday afternoon and if the Clown had not been near and pulled the little fellow out he might have drowned.

* *

Gogo has been under the Doctor's care for several days, but he is much better now and is able to help the Cook prepare the Teenie Weenie meals. The little chap was helping the Sailor roll a potato out of the storehouse when he strained his back lifting.

TEENIE WEENIE DOLL

The Teenie Weenie fire department made a quick run one evening last week and put out a lighted cigarette which some careless person had thrown near a patch of dry grass.

The little folks are much excited over a new Teenie Weenie book, which has just been printed. The Dunce says that it feels fine to be in a book.

Grandpa has been rather peevish of late, as he lost the upper set of his false teeth. The old gentleman put the teeth on the window sill when he went to bed and he thinks that an ant dragged them away during the night.

The Cowboy tanned three beautiful caterpillar skins lately, which he expects to make into an overcoat for next winter.

Tess Bone and Buddy Guff are much together and the Teenie Weenies expect almost any time to hear of an engagement! "It's so romantic," says the Lady of Fashion. "Nonsense," hisses Grandpa through his toothless gums.

Don't you know me? I am your caller of this morning. Your friend and believer. Who has doubted your success?"

The fragments of a broken fiddle slipped from the old fellow's grasp as he stood, blinking, like a man trying to wake from a sleep.

"My success? Why"—he pointed to the heap of splinters on the floor—"there lies my success. That is how I have paid for my mistake. I blot it out. For"—his hands came up to his face—"how could we ever live on together?"

Earleigh had no ready answer to that, and Savarac babbled on, to himself. "That young man this morning—he said something about doubts. He was right. I thought there was something strange about his coming. Somewhere I have seen that young man before. He must have been sent to warn me. The doubts themselves were a warning. I should have known. It was too terrible a chance to take."

He stood thinking, then sank to his knees beside his bench, and his two yearning arms reached out to the unfinished fiddles still upon it.

"Ah, my beauties, my poor dumb darlings! God alone knows what thoughts I put into you—how I tried to give you sweet voices! I saw you in the hands of genius, bringing solace to sore hearts, adding a new beauty to the world. I saw people happy at hearing you, without even knowing who made them so happy. That is what your voices said to me. But if to others you are tubs"—his head fell forward on his arms; sobs burst from him—"it is useless. Nothing else matters. I have only deluded myself."

Slowly Savarac rose to his feet, in resolve. Turning to Earleigh, he said, "My friend, whoever you are, you are right. It was wrong to have staked so much on such a venture. That means that here"—he tapped his forehead—"here we have the defective carving. Very well!" He whisked about to the bench and felt for a chisel. But Earleigh interposed.

"So?" the old gentleman puzzled. "I seem to see poorly. But of course you are Genaro." He burst into loud laughter. "To you my life is valuable, even if it is not to myself! Well! I may as well tell you. I can never repay. It is over. I am nothing but an old man, terribly poor. Kill me if you wish. Nothing is gained by letting me live. Be kind, and begin." He sank back into his worn old chair, tears trickling down his cheeks. "I can't live on and face things now."

It was the moment for a woman, and Jacqueline knew it. Crouching on the floor beside him, she took his hand and laid it against her thin cheek. "Father," she said, "here's one who believes in you, no matter what. And I can tell you that Genaro will never threaten you again. I am sure of that. Do you hear? Do you understand?"

But her words had electrical effect. Who she was, Savarac knew well enough, and had recoiled from her touch, because her very presence accused him. Rising with a start, he put her from him, none too gently. "Never bother me again? As if I considered him a bother! But never again, you say? Never?"

It was nothing to the old artist to have wrecked his fiddles—a flourish of self-pity. Out of his abundant powers he could always create others. The power was there, but where now were the means? That "never" was a locking of the last door in his face, forever.

Instantly the old passion was alive again. The maddened man quivered as the sense of overwhelming loss came home to him. "Isn't Genaro with us—out there?" he thundered down at Jacqueline's bowed head. "You have lost him? He is lost to me? Ha-a!" And he would have brought down his fist, but that again Earleigh interfered.

The girl was ready enough in her own defense, and Earleigh learned at last the reason for that haunting note in her voice, as she leaped to her feet, a tower of wrath. "Father! You sold me to that man! Everything else I willingly endured for your sake. I endured even him, horrible as he was. You little know what you owe me—the torture of disgust I have gone through to keep that man good natured to you a little while longer. Every minute of it was a burning shame. But I endured it. I hoped and hoped, as you did, for the hour of success, when I could send him flying, his money all paid. But he—he asked too much. Do you understand?"

"As for that——" Earleigh was eager to say something. But the father was speaking. Jacqueline's stinging words had brought him to himself—had waked, that is, the old fanaticism in him from its moment of humility.

"So!" he gasped, panting heavily. "I give my life, I give my all, a lifetime of frightful toil and struggle, for the loftiest purpose a man can have—to add a little something to the world's store of beauty. It is all too little. But what did your mother not do to aid me! To you I owe my ruin. I saw how it was with you, and I hastened. That haste has ruined all. A year longer—one more year—and we should be rich and honored. Look at us now! When I needed it most, when victory was within my grasp, when you might have obtained me the little more time, you——"

"Father!" Jacqueline called, to block the infamy before the stricken man could utter it.

"You could have managed," they heard his mumbled retort, for he had turned his back to her eyes, and was interested in his broken fiddles. Tenderly he lifted and fondled the fragments of broken wood. Quite unexpectedly he had stumbled upon a plausible excuse to himself for his failure. "That explains it all" he was muttering. "I hastened. That did it!"

One broken fragment he neglected—the figure of Jacqueline, crumpled down on the dusty boards, weeping over their broken lives.

Earleigh for a moment was overmastered by feeling. There was in him that which, for all his wrath, made him pity the fanatic father almost as much as the girl. When he thought he had command of himself he began groping for words.

"Monsieur de Savarac, it is strange—as you have said—that I should be here. I wonder at it myself. Because it is so fortunate. I am not"—he waited to see how his words would be taken—"not altogether poor after all."

Savarac whipped about, too astonished to speak.

"By great good fortune," Earleigh went on, "you have overlooked one of your violins. It lies on the table out there. I will buy it, if you will let me. You may name your price."

Savarac brought his hand to his ear as if to make sure of what he heard.

"I still have faith in your skill, monsieur," Earleigh was saying, "but not in your temper. And there seem to be other cares that should be spared you." He smiled, to point his double meaning, and laid his hand on Jacqueline's shoulder.

Savarac had missed the subtlety. His head was full of other thoughts as he came closer to Earleigh and peered at him curiously. "So!" he said. "You—you have money? And you will buy? That is an idea! That—is—an—idea." He turned back to his bench, picked up an unfinished top, and studied it. "There is a mistake." He touched a curve with his finger. "No more mistakes next time! I must—I must——. Why!" he stammered, and turned again to Earleigh with the light of a blinding vision in his face.

For a second he was silent, open eyed, open mouthed. Suddenly he covered his face with his hands and fell back into his ancient work chair with a great burst of a cry.

"Then I can begin again!" he said.

It was not to be Savarac's fortune to begin again. The shocks of that day were too much for him. Into the silences he followed his broken fiddles. One only remains, in the keeping of a certain young man and his wife. Sometimes they lend it to a celebrated public performer. And is it altogether out of key with the perverseness of human affairs that he has made that violin famous? People hear in its tone a startling resemblance to the joyous, welcoming voice of a woman.

The EAVESDROPPER by Oney Fred Sweet

THE wind howled down the block of street that was dark except in splotches. Lights were clustered in flower formations and strung like beads in front of the movie that announced "Comedy—Laughter and Fun—Not a War Film." The electrics had been permitted to remain, current on, in a window where furs, staggering in price, might tantalize evening pedestrians. The candy store was open, too, with its wares skyrocketed by the sugar shortage. And in the second story of the black building near the corner yellow panes indicated activity within; the Louie Haney post of the American Legion was just coming to order.

A follower of Leon Jastoff was interested in the session of the new post. He had taken up a position behind the half opened door in an anteroom where he might see and hear all that transpired without being seen. He was in an exultant frame of mind. Did not the headlines of the few remaining unsold newspapers down on the corner news stand tell of strikes over the country? Was it not a bleak night, with bleak nights and days to follow? Was not the white heat of patriotism that had gone with war times turning to ashes? Was it not a harassed people with nothing to lose who overthrew governments?

The follower of Jastoff, hidden away in the anteroom, smiled as he watched the Louie Haney post being called to order. What he saw and heard pleased him. He had been curious and a bit doubtful about such organizations forming all over the country. Now his curiosity was being satisfied and his doubts were being swept away.

"Don't you tell me not to throw my cigaret butts on the floor." It was O'Leary complaining. He sat over in the corner—a mere kid. Nineteen, maybe, short, slim, smooth shaven, though it had been three days since there had been a razor blade on his chin. "Don't try to boss me around that way. I was through with that stuff when I got my discharge."

The blonde Johnson, who had just called O'Leary to task, leaned over, crouched in prize fighter attitude. The two glared at each other for a moment and then smiled. It was a part of the boylike banter that was going on all about the room. There was a gleam in the eyes of the man who peered through the crack made by the half opened door in the anteroom. Gleefully he would report to Jastoff the attitude toward army discipline now escaped—that and the boylike banter.

Occasionally a French phrase was used. Here and there a flannel shirt or a navy pea-jacket or a khaki overcoat lingered. But there were no reminiscences. It was no G. A. R. where long-bearded men talked emotionally of charges and raids and campfires, uttered deep-throated eulogies of their old leaders, sung ballads of the period through which they had passed. The kids in the room were discussing the selling of tickets for a dance and the possibility of securing a certain jazz orchestra for the event.

It was the opinion of the follower of Jastoff that the G. A. R. bunch would turn over in their graves if they could see what had followed them. In spite of his safe seclusion, his glance was furtive as he studied the presiding officer—a clean cut youth with rapid fire slang and merciless shafts of sarcasm. The chairman was twisting his face and yelling at a new arrival at the door:

"Red Cross funds! Have you got any of 'em, Shilkoski? Well, bring 'em over here. Why in hell didn't ya report with 'em before?"

Shilkoski, his throat muffled in the collar of a 1920 overcoat, came over to the desk.

"We're voting on a new meeting night," remarked the chairman in the midst of checking up the money turned in. "Do you go to see your girl on Wednesday night, too?"

"Any night that suits the rest of 'em suits me," grinned Shilkoski, turning about and starting toward a seat with the others along the wall. "Stick with the gang and you won't get hurt."

As Shilkoski reached the row of seats the bunch shoved this way and that, to thwart his finding a location.

"As you were! Quiet over there!" rapped the chairman.

"You birds have got to observe the rules of order better than you have. When I give anybody the floor, he's got it until he gets through talking. You can't all make motions at once, like you did last meeting. A motion's got to be made and seconded." He trailed off into a monotone as he read from a recently secured small volume.

The follower of Jastoff behind the door shifted to a more comfortable position, and a derisive smirk came to his lips. Such a joke—a gathering of flippant, slangy youths with nothing on their minds but a forthcoming dance to which they were planning to take "their girls." Jastoff all along had insisted there was really nothing to fear from the organizations. Were not its members up against one of the stiffest economic problems the world had ever known—high rents, high priced food and clothes—a problem all the more acute for them because of the months they had given to the army? He would report to Jastoff that his snap judgment had been justified.

And Jastoff, with his knowledge of civilization throughout the ages, had also insisted that the flaws in the manner in which the war risk insurance was being handled but played into the hands of those who believed in no government at all. And were not these boys disgusted with the mistakes made in their allotments, and their insurance receipts, and their letters to the department that remained unanswered? And Jastoff had pointed out the proportion of the men who had been drafted into the army—taken whether they wished to go or not. And he had often called attention to the numerous nationalities. Jastoff had doubted very much that these nationalities had fused.

There was no excitement to the meeting, no thrill, no tenseness, no flaming oratory. These lads jostling with one another, borrowing each other's cigarets, bantering back and forth with flings of wit and satire—these lads may have been at Chateau Thierry, in the Argonne wood, at Chipilly Ridge, but evidence of the experience was not apparent in the saucily arranged necktie of the clerk in the real estate office, the belted overcoat of the insurance solicitor, the rough weather uniform of the taxi driver, the fancy vest of the writer of syncopated songs.

The chairman was speaking. He was a nervously thin youngster, a broad smile ever playing on his lips:

"I know some of you fellahs had a date for tonight, but there's two or three more matters we gotta take up. About the Danny McIntyre funeral"—the smile twisted, but there was no altering of the voice—"did you birds that were appointed go down there?" He looked beyond the desk light with a frown.

A lad by the window came to his feet. He still wore his cap, a checked affair that appeared to be several sizes too large. "We were all down there."

Here they were, in the half lit, half heated hall, by themselves. Here they were, isolated from planning profiteers, clashing classes, a wrangling world.

The man behind the half opened anteroom door decided that he would report to Jastoff that it might have been a meeting of any sort, the matter most under discussion being a dance to be held, for which tickets were to be sold—a benefit that would help provide suitable quarters. He would tell Jastoff that he was right, the country was in a lethargy—a mere shell, easy to wreck. Five million gray-bearded and serious men, bound together, might furnish an obstacle against the pulling down of what had been built, but if this was a representative organization of what had replaced the G. A. R.—humph'

It was growing late. A street car clanged below. The movie had let out. The lights had been extinguished in the window that displayed the high priced furs. The man behind the anteroom door yawned.

"There's one more matter, fellahs. I've got a resolution here." The chairman carefully placed his cigaret to the far edge of the desk. "It's going the rounds, and we'll act on it here. 'Be it resolved, That all aliens who sought exemption from the draft by taking out first citizenship papers and who are now caught agitating against the government be immediately deported.' What is your pleasure, gentlemen?"

"I move you, sir, that the resolution be adopted," snapped a shipping clerk who a moment before had been teasingly practicing a hammerlock hold on the coal wagon driver next to him.

"Second the motion," blurted a shoe clerk who remembered very vividly a certain night that he had spent in a shell hole.

"All in favor say 'Aye,'" came from the chairman like the crack of a whip.

"Aye!"

And the man behind the anteroom door quaked from the concussion of the "aye's" roar. Out of the tail of his eye he peered to where thirty jaws were suddenly set firm, to where thirty pairs of eyes flashed danger. The dimly lit hall seemed suddenly illuminated, and one seemed to feel the presence of the spirits of all the men who had struggled for the country since its beginning. At first faint, and then coming nearer, until there was a great burst of sound, a thousand bands could be heard playing the country's marching songs in medley.

"Damn it!" the chairman was saying, the lips on which a smile swept so easily thin set, "if I had my way, I'd make that resolution ten times stronger than it is. I'd like to get my hands on one of those —— ——, —— and turn him into the middle of this bunch right now!"

The man behind the anteroom door peered no more, not even from the tail of his eye. He could see the flash of those thirty pairs of eyes without looking—the set of those thirty jaws. He stole down the dark stairs, glancing shiveringly ever and anon back over his crouched shoulder, and scurried to—to report to Jastoff.

MICE AND MEN

By Katherine Newlin Burt

Blue Ribbon Fiction

THE STORY THUS FAR—Merrial Houlton's normally sunny outlook on life is clouded by two regrets. First, the estrangement between her dead mother's English family and her father, with whom Merrial's relatives have had nothing to do since her mother was married and went to live on a western ranch. And, second, the hurt she has inflicted on Tripp Hart, an old time playmate from the west, whom she has sorrowfully rejected as a suitor. When her father tells her he has failed in business, Merrial announces that she is going to England to visit her mother's people while he is getting on his feet again, and to carry out certain plans about which she will tell no one. The family in England—Alice and Winifred Beaufort, their mother, and Hubert, an invalid brother—receive her with mixed emotions, but she proceeds blithely to make friends in her own way. Things, she finds, are rather at sixes and sevens. Her own brother, Dick, who has been in England at school, turns out to be a hopeless expatriate, ashamed of his American origin, which he has kept a secret. Alice Beaufort has met him, without knowing that he is her first cousin, and has fallen in love with him. Winifred is unhappy over an affair with Kenneth Stanton, a young man who appears to be neglecting her. The pitiful plight of Hubert, the invalid, arouses Merrial to prompt action, and she enlists her father's aid in sending over an American specialist to examine the boy. Then she astonishes the Beauforts by moving, bag and baggage, over to the home of Aunt Jane Coke, another of the English relatives, poor, but proud as Lucifer, and to Miss Coke's consternation calmly makes her kitchen the center of a flourishing neighborhood trade in quince preserve. Also she cables to Tripp Hart, asking him to help her find someone who will buy the recipe. One morning a letter from Gertrude Hart, Tripp's sister and a notorious flirt, brings word of her engagement to Kenneth Stanton, whom she has met in Paris. Kenneth's neglect of Winifred is thus explained, and Merrial, when she meets him on her way to deliver some of her preserve, mischievously offers to read him part of Gertrude's letter.

SEVENTH INSTALLMENT.

Lord Rivington.

SHE had a hand on the letter, when Kenneth's cold fingers closed about her wrist in sudden emotion.

"Please don't!" said he emphatically, and withdrew his hand with a jerk.

There was a long silence. Stanton's discomfort was a consuming fire. Merrial looked alarmingly intelligent, and her eyelashes seemed, to his sidelong glances, to curl up more than usual.

"I am staying with my Aunt Jane now, you know," she said presently, in a casual tone. "The girls come over to see me now and then. Especially Winifred. She——"

"How do you like your Aunt Jane?" demanded Stanton sharply. He had a fierce desire to pass on his discomfort to this self-possessed young dryad, whose eyes he felt sure were laughing at him under their long, light lids. He knew Miss Coke well, had known her ever since his mischievous boyhood, when she had brought upon him many a sound and well earned thrashing by her reports of misconduct at the big house on the hill. He knew that she had been averse to her sister's American marriage, and knew, too, that she had threatened no cordial welcome to the intruding niece. Therefore he put his question sharply and followed it up by an unflinching and penetrating gaze.

Merrial looked up simply. Her pupils were big.

"I have always loved Aunt Jane," she answered quietly.

Kenneth whistled, as if he had whistled for a lagging dog, but Merrial's face suddenly mounted a delicate, pink flag of annoyance. She paused, having reached the high road.

"I am sorry you wouldn't listen to my careful excerpts from Gertrude's letter," she said lightly, "but I suppose your correspondence has been larger than you admit. You probably know just what Gertrude Hart's letter would be like, don't you? Or were you afraid of falling in love with her, perhaps?"

"You are an imp," growled Kenneth to her vanishing figure. "Not a witch, but an imp!"

And he ground his heel into the gravel.

"I wonder if she knows it all, or if it was a chance shot? I never saw such eyes."

And then he remembered Winifred's brook brown eyes, and for an instant bowed his head on the high gate. When he looked up his glance followed Merrial wistfully.

"I wish I had told her," he muttered. "Imp or no imp, she would be a friend worth having. I know that she wants to help, but she means me to speak first. And of course I can't!"

And he returned to his house rather more empty of immediate consolation than before, but hugging a secret and unreasoning faith in the ultimate intercession of the American imp.

And Merrial passed on along the road, divided between admiring his sense of honor and railing at his blind stolidity.

Presently, coming in sight of the Beauforts' chimneys as she paused on the hilltop, she pondered whether she would drop in there for lunch.

"I wonder if Aunt Margaret has forgiven me yet, for that dreadful talk about Hubert?" Her lips pinched themselves together, as she recalled the awful ordeal, and realized just what her aunt thought about it. She bravely turned toward the Grange.

As a matter of fact, a sense of blankness had fallen on the Beaufort household since Merrial's secession to Aunt Jane's. Even Alice missed the excitement of constant mental conflict, and Mrs. Beaufort wondered why meal times had become so vacant of consecutive talk.

As for Winifred, she felt so deeply the need of her more experienced cousin's support and silent tonic sympathy that she had even bearded Aunt Jane in her den at unappointed hours. It was so desolate to drift through day after day at home, even without Kenneth's blue, self-detached companionship—for he had long forgotten how to be his old self! And now he did not come at all! She could not bring herself to tell Alice, or ask her advice, because she feared her sister's bluntness. Today, returning home after her meeting with Stanton, she felt more than ever the need of Merrial's distracting presence.

If Merrial had reason to doubt the warmth of her aunt's welcome there was at least no shadow of doubt concerning Hubert's greeting, as she drew near the veranda, where he lay on his couch. It was scarcely the shout of an invalid:

"Madre, girls, here's Merrial! How splendid! I thought you'd never come!"

And, flinging aside the Navajo blanket lying across his knees, he pushed himself up against his cushions, and held out an eager, thin hand.

Merrial was so touched that she could not speak.

"Why haven't you been here before?" he asked reproachfully. "The girls can get over to see you, but I can't, you know. And, O crickey! Bother it, the doctor's coming this afternoon to pull me about, and that'll take such ages out of the time!"

"We'll make time for one good long story before I go, anyhow," promised Merrial. "And do you know what, Hubert? One of these days you'll have to see a real cowboy; we'll make him show you all the stunts."

"I'll bet he can't throw a lariat any better 'n you," wagered Hubert loyally. "Perhaps Dr. Unwin will let me try my hand at it, one of these days. He keeps saying he hopes to; but he never says I may! But he's a good old scout, just the same!" he added, generously.

"Hello, Merrial!"

Alice came towards them with her usual abruptness, but with a friendly smile. "Taking a holiday from housework and quince preserve?"

Of course, the Beauforts had heard of the jelly-making enterprise. Mrs. Beaufort was vaguely troubled about it for Aunt Jane's sake, who, she felt sure, would find it annoying.

"Well," Alice had said characteristically, when the subject was being discussed in family conclave, "I think it's a very good thing. It's better than living on people and wearing expensive clothes when one's father's a bankrupt."

After lunch, Merrial let herself be led upstairs by Winifred, and the two settled down on the window seat.

"You're not looking so awfully fit these days, Win," Merrial said. "What's wrong?"

"I don't feel awfully fit. But it's nothing much."

"I saw Kenneth Stanton today," Merrial remarked casually, looking out of the window. He didn't look very fit, either. Must be the weather!"

"Maybe it is," murmured Winifred, and suddenly her head drooped to Merrial's lap.

Merrial's light and tender fingers caressed the smooth brown hair.

"It's funny," said she, "how wonderfully close people are about their real thoughts and feelings, isn't it? Here we are in a little world with just so many little years to live, and just so few people to open out to, and instead of opening out while we can and showing our true colors, we shut up like silly clams. I sometimes wish strong men would scream when they pinch their fingers, and women would faint at anything at all, the way they do in Cooper's novels."

"Do strong men scream in Cooper's novels?" murmured Winifred shakily.

"No, you silly; but there's something irritating in all these miserable, silent, boxed-up faces. And sometimes opening up would be not only—O, such a comfort! but very often a real help."

A sob escaped Winifred.

"Honey, dear!" Merrial bent over her. "Why dont you just go and ask him to tell you what is wrong?"

"I—I did," gasped Winifred, too grief-stricken to wonder at Merrial's perspicacity. "He wouldn't tell. He said he c-couldn't."

There was a sorrowful silence, during which Merrial's caressing fingers spoke for her.

Suddenly up came Winifred's face, flushed and quivering.

"O, he's in some dreadful trouble. And he's shut me out. I can't bear it! I only want to be with him always—even in the bad places. O! most of all in the bad places."

"I know," said Merrial, with widened pupils; "you're like that. You go with them to India and spoil your complexion. And to the colonies and slave with them! If you knew how I envy you those women!"

"I envy them," said Winifred, "for they are with the men they love."

And then there was another long silence.

"When did he begin to be this way?" asked Merrial presently, in the delicate, reverent tone that draws confidence like a leech.

"When he came back from Paris after Christmas. Before that he was—O, I know he was——"

"Of course, he was and he is. Any one could see it by the way he looks at you. He hasn't changed."

"You truly think so?"

Some of the old peach-flush was stealing up into Winifred's cheek.

"But I'd be a bat if I didn't! It's outside circumstances, and I've a notion that it's just a matter of time, and—and impertinence before it comes out all right."

"Impertinence? What odd things you do say!"

Merrial sighed.

"Yes," said she, "they must sound odd. I do wish I didn't have to be so mysterious. Somehow, I'm always having to be mysterious. O! There's Dr. Unwin. I'll get him to drive me back with him—what luck! Good-by, Win! Cheer up! Don't worry! I know what I'm saying, and I'm sure I'm right."

And she was off down the stairs.

Dr. Unwin was more than willing to drive her over. He helped her elaborately into his car, and asked after the preserve.

"She's all right, thank you," replied Merrial, with absent-minded gravity. "I want to talk with you about Hubert."

"Er-er," began Dr. Unwin.

"O, I know all about professional etiquette. But, you see, I'm Hubert's cousin, and I want most terribly to help, if I can. I made poor Aunt Margaret tell me all about it, before I went to stay with Miss Coke, so you won't have to tell me any secrets. What I want to know is this," and she looked up eagerly into the doctor's seriously beaming face: "If I could get a famous Boston surgeon, Dr. Reval, to come over and operate, would you feel there was at least a thread of hope?"

After that Dr. Unwin said "Er-er" no longer. He knew that Reval was one of the greatest hip specialists. He sat up and talked shop, and spared no technical term in describing Hubert's case. They sat in the car a full half hour in front of Miss Coke's gate and then, just as Merrial was about to get out, she sat down again. Her face was white. Her eyes expressed a panic of remembrance.

"O, Dr. Unwin! Take me back; O, please!" she besought him wildly.

"Of course, of course!" he cried, starting the car at once. "What—what's wrong?"

"O! Drive us fast as possible, please," gasped Merrial.

The doctor obeyed. He was quite pale himself.

"I should be very much flattered," said he, with a pleading look at the stiff and conscience stricken face beside him, "if you would sufficiently trust me to tell me what is distressing you, Miss Houlton."

Merrial turned her eyes upon him. "I promised Hubert a good long cowboy story before I went, and I quite forgot," she said tragically.

That evening Merrial made a pretense of eating a warmed-over meal under Aunt Jane's disapproving eye. Aunt Jane herself had finished dinner long before the doctor's car had drawn up a second time before her gate, and had been standing grimly on the dining room threshold to greet her niece. It could hardly be called a greeting, however, being limited to two words. It had been: "You're late!" No more than that, but something in the tone of the two words suggested a volcano of withheld displeasure.

Now Merrial was very tired. She had worked hard, walked far, and given out much during the day, and the tale of cowboys' heroism amid burning prairies and stampeding buffaloes had drawn on the last of her reserves. It took all her self-control to sit quiet under the stern gray gaze, and to endure the tapping of Aunt Jane's bony fingers on the table edge. She was homesick, and suddenly her English quest turned to ashes in her mouth. Everything would be a failure, quince preserve and all! Why, Tripp had not even troubled to answer her last cable. He probably thought her scheme a bit of childish nonsense. No one was satisfactory; everything was out of gear. And, O, how dreary the little, plain room looked by lamplight, how unappetizing the tasteless food, her ugly Aunt Jane in her rusty silk, with the heavy lines of bitterness scarring her cheek.

Merrial leaned back in her chair and let her hands lock together hopelessly in her lap. How could she ever have hoped to win the love of these hard English hearts? A cold, grim race, she decided, that cherished antagonisms to the third and fourth generation, and loved its own kind only. And yet her mother had been one of the cold, grim race. And Aunt Jane was her mother's sister!

Imagination suddenly rubbed out the bitterness and age from Aunt Jane's face under the lamplight and repainted it for Merrial, a handsome, fresh colored girl face with spirited eyes and ruddy, generous lips.

"Aunt Jane," said Merrial in a tired little voice, "are you displeased with me?"

"Here we are with just so few people to open out to, and instead of opening out while we can we shut up like silly clams."

bow. Give wood that is already old true Stradivarius shaping, and what violins will you not have! So, monsieur, I bought old wood, old maple and deal, from some of the oldest houses in Italy—three hundred years old. Time had done his part already. Next for Stradivarius."

"Yes," said Earleigh, "I was thinking of Stradivarius."

"I am coming to that," Savarac went on, heedless of the note of skepticism. "It took me years, but in the end I have stolen his secrets. In a Paris repair shop I mended for years the finest instruments in Europe. More than one old jewel I tore open to discover its soul. I dissolved the varnish from three old broken marvels, to learn the forgotten formula. The result is, monsieur, I know the violin as—as Pasteur knew the human body. I now had the very hand of Stradivarius himself. Ten years till I could copy his varnish! But, monsieur, I have copied it—bettered it! Wait! You shall see."

Again the chevalier scuttled into his workroom, and again Earleigh's face relaxed in a smile of wonderment. One ear cocked as it was on the door listening for mademoiselle, it was impossible for him not to be swept up into the glow of this enthusiast.

In a twinkling the old man had returned, bearing a violin swathed in silken wrappages as a mother handles a babe.

"Monsieur," he laid the instrument on a table beside Earleigh, "see!" He turned his handiwork under his eager eyes. "Perfect, perfect! You little know how perfect it is. This top, it is the seventh I have made for this violin alone. The back is the third. Glance at the modeling—more luscious, more flowing than any Strad. With your own ears you have heard the fruits of my labors. What think you, hein? And this is perhaps the poorest of my thirty. Thousands of artists and wealthy amateurs are clamoring for Strads, at any price, that do not exist. They may have mine, at $20,000 apiece! That is, the wealthy amateurs may. Understand me, monsieur." Savarac straightened up. "I am not sordid. Half of my violins I am saving for artists—budding genius, too poor to buy. What joy it will be to give them! Not the poorer ones, either, such as this one. One of them shall always be my own—one of them, the best, the only violin in the word! Such a violin has no price, monsieur. It is the forty years of my toil and struggle. It is my life.

"They are testing it this very day—the symphony players. This day I am to visit their office and receive their happy verdict. Once I have their approval, monsieur, I am made at last. So then"—Savarac was walking about again, excitedly—"as I told you, this is the great day of my life. This day crowns all. You will believe, perhaps, that I am impatient for my reward?" He whipped out his watch. "Will that Jacqueline never come!" He stamped a foot. "She is bringing me my best coat back from the cleaner's. One must dress the part, monsieur."

In this rare opportunity of a sympathetic listener old Savarac was perhaps pardonably inflated. The younger man perfectly understood, and smiled indulgent appreciation.

"Yes, monsieur," the chevalier was running on, "in a few hours you shall see de Savarac exalted—he whose mannerisms have given you a little inward amusement!" he laughed. "But hark! Will that hussy of mine never come?"

That, precisely, was Earleigh's thought.

"Ah, well," the father was sighing, "what are a few minutes more after years and years of waiting!"

"Forty years!" Earleigh caught him up. "What a hell of waiting!"

"Monsieur, it was frightful!" the old man agreed.

"Think of the days and days of patient carving!" The younger man was now quite stirred by the older's vision. "And now, after forty years of it, this final test! What a tremendous game you have been playing—against Silence! It is magnificent! It is a poem! I wish I could write it. But—have you never had doubts, monsieur?"

"Doubts, my boy? Night upon night of them! How wonderfully you comprehend these things! But, after all"—moved by a sudden impulse, Savarac took up the precious fiddle—"after all," he said quietly, "the answer to every doubt lies here." Tenderly he placed the instrument under his chin. The bow was poised in waiting. The moment was heavy with expectancy. But the waiting stroke was stayed by the now unmistakable music of footsteps on the stair.

"Ah!" the chevalier breathed in relief. "Jacqueline, at last!" He opened the door, to make sure. "My Jacqueline, and her fiancé," he turned to say proudly. "Monsieur, wait till you have seen my faithful daughter, and the rich husband my coming fame has won for her."

Fiancé! Earleigh winced at the word. So that incredible person was still about! Nevertheless he himself was to see her again! His heart beat out the quick tempo of his expectancy, as Savarac swung wide the door, like an orchestra conductor ushering in the diva. The footsteps pattered nearer. And in a moment, alone—though Earleigh scarcely noticed the fact—she entered.

She entered. And in the second or two of suspense before she saw him it seemed to Earleigh that he himself was really seeing her for the first time. The change in her appearance shocked him, but now the whole story of her life of yearning and denial, which he had only guessed before, looked out from her eyes pointedly enough. Illness and tension, in thinning her face, had enlarged them and left them lovelier and more haunting than ever. The dripping dress might have faded, but the wistful, patient smile had not. All that had gone into Savarac's fiddles, and waited and hoped to come out of them, Earleigh saw embodied in that weary girl. A great wave of pity welled up in him—till the father folded her within his arms and kissed her. That outrage brought Earleigh to life.

"My daughter! At last!" the old fellow cried. "Faithful, even if frightfully late!" Then he snatched the parcel from her hand, and the passion of his life supplanted her. "Quick! Is everything here? But where is Genaro?"

Without waiting for an answer he darted away to his room, and in a moment they heard him whistling and swearing, as the maker of fiddles tried his hand at fashioning a tie.

With a pretty gesture in mimicry of resignation, the girl turned at last to Earleigh. "You? Here?" came the familiar, vibrant voice. She was candid enough in extending her hand, but there was a flush on her cheek for the flattery of his search of her. "I wonder that you found this place. And what a day for you to be here! Of course you've been talking with father. And that means"—she looked away—"you've discovered that he's possessed of a devil."

"I have discovered, mademoiselle," Earleigh said warmly, "that he's possessed of an angel also."

"I fear, monsieur," she shook her head, "this is not the day for pretty nothings, no matter how kindly intended."

"Ah, mademoiselle! Please don't mistake me! I meant what I said. I know what you expect of today. And your father is a wonderful man."

"God grant he is wonderful!" came the reply, so quickly and with such an intensity that it had Earleigh staring. He was still fumbling for something to say, as she went on, more kindly. "You make acquaintances quickly, monsieur. How did you persuade him to show you that?" She pointed to the violin on the table. "And what do you think of it?"

Again before he could answer, Savarac burst from his door and startled them. "Quick, Jacqueline! Fix it!" he was shouting.

"Ah, it's only his tie," she laughed and plied her fingers. "Poor darling."

"There! That's it! Do it well, my dear." Savarac tilted his chin. "But where's Genaro? I wanted him too to be here."

"I wonder if you do, father," Jacqueline said quietly, but in such a manner that her father lowered his face and studied her.

"Well, well," he growled, too absorbed to bother with subtleties then. "He may come when he's ready. It's his own affair."

The girl answered nothing. The father fled once more to his room. Evidently the subject embarrassed them both. And Earleigh was left to an awkward moment. "But what a wonderful day this will be to you both!" he tried to say something.

"Yes, monsieur. What a day this may be to us!" Again the double meaning, so that Earleigh was still at a loss what to say. Meanwhile Jacqueline had turned to a window and to the pouring sleet outside, and let the act speak for what she was seeing on the other side of the picture.

But Savarac was ready now, dressed for his great occasion, and burst again from his room. "Well, mes enfants, how do I look? My heart runs wild!" Giddy with his prospects, he embraced his daughter. "Be brave, my dear! Success is a potent wine. You must brace yourself for the shock of it. Soon I shall be bringing it back to you. She has been an angel to me, monsieur." Savarac looked proudly to Earleigh. "Take care of her well while I am gone."

Jacqueline did her best to join in his happy excitement. And truly he was an impressive figure as he kissed her forehead, almost with majesty. Like a venerable old portrait come to life, he stood for a moment in his long cloak, a faraway look in his black eyes. Then he swept them a magnificent bow and was gone.

For a full minute Jacqueline and Earleigh stood under the spell of him, as his footsteps died away down the stairs. "This is truly tremendous!" burst from Earleigh at length. "Shall I—may I take you somewhere, mademoiselle? But do let me stay with you!"

"Thanks, monsieur. But you needn't take me away. It is terrible weather. And he may not be gone more than a few hours. Perhaps Genaro will come after all. As for you, monsieur," she turned away again, "I fear you will be poorly entertained. You have come at such a strange moment."

"Entertained, mademoiselle? I am enraptured! I mean that sincerely. This is simply tremendous! Think what that man has achieved! Against what chances, and after so many years! I want to help you rejoice."

"If only, monsieur, it is to rejoice!"

"But, mademoiselle——"

"Oh, you think me poor spirited, no doubt. You see only that violin there. But do you see all that it represents? I wonder!" She was pacing the floor now, her fingers laced across her breast.

"It represents a noble dream; great daring, great skill. What more can it represent? The skill is there. And if those violins sing but a tithe of the passion I see has gone into them, what voices they will have!"

"Yes, monsieur. But they will sing of much else."

"Oh, I suppose——"

Halting before him, Jacqueline burst out, "They must sing, monsieur! If they do, they will sing of my mother! Yes, and of me! Ah, that man, that man! He has put us all, he has put everything into those fiddles—everything I have been able to earn, all he could borrow. My mother is buried in one of them. She adored him. She believed in him. Two adorable years they had together. Then came the devouring idea of those fiddles! It is a splendid dream, monsieur. But when I think how much depends upon it——" She resumed her pacing.

"But if he is successful? And why not? Then!——"

"The idea has occurred to others." She shook her head. "And they failed. Or they turned out one clever, superficial imitation. My father makes fine violins, they say. Experts have praised them before this. But real rivals of Stradivarius? Not yet, they have said. And he has begun all over again. I see, monsieur, why he has taken to you. In convincing you he is convincing himself again. My mother saw it all. Hers was a beautiful faith. She soon enough discovered she had married a lovable fanatic. She died for him. She worshiped him and he neglected her. He chiseled away at his wood when he was really chiseling away at her heart. One love he had—his fiddles. Yet she never complained of her rival. She gave him all her money—and once she was rich. She gave him her love, her life—while he courted the other love. If those fiddles can sing of that—!"

Earleigh tried to find words for his thoughts. "All that must speak out, mademoiselle! It must! God, what a prospect!"

His enthusiasm lighted a smile in her eyes. "O, I grant you, monsieur, if he has copied my mother's voice——"

"Then she will live again, and forever! What a beautiful immortality! This is stupendous! Ah, mademoiselle, what if others did fail at the idea? They had nothing but the money in view. The heart's passion was wanting. They had not what your father had—and has now—to inspire him."

"That's what a poet would say, monsieur," said Jacqueline softly, rewarding his pretty compliment with a swift flash of a smile. "Oh, I see you despise my hard reasoning. You think I am not my mother. Perhaps I have waited so long that I cannot believe any longer. Willingly enough I have sung for him, hoped for him. But too much has been asked of me. "And"—impetuously Jacqueline drew up and faced him—"have I not also dreamed, monsieur? Bah!" She whisked away again. "Who are you, monsieur, that you have these secrets out of me!"

"I am your friend, mademoiselle. Your brother. Whatever you wish."

Here something escaped the girl. "God knows I need a brother!" she said before she could control herself, and rushed to the window as if to cancel the remark.

In three strides Earleigh was at her side, to take command of her. "I'm going to play the brother at least! What can I do?"

Gazing blankly out of the window into the sleet, she shook her head. "Nothing can help, monsieur. There is no help, except in those violins."

"I see! That means, Who is Genaro? Doesn't it?"

With that she turned suddenly and blazed at him. "Never dare to mention that man to me again!" came the quivering command. Then she broke altogether, leaning wearily against the sash.

"I thought so!" said Earleigh. "In some way those fiddles enslave you to that man I've guessed that much already."

"He's been willing to lend," she helped him on. "He has taken my mother's place. I suppose"—she laughed—"his voice, too, will be heard! His money has helped so long to keep us going."

"And you have been his security!"

Jacqueline hid her face in her hands. Perhaps, in her agitation, she was not aware of the arm that stole about her. Perhaps she was aware of it.

"Come! Tell me it all," he pleaded. But he pleaded vainly.

The morning had gone. He thought of food, and, the day being what it was, left her alone, in spite of her protests, and went out himself to fetch some. Afterwards for a while he chattered of everything he could think of to cheer her; declared his unbounded faith in the fiddles; painted gay pictures of the future before her, and only a few hours away. But suddenly the swift prosperity of their friendship received a check.

"Listen!" she commanded. They both heard a noise at the door down below. "Is it father?"

They waited. "No, it's somebody having trouble with the latch. Maybe it's Genaro," he ventured. "You can't lose him!"

"I'm—I'm afraid!" Jacqueline willingly yielded to his firmer clasp of her.

Whoever it was, some one had begun on the first flight of stairs, but the step was heavy and stumbling.

"It's somebody with a heavy weight," Earleigh pronounced. "The expressman, probably. But he sounds as if he were drunk."

"Then I know who it is!" Jacqueline cried. "Where can I hide?"

"I am with you," Earleigh reminded her. His hope was that there might be some encounter, a satisfactory establishment of himself, a booting out of the invader. He stood to his feet, in front of Jacqueline, to be ready. The lagging footsteps drew nearer—and old Savarac himself entered the door.

Jacqueline gasped at his appearance, at his face. His clothing was muddied as if he had fallen or leaned against wagons in the streets. Half escaping from his grasp was a violin case. And through his staring eyes looked the utter vacancy of an emptied world.

Without a glance at them he shambled into his inner room, slowly closed the door, slowly locked it. For an instant there was silence, then the bump of the fiddle case slipping to the floor, the sound of him thudding into a chair, and at last a great cry. "Eugénie! What must you think of me now!"

Another moment of silence, and then a sudden bustling, and other sounds—the banging and crackling of wood, as of some one opening boxes—and high-pitched chatter in the old man's voice. "Good bye to you! Adieu! Be gone!" And another splintering of wood.

Earleigh and Jacqueline exchanged a startled, wondering look. "What is he doing?" she asked. "Monsieur!" called Earleigh.

"What!" the old man answered. "Even here he follows me! But you come too late!" And the ripping began anew.

Together Jacqueline and Earleigh threw their weight against the door. "He's—breaking them—all to pieces!" she gasped. "Don't you hear?"

"Monsieur, monsieur!" Earleigh was calling.

The crashing went on, to the accompaniment of Savarac's excited gibbering. "Tubs, you call them? You lie, I say! It is out of jealousy you call them tubs. This is a world of tubs! I might have known." Another crash to punctuate the eloquence.

"Save them! He is mad!" Jacqueline was crying, out of her lifetime of hunger. "They must be good! They must be! They are all we have in the world!"

"Save them?" Savarac caught up the words. "Very well! This is the way I save them!" Another crash. "So! I save them! I send them back to the stillness that bore them. Poof! Another one 'saved'! Good-by, my beauties. To me you sang; what else matters! What times"—there a catch in his voice—"what times we have had together!"

Earleigh had seized a chair, and with it he beat open the door. "Monsieur le Chevalier! Wait!" he said, rushing in.

"'Monsieur le Chevalier'?" Savarac, his hand stayed at this lucky inspiration of flattery, gazed in puzzled inquiry.

"Yes, Monsieur le Chevalier de Savarac.

MICE AND MEN

Blue Ribbon Fiction

By Katherine Newlin Burt

"I am not exactly pleased. You went out leaving me no word, and you came back after dark in Dr. Unwin's car."

"Is it just that that has displeased you, or is it still the quince preserve?" quavered Merrial.

Aunt Jane's hand passed slowly over her lips, leaving them a trifle less wooden than before.

"Well," said she dryly, "it is not exactly my idea of things, I must confess, that a young girl staying under my roof should peddle merchandise from door to door of my acquaintances, trailing a young doctor after her. You waited till I was away, and then, without any permission from me, you did this thing. Now, I dare say it was very 'smart' and American of you and that you are making a good many dollars. Whatever else your nation lacks it has never lacked an aptitude for making dollars. But I have other ideas for gentlewomen. No Coke has ever done anything quite like this before."

"Must a gentlewoman be poor and dependent?" asked Merrial, and there was a muffled bugle note in her low voice.

Aunt Jane flushed high.

"A very well aimed shot, Merrial," said she, and sat up straight in her rockless chair.

Merrial came quickly round to her.

"You know I didn't mean it to be a shot," she cried vehemently. "I was thinking——"

"Aloud and very clearly," said Aunt Jane.

"But, Aunt Jane, you said I was dependent. You know you did. Why must you take my remark to yourself? It applied to me, didn't it?"

Aunt Jane relaxed a trifle.

"Well, yes," she admitted; "we are in the same boat, I suppose."

"And if we quarrel we may upset it," pleaded Merrial, and tried to coax into Aunt Jane's eyes a reflection of her own swift smile.

She succeeded only in rekindling the old enigmatic spark.

"Were there any letters for me?" she asked presently, in a relaxed tone.

"A telegram came while you were out. It is upstairs in your room."

A moment later she had torn open the familiar, orange colored envelope, and was reading the brief message:

"Sorry you won't take me on. English agent Heart-o-Fruit Preserve company will call and taste. TRIPP."

Merrial let the slip of paper flutter to the floor and threw herself face downward on the bed.

"Why didn't I let him come himself?" she wailed. "Why didn't he come in spite of me?" she stormed unreasonably. "In the old days he'd have swum to me if he couldn't get across any other way. O Tripp! Tripp!" She felt as if everything was crashing about her ears. Nothing was coming out right. What could she do with the agent? And yet that's just what she had asked Tripp to do—to stay over there and send an agent. Of course an agent who wasn't specially interested would not want the recipe—or would cheat her out of it!

"I'm a nut," said Merrial to her ruefully smiling tear stained face in the glass, as she let down her hair. "Just because I'm tired I'm crying for the moon."

With which reprimand she crept to bed and sleep banished both despair and hope.

. . . . . .

Lord Rivington was in the habit of paying a yearly call upon Miss Coke. This was not because she was a tenant of his mother's and a connection of his own, nor because he found amusement in her sharpness. The real attraction was a very handsome old chest that stood in Miss Coke's sitting room. Henry Rivington was a passionate collector. In his very noteworthy assemblage of old furniture there was a chronological vacancy which this chest would exactly fill. He had made Miss Cooke extravagant offers for it. But she told him it was her one possession, and that she meant to have it with her till the end. After that, she assured him, it would go to her favorite niece.

"And which niece is the lucky favorite?" he would ask her teasingly. "For, if I knew, there is a way—there might be some chance for my collection after all, mightn't there?"

But this question Miss Coke passed over in a humorous silence, and Rivington was left to the doubtful hope of ownership expressed in his yearly call.

He came, this summer, in an access of covetous zeal, and waited, vis-a-vis with the tantalizing chest, for Miss Coke's appearance.

Henry Rivington did not often go begging unsuccessfully. He usually got what he wanted. Perhaps Fortune had no courage to face the profound amazement that would have elevated the Rivington eyebrows at the mere prospect of failure. The Rivington eyebrows were famous for their perfection, and in most respects Henry lived up to his eyebrows. He was faultlessly groomed and clad, had a clear eye, a bright cheek, and an athlete's figure. He did not, save for his fastidious hands, look like a collector. He had the air of a man who had never been pressed for time nor by necessity; a leisurely, honorable, well bred air.

For a time he sat opposite the chest, then presently he went over to stand by it and passed his fastidious, long hand over the top. It was glossier even than he remembered it.

"You are not the agent?"

"The old lady has probably treated herself to a housemaid," he thought, and observed, too, that there were flowers on the table, and that several dingy cushions had been recovered in gay, flowery chintz.

"Thank heaven! Nothing has yet been put on top of the case," mused the collector, "vases make a nasty circle sometimes." And again he turned to examine the outlines of the coveted treasure.

There came a footstep and Henry faced about. But it was not Miss Coke in the doorway.

There stood a very slight girl, whose throat rose with a surprising slim, long grace from the square neck of a moss green overall. It was somehow a very becoming and unusual overall, and reminded Henry of some old Venetian picture of a quaint boy artisan. It was belted loosely in to a waist small enough to be suited by the heavy resulting folds. And the face above the overall was eager and delicate and flushed, with a light halo of hair as soft as a child's. The eyes met Henry's with almost staggering directness for eyes with such coquettish lashes. This unexpected creature carried a large wooden spoon, dyed golden brown half way up its handle, and, brandishing it, she advanced joyously upon him.

"I'm so glad you got here," she said, in a light, level voice. "I expected you. Now, I know you haven't a minute to spare. Business men never have. So maybe you'd better come right in to the kitchen and begin tasting straight away. Somehow it always tastes better in the kitchen, and, of course, I want it to taste especially good to you."

Henry said not a word, but he followed. He followed the moss green figure down the hall and into the kitchen, and he thought of the cave of the Villis, "the witch of the wood," and wondered if to the eye of the bewitched huntsman it had looked half so enchanting as this fragrant and homely little room.

"Now you may sit down by the table and be comfortable, or you may stand up and be uncomfortable. Being English, you'll prefer to be uncomfortable. Do you notice the smell?"

Henry murmured that he did, that it was a delicious smell, and he stroked his chin, and, like a wise and wary Englishman, waited.

"You may think the smell is delicious," went on the kitchen Villia ardently, "but the taste——! Just wait! I've been cooking a fresh batch especially for you, so you could get the full flavor—not that it loses flavor as it goes on," she added hastily; "indeed, I I think it improves, but I thought, being in the business and all, you'd be interested in tasting it in various stages. Now, here is a saucer"—she set one on the table as she spoke—"for quince preserve in preparation, and here"—setting another—"is one for quince preserve hot, and another for quince preserve cold, and a fourtn for quince preserve in the pot, nine days old. I think you had better sit down, even if it is more comfortable."

Henry sat down and was presented with a clean napkin.

"I'm to taste it, am I?" he ventured.

The amazingly frank eyes opened at him.

"But of course! What did you come here for? There!"

The exclamation pointed the energetic deposit of a spoonful of streaming jam on the saucer under Henry's nose.

"Here's a spoon!" cried the spoon wielder anxiously. "Don't burn yourself."

She stood and watched him with so keen an air of suspense that Henry began to feel himself a treacherous beast. Nevertheless, he dipped his spoon and tasted gingerly, half shutting his eyes with the air of a connoisseur. He hadn't the faintest idea what it all meant, but he intended to prolong his adventure to its uttermost length of enjoyment. It is not every Rivington that can eat a specially prepared jam under the breathless observation of a fairy child in a moss green overall.

"How much you must know about jams!" she sighed reverently. "I can see that your sense of taste is frightfully developed. I suppose that it's like the color sense in artists. They see lavender spots, you know, where there never were lavender spots before. O, do you like it?"

"I can hardly pronounce final judgment," answered Henry pompously, "until I have tasted 'cold' and 'in the pot, nine days old.'"

She gave him the next saucer in silence. He could see that she was actually pale; she watched him with her lips compressed.

"I am, without doubt, a hardened brute," thought Henry. But he took even longer over the next saucer, and the connoisseur airs were exceedingly elaborate. Besides, the jam was really good, and Henry had missed lunch.

"Might I have a biscuit with this?" he asked, turning to her. "It rather—helps to bring out the flavor."

The girl clasped her hands.

"We haven't a biscuit in the house," she murmured, "but"—brightening—"maybe a cracker would do."

"A cracker would do—and you're an American, aren't you?" said Henry, helping himself to a dainty macaroon.

"Yes. Didn't Mr. Hart's cable prepare you?"

"Mr. Hart did not prepare me for you in any way," said Henry. "It was hardly—fair of Mr. Hart."

"O, well!" she said impatiently, "it isn't me that matters. It's the preserve. And here's your last saucer. If you don't mind, I shan't watch you eat it. The suspense is just about killing me."

She sat down somewhere behind him.

He glanced at her over his shoulder. She was sitting, tense, with her chin in her hand, and her eyes shut so tight that the lashes were swallowed half way to their curly tips. But the tips seemed to exclaim at him for a traitor.

Henry ate the last saucerful slowly. He was beginning to wonder what would happen when Miss Coke came in. How would the pinafored person look when she found out he wasn't—whatever mad thing he was supposed to be. And if she were very angry, would she ever permit him to see her again? And if he never saw her again, how beastly flat the whole affair would be, and what a fool he would look.

"You are taking thousands of years," murmured the light voice pitifully. "Can't you eat faster? It oughtn't to be masticated. Masticating might spoil it."

"I have finished," said Henry in a guilty tone, and rose, facing her.

She came close and looked up.

"A girl with eyes like that should be taught to be more careful how she looks at a man," thought Henry. "Doesn't she know that she has Villia eyes?"

"I have never tasted jam that for flavor, and freshness, and piquancy approaches your jam," said he, "and I sincerely wish, my dear young lady, that I were really the important person that you think I am, instead of only—Henry Rivington."

Then she jumped back from him and her pupils grew big.

"You are not the agent?"

"No."

Henry wondered if any of his race before had denied such an imputation with such regret.

"And the Heart-o-Fruit Preserve people did not send you?"

"No. I haven't the vaguest notion even who they may be."

By this time the girl's pupils were so wide, and her eyelashes so exclamatory, that Henry was almost frightened. She backed away from him slowly and dropped into a chair. Then she put her face in her hands. She took a handkerchief out of her pocket and held it to her eyes. Her shoulders shook.

"I am a cad," said Henry miserably, drawing closer. "I quite saw, too, that it mattered tremendously to you. There's no excuse for me, really! But when you cry, you know, you punish me out of all proportion even to my crime. I assure you, you do."

But at this the girl cried harder.

Henry began to walk up and down. The situation was not comic. It was tragic. The Villia was crying her adorable eyes out, and he was to blame. At the end of a turn he found courage to look at her again, and then he caught her at her naughty revenge. For she had lifted her face for an instant to peep at his remorse, and it was a face of mockery.

"By Jove!" he said, striding up to her, "I am glad! You don't care at all! You're not really crying!"

Then she gave it up and laughed, and laughed with such infectious merriment that he joined in with some brief and gentlemanly "Ha-has."

"When I think of all the jam you ate——" she gasped, unable to finish her sentence.

"And—and the sense of taste——"

"And—and your eyeglass, and your air—O, dear! Do say something serious, Lord Rivington. This, this hurts!"

"I wonder where the real agent is," ventured Henry. "What can have happened to him, do you suppose?"

The American girl sobered at once and brushed her eyelashes.

"I can't imagine."

They looked at each other blankly. Henry wondered why the agent's nonarrival should seem to him, too, so important.

is a—where one is not apt to expect it?"

Her face clouded, as at a reminder of something she preferred to forget, but she recovered at once. "O, monsieur, it is—what you say—'all in the day's work.' But it is good to be appreciated."

He commended points in her singing, with a knowledge that plainly pleased and astonished her. Laughingly, she told him of the passages that still frightened her. "Yes?" and "O, thank you so much!" came gladly from her lips, an eager interest to her eyes. Yet Earleigh noticed for the first the thinness of her cheeks and her pathetic interest also in the tiny salad on her plate. He would have offered to order more, but that something told him she would have resented it then. He fed her with praise instead.

"I don't believe I exaggerate, mademoiselle, if I say that such a voice and such skill belong unmistakably in opera!"

Again the cloud in her eyes, and with a murmur of thanks she hastened the conversation back to the technique of singing. A lively ten minutes they made of it, then Earleigh rose to go.

"You will be expecting——?" He left her to finish it.

"I am expecting my fiancé. Ah, here he is now. Let me make you acquainted with Tullio Genaro, Monsieur—Monsieur——?"

"Earleigh is my name."

"Signor Genaro is in the export business," she added, to help them along. Signor Genaro listened stiffly for a few minutes, till he found an opening to say, "Come, come, my dear, it is time to be going."

Earleigh turned away with a strange glow in him. She was no disappointment. What she appeared to be, she was. And the foreigner chap was only a fiancé.

The next evening he missed her. She had gone to another engagement, and it was a week before he found her, in another cabaret. This time he chose a table directly beside the dancing floor, and nodded pleasantly when she came on. And he was pleased the more at the troubled look in her face as she saw him. Clearly she was not seeking gallant attentions.

She was smiling, nevertheless, when he sought out her table again. No woman is above a compliment courteously intended, and this time Earleigh stayed longer. This time, too, she consented to join him in another bit of food. And again he spoke of opera and of the ways of entering it, since that seemed the only approach to her. And again her dark eyes sparkled, as she listened almost as hungrily as she ate.

"Have you never thought of trying it, mademoiselle?"

Her swift glance said, "O, have I!" Her weary voice said, "I have to put the thought away from me, monsieur."

"But there are ways. I happen to have command of them. And you have the voice. You have——"

"It is for another reason, monsieur." Mademoiselle looked away from his stare of surprise. "What a lovely woman over there! And what jewels!" she hastened to say. And the talk remained among trivial things, until Earleigh felt it time to be leaving.

"You will be expecting Mr. Genaro in a moment."

"No; tonight my father is coming to take me, monsieur."

Was it relief, or pride, that Earleigh thought he heard in her tone? "May I stay and meet him?" he asked at once.

"Certainly, monsieur."

"I want to tell him about you," he laughed, and as quickly sobered. The troubled look had come back to her eyes.

"O, you must not!" she cried, with an intensity that startled him.

Who was this girl? It was more than refinement of feature that made her beauty. There was pride of race in her. It spoke in her accent, in her poise. Clearly a personage, hungry for all that rightfully belonged to her. There was her real beauty—in that patient hunger in her voice and her eyes.

"O, pardon me, monsieur," she caught him in the midst of his stare. "I have been rude. I have neglected to thank you for your flowers. And then you were generously speaking of my fitness for opera. And I told you I was not to think of it—for the present. I am assisting my father."

"In this way?"

"In this way. But I hope it will not be for long."

"O, he is ill?"

"Far from it, monsieur!" Mademoiselle laughed at his hopeful gaze. "Some day you may hear of my father. He has great expectations. If they should be realized—When they are realized—" She ended with a glance about that said, "Then goodby to this!" "Ah, here he comes!" Her glance had found him.

The meeting was brief for Earleigh. From the thicket of gilded tables about them a hurried figure emerged, for all the world like a character in some old story, with flowing white hair, sweeping white mustaches, a pointed white beard, a very Quixote, except that he was thick set and short. In one hand he flourished a broad black felt hat; under his arm he hugged a fiddle case.

"Ah, monsieur! Delighted!" He swept Earleigh a bow, on his being presented. That was all. "Come, come, child!" He turned to mademoiselle. "Where is your cloak? We have only just time to catch the last ferry!"

Murmuring an adieu Mlle. Jacqueline gave Earleigh her hand, saying more, as was her wont, with her eyes. "Monsieur, you are disappointed. You have been kind. You are the only one who has ever been interested in me. And that has been sweet. But let us look at the facts. You live in one world and I in another. These impossible attractions are really too bad." Aloud Earleigh was hearing, "Good-by, monsieur; it has been so good of you; thank you so much."

It was a long goodby. On the next evening she was gone from the cabaret, and nowhere else to be found. In vain, and for weeks, he trailed her. He watched the ferries, watched the newspapers, thinking and wondering. Her one worn gown returned to his memory. And her health must be as frail as her purse. He remembered her pallor, the light cough that sometimes escaped her, and her pitiful hunger. Perhaps she was ill. Six months elapsed. But in her absence there was another discovery that Earleigh made. He had an interest in life.

Of course he found her—saw her one day, at a distance, mounting to the Sixth avenue elevated out of the crowds in Herald square—traced her to Staten island, of all places—searched its extent for days. Once he fancied he saw her turning a corner into a narrow little way in St. George's; but the figure was too thin and slight, too poorly clad, and the street too shabby. But a day arrived with its clew.

The snow of the early morning had soon become a cold sleet, yet Earleigh, chilled and muddied from head to foot, warmed to the sight of that sign when he saw it, in the very little street that appeared too shabby for her, but not now so shabby as he swept with a glance its rows of little old brick houses, their roofs frosted like cakes, their fronts latticed with icicle lacework. This was the place. That sign was conclusive. Nailed beside an arched gateway leading to spaces unknown, it proclaimed:

Atelier de
M. le Chevalier de Savarac
Facteur du Violon.

It belonged. It fitted. And drawing his dripping coat about him, Earleigh pushed through the ancient gate. At a little distance it opened into a tiny court where two gaunt trees glistened ebony black in their coating of sleet. Facing the court was a tiny house, its four little windows sending through their fringe of icicles the whiteness of their curtains. Beside the narrow door the sign was repeated, with the addition:

Two Flights Up.

Without hesitation Earleigh entered, but not without plaguing his mind, on his way up the stairs, for some plausible errand in case he had made a mistake, or she happened not to be there. Without hesitation he knocked on the solitary door at the end of the passage.

What was his surprise when the door softly opened, of its own will, and he entered a truly remarkable room. Void of human tenantry, it was crowded instead with handsome old furniture. Old rugs, whose pattern still stood forth under years of wear, made a ruddy map of the floor. Almost as thickly the walls were covered with dusty old prints and paintings, with old shields and weapons, and musical instruments of a bygone day. An iron stove in front of an unused fireplace lighted the room with a fiery smile from its open door. Two jars of faded flowers stood on the mantel above it. From the ceiling a dozen or more fiddles in paper bags hung down on wires, like the wives of some elfin Bluebeard.

There was a moment of silence. Then a gruff voice said from some hidden region: "Is that you?"

While Earleigh was debating what to answer, the voice said again: "O, it is you, is it? Well, you fool, set it down. I'll pay you next week. Or I'll be out—when I get good and ready."

Earleigh was further amused as the door behind him slowly closed, again of its own volition. His next astonishment came when an unnoticed door at the end of the room swung open and framed the unforgettable figure of Jacqueline's father, in an apron that covered all but his Quixotic face. This was the place.

At sight of his unremembered visitor the white haired apparition whipped off his enveloping habit and came forward smiling and bowing.

"Ah! Excuse me, monjour!" he said suddenly affecting the extreme of accents. "I thought monjour was the expressman. Mille pardons! What will monjour command of me?"

To gain time, Earleigh spoke the first thing that came to mind. "Are you the Chevalier de Savarac of whom I have heard so much?"

"Je suis le Chevalier de Savarac, oui."

"Your cleverness begins at your very door, I see."

"A device of my own, monjour—to save my time," the old fellow said sententiously. Then he added, as Earleigh's face fell, "But it is not to save me from those who have reason to be here."

Earleigh laughed as he answered, "I hope I have reason to be here, monsieur."

"What can I do for monjour?"

"Well"—Earleigh's eyes sought the ceiling for thought, and seeing the fiddles there, he said—"do you think you could fit me out with a good violin?"

"Ah, monjour! Sit here, if you please!" At last the chevalier had a clew to his visitor. A nuisance, but a customer. "It will be a miracle if I cannot mak' to please monjour."

The old man dusted a chair for his storm stained caller and fetched a short stepladder, humming as he mounted it to sort among the fiddles, while Earleigh kept his eye on the miraculous door, hoping to see an apparition of fairer mien. One after the other Savarac handed them down, to Earleigh's rising interest as he peeped at the labels within them. Storioni, Ruggieri, Stainer—excellent names, provided the instruments were genuine. It might do to run a risk and buy one, if it would serve to prolong his call. One after the other the chevalier handed them down, presently descending himself with a violin which he lovingly wiped with a silk handkerchief snatched from his pocket.

"There, monjour, there!" He handed the instrument to Earleigh. "I must ask monjour to use care wiz zat violon. One does not every day see a violon such as zat."

In some curiosity Earleigh peered within. "A da Salò, as I live! I might have known from the model." And accepting the bow which Savarac handed him, he drew it across the strings with no badly practiced hand, prolonging the farce for as long as he dared.

"Rather good," he pronounced as he handed it back. "But come, now; is it a genuine da Salo? Or one of your own manufacture?"

The chevalier took the remark as if it were a bullet. With a withering glance up and down the wet and soiled clothing of his visitor he drew himself up stiffly and said, forgetting his accent, "Monsieur may not believe me, but I make far better violins than that."

"Come!" Earleigh held out his hand. "Forgive an impertinence. And show me the best you've got. I'm truly interested."

Savarac took the extended hand, with some caution, however. "Perhaps we had better first inquire who you are, monsieur," he said. "Sit down"—he found a chair for himself—"and permit a shrewd guess. Monsieur's hand, it struck me, was hot. His eye is overbright, his cheeks are fevered. His breath comes quickly. I fancy monsieur is hungry."

"Just that!" Earleigh agreed. "Hungry!"

Savarac laughed gayly at his own cleverness. "And I fancy the experience is not a new one to monsieur. The question is, more than ever, who you are. Out of work, no doubt, and yet wanting to be somebody. I recognize the symptoms."

"Monsieur, you look right through a person!"

Savarac laughed on in rising friendliness. "You were desperate today, and you are taking it out on me. Come! Let us have a guess at your errand. You are an artist—great, but still unknown. You need a better fiddle to dazzle the public. And you played badly lest I take you for a great player and charge you enormously. 'There is old Savarac,' you said. 'He will lend me a fiddle.' Though I am surprised that you find me. I do not encourage custom—not yet. But let us begin. What is your name?"

"Yes, monsieur, I have still to tell people my name."

"Aha! It is just as I thought! But tell me his name which we shall soon have no need to inquire."

"My name is Earleigh, monsieur—Leighton Earleigh."

"A good name, monsieur." Several times Savarac tested the sound of it. "A musical name. One must have such a name in the arts. And yet——" The old man cocked his head to one side with a smile, to soften what he meant to say. "Is it true that you play? It occurs to me, monsieur, that you fiddled with unmistakable badness. Perhaps you compose. Why have you not obtained work? But why do I ask! You pride yourself on standing out against the grind of a steady routine. That's what all the artists say. You must 'have your time to dream!' And also to starve! Do I not know?"

"Monsieur," said Earleigh gravely, glancing down at the old suit he had donned, "I have sacrificed even the seat of my trousers to art."

"The rascal!" Savarac laughed heartily. He had risen and was pacing the floor in his gathering interest. "Ah, you will starve for a while, my young friend. But you will merge to fame, never fear. Courage, monsieur! It is the greatest of all faculties to possess. Take the word of one who knows. But you are not going! Have I touched a too sensitive nerve?"

Earleigh had indeed turnd toward the door, but only to hide his amusement. "I must leave, monsieur," he contrived to say soberly. "I have the misfortune, I see, to take you back over the memories of your own youth."

"Ah, my boy! What delicacy! You have feeling—imagination!" The old man thrust Earleigh back into his chair again. "There! Be seated. One can talk to you, I see. You are an artist yourself. You know something of building, creating."

Open mouthed, Earleigh listened to this portrait of himself.

"You have come indeed fortunately, monsieur. At first, I was prepared to be annoyed. It was because I did not know you. Now it is delightful to have you here. You must know, my friend, this day is the very pinnacle of my career."

Earleigh sat more and more astonished. So this was the man of the great expectations!

"'His career!' I hear you say," the old man was running on. "It is your face. You are ready to laugh. But that is because you know nothing of my art. My art? A-ah, a glorious art! Monsieur, you would pardon my enthusiasm if you understood. Wait! I see you are worthy. On second thought I will treat you to a sensation."

Leaving Earleigh to puzzle over him as he pleased, the old gentleman vanished into his workroom. For a moment there was silence. Then there floated out to Earleigh the sound of a violin, exquisitely played and of a ravishing sweetness. Marveling now in more respectful fashion, Earleigh sank back and submitted himself to the spell. Not Ysaye himself could have drawn a more poetic bow as the old gentleman, having forgotten himself, played on and on. It cost Earleigh a pang to have the music cease, and when Savarac reappeared and stood in the door for an instant, ridicule was gone from his heart.

"Monsieur," said Savarac with dignity, "our acquaintance has been brief. But people of our sort reach an understanding quickly. I have reason to believe you can appreciate what you have heard. Would you think me mad, monsieur"—he paused—"if I told you I aspire to be Stradivarius the second? Do not smile. Wait till you have heard me out. That golden voice came from one of my own instruments—not a da Salo, no Amati, but a de Savarac. And was it good, think you? Ah, monsieur!"—the old man kissed his fingers to the ceiling—"you know it was good! But hark!" he broke off abruptly. "Did I hear footsteps on the stairs? I am expecting my daughter, monsieur."

He listened for a moment. So also did Earleigh listen! In no great while she was to be expected!

"I was mistaken." Savarac resumed his pace and his harangue, though it now cost Earleigh an effort to hear him. "Monsieur, Stradivarius is accounted the greatest of makers. But he has had an able assistant—Time, Time. Yet I have done as well. How? Ah, that is the secret of my forty years of toil. As early as my twentieth year, monsieur, I said to myself, 'Why wait for time!' I said, 'For the perfect violin two elements are necessary—art and age.' Why? Here is the answer." From a pocket the chevalier drew a tuning-fork. "I snap this, and it sings. There is none of that in new wood. It is too full of saps and resins. But age evaporates those and leaves the fibres dry and brittle, monsieur, like a tuning-fork—vibrant, singing at the lightest touch of the bow. Give wood that is already old true Stradivarius shaping, and what violins will you not have! So, monsieur, I bought old wood, old maple and deal, from some of the oldest houses in Italy—three hundred years old. Time had done his part already. Next

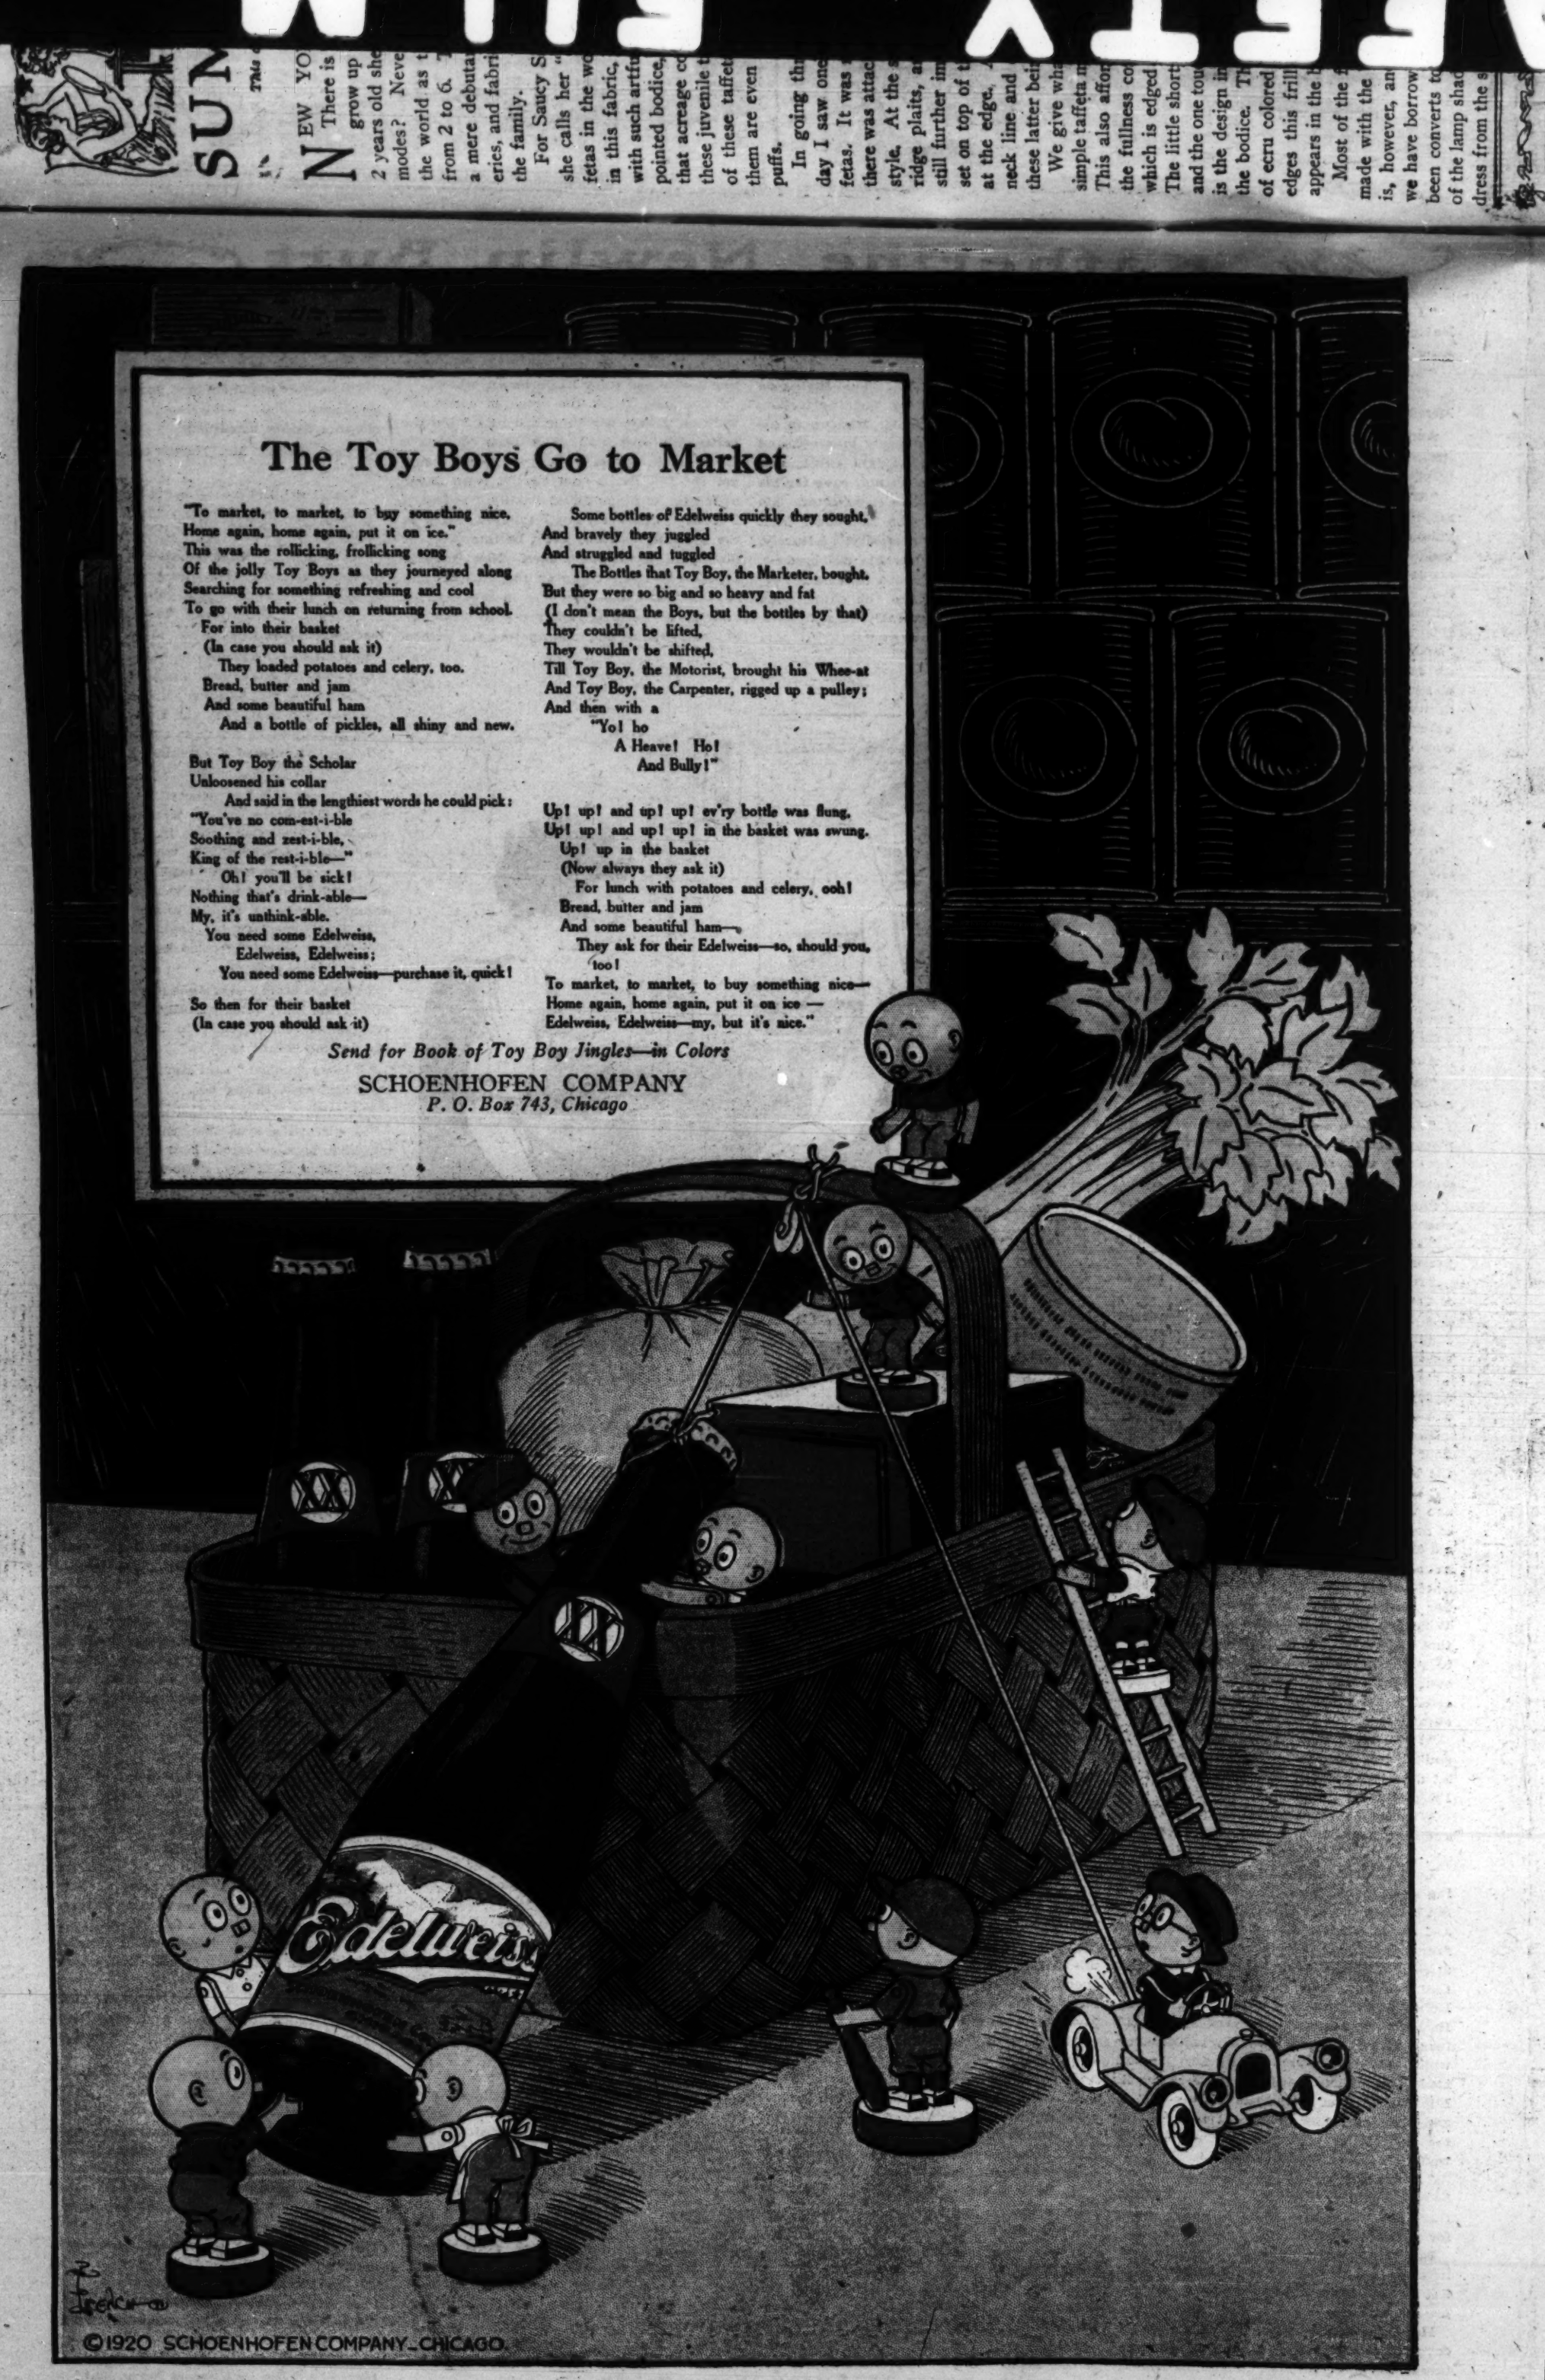
Fiancé! Earleigh winced at the word. So that incredible person was still about! Nevertheless he himself was to see her again! His heart beat out the quick tempo of his expectancy, as Savarac swung wide the door, like an orchestra conductor ushering in the

In his long cloak, a faraway look in his black eyes. Then he swept them a magnificent bow and was gone.

For a full minute Jacquelins and Earleigh stood under the spell of him, as his footsteps died away down the stairs. "This is truly

"I see! That means, Who is Genaro? Doesn't it?"

With that she turned suddenly and blazed at him. "Never dare to mention that man to me again!" came the quivering command. Then she broke altogether, leaning wearily



The Toy Boys Go to Market
"To market, to market, to buy something nice,
Home again, home again, put it on ice."
This was the rollicking, frollicking song
Of the jolly Toy Boys as they journeyed along
Searching for something refreshing and cool
To go with their lunch on returning from school.
For into their basket
(In case you should ask it)
They loaded potatoes and celery, too.
Bread, butter and jam
And some beautiful ham
And a bottle of pickles, all shiny and new.
But Toy Boy the Scholar
Unloosened his collar
And said in the lengthiest words he could pick:
"You've no com-est-i-ble
Soothing and zest-i-ble,
King of the rest-i-ble—"
Oh! you'll be sick!
Nothing that's drink-able—
My, it's unthink-able.
You need some Edelweiss,
Edelweiss, Edelweiss;
You need some Edelweiss—purchase it, quick!
So then for their basket
(In case you should ask it)
Some bottles of Edelweiss quickly they sought,
And bravely they juggled
And struggled and tuggled
The Bottles that Toy Boy, the Marketer, bought.
But they were so big and so heavy and fat
(I don't mean the Boys, but the bottles by that)
They couldn't be lifted,
They wouldn't be shifted,
Till Toy Boy, the Motorist, brought his Whee-at
And Toy Boy, the Carpenter, rigged up a pulley;
And then with a
"Yo! ho
A Heave! Ho!
And Bully!"
Up! up! and up! up! ev'ry bottle was flung.
Up! up! and up! up! in the basket was swung.
Up! up in the basket
(Now always they ask it)
For lunch with potatoes and celery, ooh!
Bread, butter and jam
And some beautiful ham—
They ask for their Edelweiss—so, should you, too!
To market, to market, to buy something nice—
Home again, home again, put it on ice —
Edelweiss, Edelweiss—my, but it's nice."

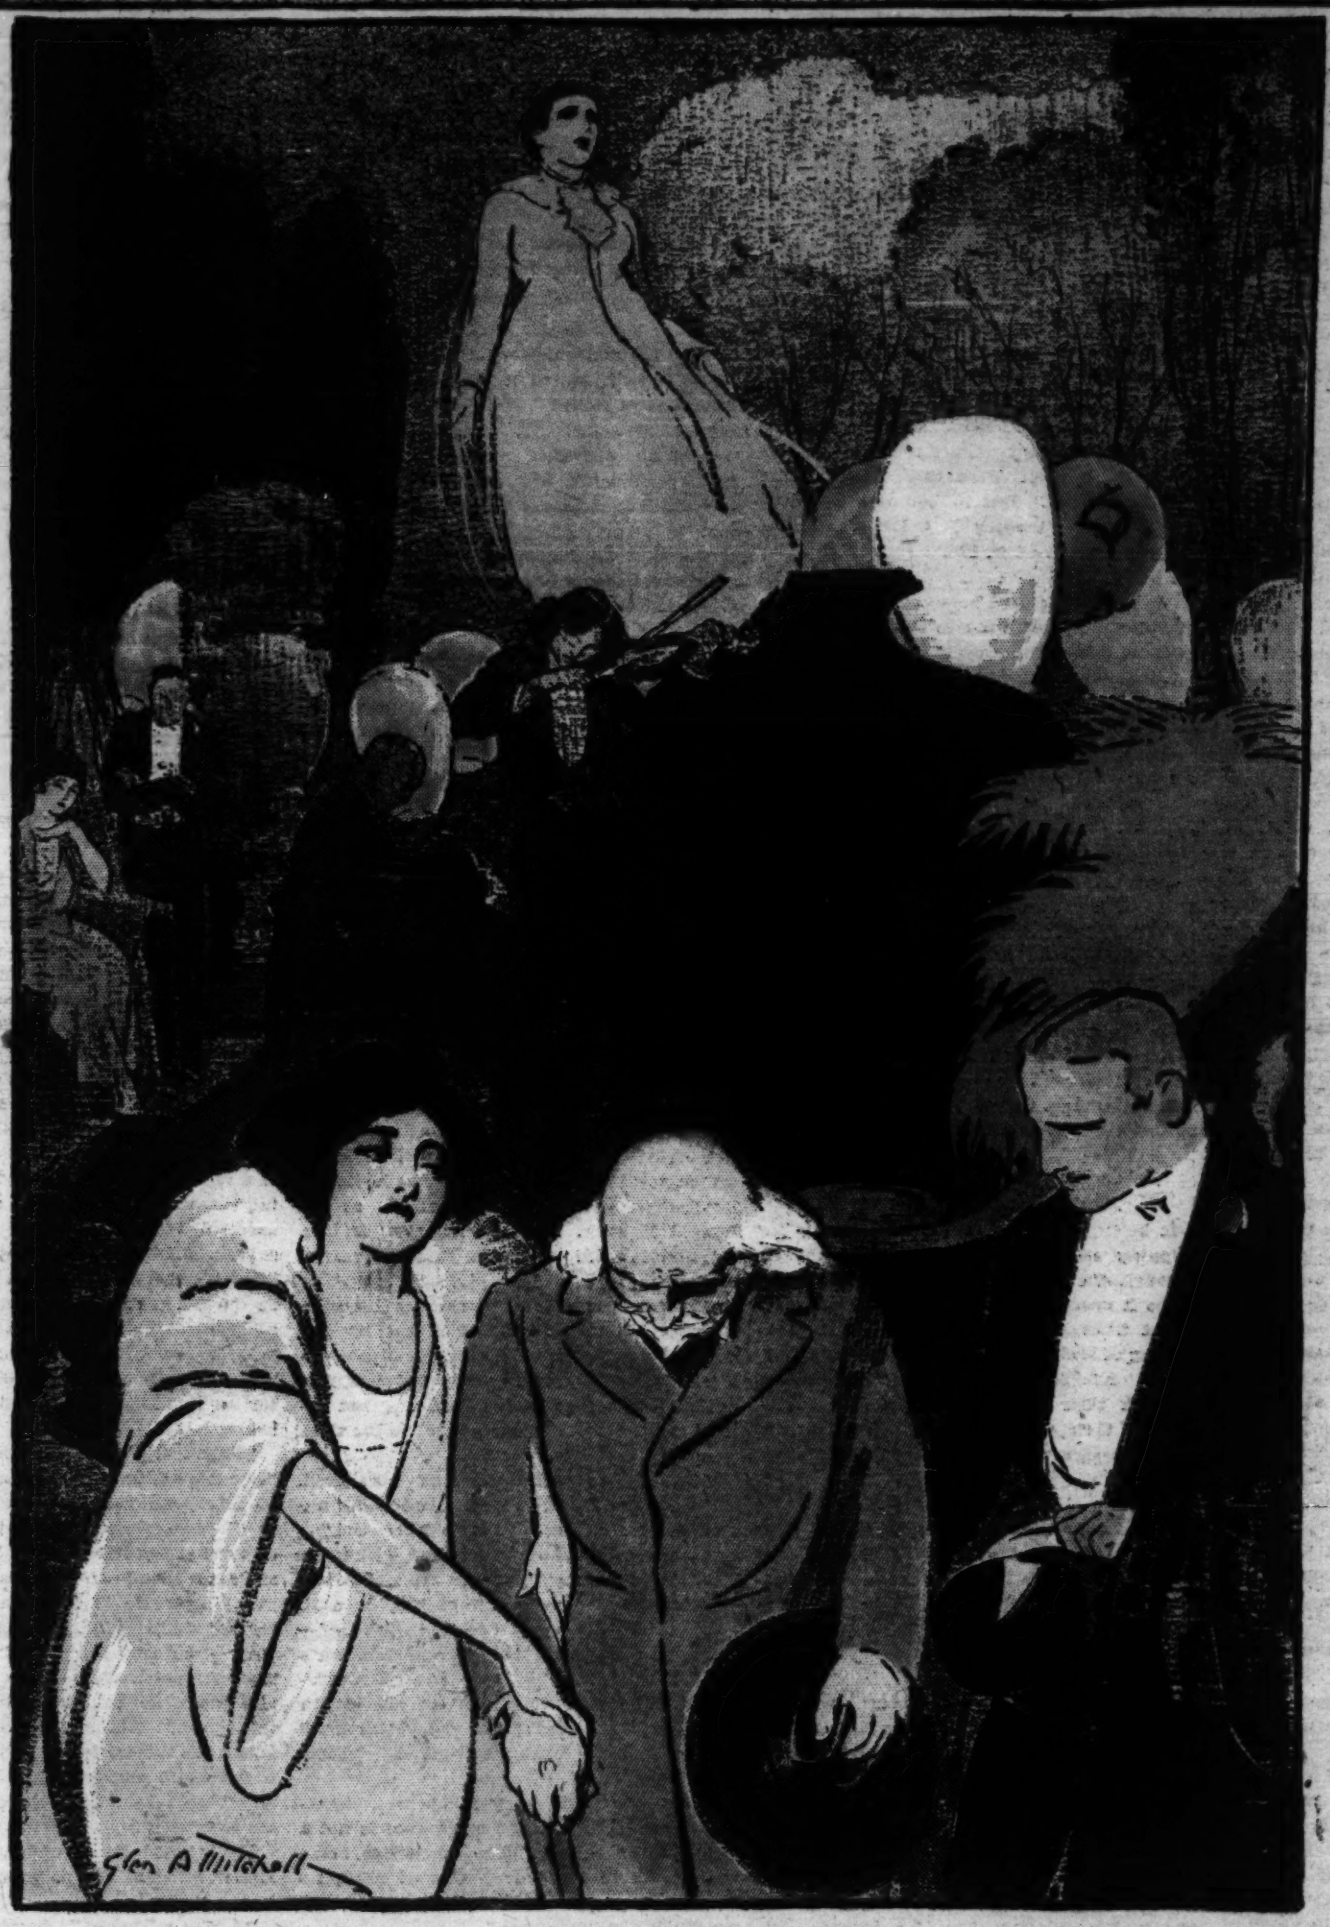
The HEART'S PASSION

By BURTON KLINE



The Story of Three Men, a Woman, and a Splendid Dream

EARLEIGH glanced at his watch impatiently. Already the waiters had guessed his secret and, with many a wink among themselves, abetted it—as well they might, for he ordered magnificently and tipped in the same measure. Nevertheless, to provide a better excuse for his lingering, Earleigh ordered another coffee.

"I think she'll soon be on, sir," his waiter whispered confidentially, as he scribbled the order in his book.

"Who?" Earleigh looked up blankly.

"I beg your pardon, sir." Such a patron was not to be offended, and the waiter sped away on his errand.

Left alone to his cigar, Earleigh put himself back in the mood when he had first heard her. He remembered the rainy evening. He remembered his boredom. The witticism from Oscar Wilde that he had read that day came back to him: "There are two great tragedies in life—wanting a thing, and getting it." That had hurt. It was so pat to his case. So far everything in the world had dropped at Earleigh's feet except two things—something worth a man's doing, and a gift for doing it.

Handsome, cultivated, with an air of distinction about him, Earleigh had need of but a drop more of energy to have counted. Now he was sick of the rôle of passive appreciation. At 34 he began to feel old. Yet all about him were these people, laughing like children over their food and the show—because it had cost them effort. The very dancer and comedians tore him with envy, in having even the silly specialty in which they excelled. Earleigh had dropped into the cabaret to escape from himself. And he had not escaped.

Then he had heard her. A tinny piano set up familiar chords, and a voice began the Shadow song. For a while he had not troubled to look at the singer. When he did turn, it was not at the remarkably finished artistry of her singing, so oddly out of place in such a setting; it was at some odd note in her voice, a note even more outlandishly out of place there, a note that had haunted him ever since. All that he could only feel, that voice was putting into exquisite sound. It said to him, "See what I possess—and only this to do!" And when he turned to look, the dark proud face of her said the same. She finished amid a great clapping of hands. The most casual listener was aware of having heard something remarkable. Yet without knowing it she had sung to an audience of one.

The next evening Earleigh had come there again, and the next and the next. This was the sixth consecutive evening he was there. The waiter had long returned with his coffee, and the coffee was cold and untouched. Presently she came on for her turn—the same two excerpts from opera, followed by a ditty of the day, with another and another for encores. A pair of fools near him mimicked her in a high falsetto. But as before, Earleigh heard and saw nothing but the slender dark figure on the floor. And this time he scarcely did that. She was wearing a rose at her bosom—not the sheaf he had tipped a waiter to take her, but unmistakably one rose from his sheaf.

After "Mlle. Jacqueline"—for that was all he had learned of her, from the program—the rest was banality to Earleigh. Yet now he waited, as he had come to wait, for the finishing touches. In a few minutes she came out to a far table in a corner, for the meager little supper that appeared to be part of her wage; and lastly the foreign looking chap, with the shifty eyes and the mincing manner, who impressed Earleigh so disagreeably, sat down with her, ate with her, and took her away. Twice Earleigh had followed them out as closely as he dared, and saw them swallowed up outside, in the Broadway blaze and blare and blather. This evening he followed them again, and hated the foreigner a little less. Unmistakably that flower at her corsage was one of his roses.

Does a man so stirred make no effort to meet the lady? Earleigh made himself an opportunity on the very next evening. She was supping alone. The foreign looking chap had not arrived. Evidently the weather had discouraged him. Earleigh left his chair to go to her, sauntering indifferently not to draw the attention of those he knew.

"Will mademoiselle accept a word of thanks for the pleasure she has given? And may I sit down and offer you more?"

She looked up quickly, critically, and then decided. "O, certainly, monsieur. It is very good of you."

Earleigh brightened in agreeable surprise. She said, "monsieur," but she spoke it in perfect English, and with the cadence of cultivation.

"This is the seventh time I have heard you, mademoiselle. May I say it has surprised me to hear such wonderful artistry

SUMMER WARDROBES FOR THOSE OF FEW SUMMERS.

By CORINNE LOWE

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—There is really no incentive for a little girl to grow up these days. Why should she when at 2 years old she may claim her heritage of grownup modes? Never were such amusing duplicates in the world as these present modes for the belle of from 2 to 6. The real debutante is apt to look like a mere debutante at plaits, side fullness, embroideries, and fabrics compared to the youngest sister of the family.

For Saucy Sally who has not yet come into what she calls her "woman teeth" there are all the taffetas in the world. Navy blue is the favored color in this fabric, and the designers have made it up with such artful imitations of the bouffante skirt and pointed bodice, such cunning introductions of plaits, that acreage constitutes the only difference between these juvenile taffetas and those of the grownup. All of these taffetas have the short sleeve. Many of them are even made with lingerie fronts and sleeve puffs.

In going through a shop for children the other day I saw one example of these sophisticated taffetas. It was made with a pointed bodice to which there was attached a skirt turned under in the harem style. At the sides the joining was effected by cartridge plaits, and the fashionable hip fullness was still further impressed by tiny ruchings of the silk set on top of these plaits and all frayed into fringe at the edge. A guimpe of chiffon gave the round neck line and dispensed the only sleeves apparent, these latter being of ecru colored shadow lace.

We give what is to our mind a more delightfully simple taffeta model in the one second from the right. This also affords the side fullness at the hips, but the fullness comes from the shaping of the bodice, which is edged with a picot edged ruffle of the silk. The little short sleeves are treated in the same way, and the one touch of color upon the navy background is the design in bright colored wool on the front of the bodice. The bonnet worn with this adds a frill of ecru colored net to its crown of navy taffeta and edges this frill with the French blue ribbon that appears in the bow at the front.

Most of the frocks for the tot of from 2 to 6 are made with the bodice and the flaring skirt. There is, however, another silhouette for children which we have borrowed from the French, who have long been converts to its charm. This silhouette is that of the lamp shade and it is achieved by dropping the dress from the shoulders.

Why grow up when, even between the ages of 2 and 6, one may claim, first, the maize organdy trimmed with wool embroidery at the left; second, a beige batiste with English eyelet embroidery made up over slip of light blue satin and adorned by a hat of blue taffeta; next, a navy blue taffeta with wool embroidery and grown-up side fullness, set off by hat of navy taffeta and ecru net; and, last, an apron and pantelette frock of English sateen in beige color, banded in blue.

The tot's total of millinery advantages may be gathered from the hat of rose Neapolitan with same tone ostrich trimming; the blue tulle model with latticework of silver stitching completed by silver roses; the cap of pink faille stitched and trimmed with silver grosgrain ribbon, and, last, a cap of black satin and pink faille.

A rose batiste hat of English eyelet embroidery is followed here by a white taffeta model edged with yarn and trimmed with ostrich; a bonnet of gray tulle lined with black, trimmed with silver rosebuds and tying with pink ribbons. Last, a blue satin has old rose plume and rose ties.

A charming little model of this kind which I saw the other day was made of sand colored taffeta embroidered upon its skirt with forget-me-nots and finished about neck and sleeves with plaited ruffles of Nattier blue linen. It opened straight down the front and closed at the top with a great big bow of silk. The frock flared out in a series of fine gathers to the wide hem. Some of these lamp shade frocks have a tiny yoke or a collar simulating a yoke, and all are susceptible to charming arrangements of plaits and embroidery and ruffles.

Among the cotton fabrics organdy is as popular in the juvenile world as in the adult, and here again the 6 year old belle gets the very whipped cream of fashion. Her organdies come in all the fashionable tints—maize, mauve, canary, blue, rose, cherry—and they are lavishly trimmed, sometimes colored wool embroideries, sometimes with lace, sometimes with contrasting color organdy. Wool especially is a favorite in every type of frock. Gay little wool balls, for example, may take the place of the accustomed ribbon sash, and one adorable little rose colored organdy which I saw lately had a tiny wool cord in gray slipped through the slits at the waist line. Still another organdy had its round neck line and its short sleeves outlined in bright wool flowers.

At the left we show one of these new organdies. This is in maize tint and it makes an effective background for the wool embroidery, which is the only trimming. With this is worn a natural colored leghorn bonnet set off with ribbon flowers. It is not quite so dressy as the little frock which follows immediately after, for this beige batiste is made up over a blue satin slip—a charming color combination, by the way—and in the intervals of English eyelet work a wide grosgrain sash in blue is passed through the wide openings.

Of course childhood has always been ginghamed, but we who used to chafe at the steady diet of plaids and checks made up without any alleviating touches would be reconciled if we had to be small girls today. Gingham frocks for children are now creations—just as are those for their elders. They are trimmed with linen or organdy—often a pert little sash of white organdy joins to a front panel of the same in making Sally forget the plaid background, and a gingham wardrobe may run through all the variations of the lamp shade, the tight waist with flaring skirt, and the apron effect.

I suppose all little girls used to hate aprons. But the days of apron martyrdom are gone by, for nowadays these accessories are just as lovely as the frocks. It is quite a fad to wear pantalettes with the apron and at the right we show one of such creations in English sateen—a beige color with light blue bands. These English sateens, by the way, are much used for the small girls' dresses and aprons. The latter particularly are objects of sateen wiles. Fancy one of these made just like a sleeveless dress and bordered at neck line and hem and armholes by ruffly ruffles of contrasting tint! Or another—it gave a glimpse of quaint pantalettes made of tiny ruffles of val lace—with a Kate Greenaway figure cut out of sateens of contrasting tint appliqued to each side!

For the juvenile wrap the cape seems to have taken hold of the imagination, and even though one be no more than three summers one may learn to spend that summer in a cape that is an exact replica of the grownup garment. Capes for the small girl come in taffeta, shepherd's plaid, navy tricotine, duvetyn, and knitted wool. The last are quite the newest thing and they are perfectly captivating in their combinations of color. This combination is due to the shawl collar of brushed wool, which is added to the knitted wool background and which permits such alliances as brown wrap with orange collar, white with Adriatic blue, rose color with Nattier blue.

PUTTING FAT ON

by Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, the Chicago Sunday Tribune.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

COMES a wee sma' voice from out my mail: "Why all this interest in taking fat off? Why not give us 'poor skinnays' a chance. Isn't there some way we might secure a few pounds that are being melted off your fat reducing classes?"

Some day later I shall have to take up a class of "thins" and see what can be done about padding them and rounding them out. But in the meantime, there are things the undernourished, underdeveloped girl can do to bring her weight up to normal.

The same basic rules apply to taking weight off and putting it on, the proper diet and the proper amount of exercise, the difference being in the diet principally. The things the fat folk are denied are naturally the very things the thin folk must help themselves to generously.

Gym Training for Thin Girls.

I know of two concrete cases that will interest you, one being that of a gain of fifteen pounds in about two months, the other a five pound gain in two weeks.

The first girl was frail and when she made application to a gymnasium she was refused. But she persisted in being given a chance and finally was rewarded with a couple of weeks' tryout. First she started in on the regular gym work lasting about one hour and the work was graded lightly for her. Basketball she was allowed, too.

Four times a week she attended gym and in addition to her regular food supply she drank a quart of milk a day. That might seem a lot at first glance but divided into a glass for breakfast, another for luncheon, one at dinner, and one before retiring, it wasn't hard to take at all. I say hard because most thin people do not like milk and cream and the very things their systems most require.

Big Meal at Night.

The girl who gained the five pounds in two weeks was also undernourished and had to have some corrective work to start with in the gym. Three times a week of one-half hour lessons were what she got and the milk treatment she followed, too, with the successful result mentioned.

Another example of weight gaining was accomplished by a woman who, in addition to her regular meal, ate twice a day a sugared cereal with either cream or half and half—well cooked oatmeal or rice or one of the other well known breakfast cereals. At breakfast she ate one dish and before retiring the other.

A point worth knowing was her good judgment in eating her big meal at night and resting for a half hour after. This is something which most thin people forget to do. The fat, who should never be found guilty of resting immediately after a meal, are the ones invariably found doing it.

Need Rest and Sleep.

Trying to take life more easily is the hardest thing thin people do. They want to be moving around in a lively fashion instead of resting every now and then. They should get ten hours' sleep without fail. And, above everything else, do not worry.

From a swimming school I have reports of a dozen cases of development accomplished by this most excellent exercise. It is too bad the swimming habit is not more general. In most large communities there are tanks that are accessible and not of exorbitant fee. There is not another single exercise that will do as much for the development of the body as swimming—the chest muscles, the abdomen muscles, and the leg muscles are all made to work and with every stroke there comes a deep breathing benefit.

GERTRUDE: IF YOU CONTINUE with your present treatment of washing your face in the hot water without rinsing it in cold you'll have an ugly case of enlarged pores. Rinse after the hot water in as cold as you can stand and then take a piece of ice done up in a handkerchief and rub over the face.

BESSIE: FOUR WEEKS IS NOT long for a superfluous hair remedy treatment. Keep it up four more, at least. Then if the peroxide and ammonia do not show encouraging results you would better consider having the hair removed by the electric needle.

VIDA: TO APPLY THE EGG astringent does not require outside aid. Cleanse the face with a good cold cream; wipe off and when the skin is dry apply the white of the egg with a bristle brush. Let the white dry and then apply a coating of the yolk of the egg. When dried thoroughly, rinse off with cold water.

MOLLIE M.: THE WHITEHEADS may be easily removed by pricking the cover with a sterile needle and pressing out the contents. They do not recur as persistently as blackheads and the local care of the skin will prevent further trouble.

* *

D. CHIN: GET THE HABIT OF holding your chin up. You may have to go to extremes with it if it is by nature a sinking chin. That's the first requisite toward the removal of a double chin. You'd better let me send you some exercises I have in pamphlet form and illustrated just for correspondents who are so troubled.

UNCLE JIM'S STORY

ABOUT the time that Kimbo, the little green monkey, made friends with Nig, the cur, he also made another friend—a very strange friend for a little monkey to make, but a very good friend as he turned out to be.

It was Tom, the grizzly bear, with whom Kimbo became a fast friend. Ever since he had scared Longa Trunka, the elephant, chasing the baby mouse across the road in front of him, and upsetting the whole parade, Jerry had let Kimbo ride on Tom's back instead of on the elephant's trunk.

"I like you lots better than Longa Trunka," Kimbo would squeak in Tom's big flapping ear.

"Umph," Tom would grunt. But he liked to have Kimbo like him and always would dance faster and better and amuse the crowds much more if Kimbo were sitting astride his back.

"Come on, let's slip away and take a stroll by ourselves," grunted Tom one sunny morning.

No one was looking. Jerry was feeding the twin baby lions and there wasn't a soul in sight.

"All right," squeaked Kimbo, who was always ready for a good time, and—naughty monkey that he was—always ready to run away if he was given half a chance.

"Come on, this way," grunted Tom.

Quietly and quickly Kimbo lifted the slip lock to his cage and then, presto, onto Tom's back he jumped, and away they went, around the corner and straight off toward the woods which lay back of the street fair.

"Oh, oh, this is lots more fun than a parade," squealed Kimbo.

"Shall I run faster?" grunted Tom.

"Oh, you can't run any faster than this," teased Kimbo.

The next minute he wished he hadn't tried to be so funny, for Tom started running as fast and as hard as his bear mama and papa had run in the wild woods before they were caught and tamed.

"Oh, I'm going to fall off," shrieked Kimbo, catching tight hold of Tom's great mane, but sure that any minute he was going to take a head first tumble and break his monkey neck.

"Umph, how's that for a run?" asked Tom when he came to a stop at last in front of a funny tumble down little cottage which was built in a clear space in the woods.

"O, don't ever go as fast as that again," scolded Kimbo. "I want to live a while longer."

"Umph, fraidy little monkey, fraidy little monkey."

It was Tom's turn to tease now, and I am afraid that they would have fallen into a real fuss if Tom hadn't thrown back his head.

"Sniff, sniff," he whispered. "I smell molasses cake and cookies." If there is anything a grizzly bear loves it is molasses cake and cookies.

"Come on, let's see," he said, and then he commenced creeping up to the door of the cottage so that no one would hear him.

And what do you think he saw inside that cottage? Two little boys and two little girls were having a regular party. They had a table set all nicely and on it—oh, there were cookies and cake, and little cups of hot chocolate with puffed cream on top.

"Oh, but I'd like some of that," squeaked Kimbo.

"Hush," grunted Tom, "Can't you keep still a minute?"

But he was too late. The little boys and girls had heard the noise.

"Help, help," they all shrieked, for they were just about frightened to death at the sight of that great big bear looking in the door with a crazy looking monkey in a green coat and red cap sitting on his back.

Well, it took just about one-half of a minute before all those children had tumbled out of the back window and were rushing helter skelter down the road which led to town.

"Umph," grunted Tom the grizzly. "What scared them so, I wonder? Guess there is only one thing for us to do and that is to help ourselves to what they left."

"Yes," quavered Kimbo doubtfully. He knew it was wrong to take what did not belong to you. But then he was only a little monkey—and that food looked so good.

You can imagine of course that it didn't take Tom and Kimbo very long to eat up all that nice food.

"I never tasted anything so good in all my life," squeaked Kimbo.

"Here neither," said Tom, forgetting his grammar in his excitement.

But alas and alack, who should suddenly appear at the door but Jerry? And he scared Tom and Kimbo nearly as much as they had scared the children.

"What on earth are you doing here?" he shouted at them. "Here we are nearly ready for parade and have been looking all over for you."

But Tom and Kimbo did not wait to be urged to move on. They made one rush for the door, and just in time, too, for Jerry had a great big whip and he was whirling it around in the air in a most disagreeable way.

"Get up there now," he roared after them. "Get back to your cages."

And they did. Out of the woods they rushed, pell mell, Jerry behind them. When they reached the main street of the town whom should they meet but the little boys and girls whose luncheon they had stolen.

"Oh, look, there is the bear!" shrieked one little boy.

"And the monkey, too," piped a little girl.

But Tom and Kimbo tore on past them and each rushed into his own cage. When Jerry came they were both looking as meek and mild as you please, as if they had never done anything naughty in all their lives. That did not prevent their both being soundly whipped, however.

"Never again," said Tom, the grizzly bear, as he went supperless to sleep that night.

"Never again," squeaked Kimbo, as he went bread and milkless to bed that evening.

9654—House dress—Cut in sizes 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure.

9638—Girl's long waisted dress—Sizes 8, 10, 12, and 14 years.

9651—Woman's dress—Cut in sizes 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

THE long-waisted dress, No. 9638, will be especially becoming to the girl who is inclined to be stout, and yet there are many who are built on slender lines to whom this design will be becoming.

The skirt is a one piece, straight gathered pattern, and the waist part has an under body which helps to hold it in place.

Heavy linen, linen or cotton crash, suiting, and similar materials will make up well; and if the bottom of the skirt is finished with a band of embroidery, choosing some conventional design, it will be stunning.

A small design should be embroidered on the ends of the collar and upper sides of the cuffs.

This pattern will also make up attractively in one of the lightweight materials, and will be easy to make, the directions given with the pattern being plain.

No. 9654 is a good design for a house dress, and, if one is willing to spend a little time on it, the result cannot help but be satisfying. One of the beautiful plaids in a gingham will be just the thing, and pocket laps, collar edge, and sleeve or cuff edges, as the case may be, can be of a plain gingham matching in color the most prominent color in the plaid.

These trimming pieces should be set on with a faggoting stitch. This is not difficult, but takes times to do well. Take the collar, for instance. Mark off on the pattern the width you wish the main part of the collar to take up, then allow one-fourth or three-eighths of an inch for width of the faggoting stitch, and see what width remains for the plain border. If you have not allowed enough of a margin to make the border the right width, take some off the main part of the collar. After this part has been decided on cut a pattern of the collar out of heavy paper or thin pasteboard, and on this mark off accurately the space to be taken by the collar, then the border, the space between being for the faggoting.

The plaid part of the collar is cut double or single, as one wishes; but before basting on the paper it must be quite finished and the finished edge basted exactly on the line drawn. Then the border is made and basted in place.

You are now ready for the faggoting, which should be done with mercerized floss in any desired color. Insert the needle in the left hand end of the collar and take a small stitch toward you, then cross to the opposite or border edge and take a stitch the same size and way. This stitch is not taken directly under the upper stitch, but a little in front of it. The stitches are alternated, first top, then bottom, and the manner of taking makes them cross one another. After the faggoting is finished the collar is removed from the paper and the work is finished.

No. 9651 is a pretty design for a rather dressy gown, and would be lovely made of one of the flowered or figured muslins or voiles and with the chemisette of white organdy.

Crêpe de chine, taffeta, or satin would also be most attractive, and the scalloped edge shown on the skirt is a pretty finish. If the edge is to be scalloped, the skirt seams are finished first and the scallops clearly marked on the right side of the material. If a hem or facing is desired, baste it in place on the wrong side, turn in the upper edge, and hem by hand.

A contrasting color and, perhaps, material is used for binding the edges, and it is cut on a true bias, the strips being one or one and one-half inches wide. The binding is sewed on by hand, taking a narrow seam, and making it still narrower at the corners. Be careful not to stretch either the scallops or binding. After it has been sewed on all around clip the seam at the corners of the scallops and turn to the wrong side of the skirt. Turn in the opposite edge of the binding and hem it down over the first sewing, being sure that no stitches come through to the right side. Where the fold comes in the binding, at the raw edge of the scallops, the binding is carefully stretched so as to make it lie smoothly over the edge.

In this, as in most sewing, careful handling counts for much. Many a garment is spoiled by too much and too hard handling.

FORTUNE RULING DAYS

By Doris Blake

THE days of the week are distinguished in various ways by the folklore gatherers. In an earlier story I told you about Friday the 13th and how it came to be marked with ill luck.

You know the old rhyme we used to recite about "Wash on Monday, iron on Tuesday, mend on Wednesday, visit on Thursday, clean on Friday, bake on Saturday, and rest on Sunday." There is more of the practical than of a folklore nature to the foregoing system of conducting a household. Just what was the reason for calling Monday blue Monday, unless it is because of its being washday, is not understood, or maybe it got its name from the day after Sunday with the latter's inactivity and more or less heavy eating.

There is a list of don'ts for Monday which seems to have no particular reason for being formed except to break the charm of repetition:

Pay no bills on Monday.

Draw no money from the bank on Monday.

Pay cash for all you buy on Monday.

Borrow nothing on Monday.

Keep all you take in on Monday.

Thus you will conserve your fortunes.

To dig in the earth on Sunday is bad luck.

Sew on Sunday and you will have bad luck all week.

Lose your temper three times on Monday and you will have a financial loss before the end of the week.

Tuesday is considered the luckiest day for sowing corn.

A fair Friday means a wet Sunday and vice versa.

Never use anything new for the first time on Friday.

It is unlucky to wash anything on Saturday; nor begin any sewing on Saturday.

Laugh on Friday, you weep on Monday.

Never plan a new business venture on Sunday or it will not materialize.

If it rains on the first Sunday of the month, it will be sure to rain on all but one.

Sharpen a knife on Sunday and something will go wrong before the end of the week.

The last Friday in a month shows what the next month will be.

It is bad luck to dance on Saturday night after 12 o'clock.

Thursday is a lucky day for opening a shop, but Friday or Saturday unlucky.

If you lose a count of the days of the week and think it a day or two later, it is a sign you have gained a new friend. If you think it a day earlier, you have lost a friend.

There are three particularly unlucky Mondays in the year. The first Monday in April when Cain was born and Abel was slain. The second is the first Monday in August, which is the day on which Sodom was confounded. The third is the last Monday in December, the day on which Judius Iscariot was born.

If things go wrong on Monday, they'll go wrong all week and vice versa.

How the days rule your fortune:

"The Mondays of the week indifferent are:
Yet the event thereof bids you beware.
On Tuesday cruel Mars doth reign;
Beware of strife lest blows you gain.
On Wednesday witty projects make,
For Mercury the rule doth take.
Mild Jove rues Thursday, do not fear:
'Tis prosperous throughout the year.
Fair Venus Friday doth approve;
And on that day does prosper love.
Saturn next doth rule, beware!
And take in hand no great affair.
On Sunday Sol doth rule whose aspect shows
He all things kindly does to good dispose."

Just 15 Minutes a Day

What it will mean to you is told by Dr. Eliot of Harvard in the FREE BOOKLET below. Just clip the coupon—but do it to-day. Every reader of this newspaper is invited to have a copy.

HERE are two men of equal position and business income. Which of them represents you?

They read about the same number of hours each week. But one has no plan for his reading; at the end of the year he has little or nothing to show.

The other talks like a man who has traveled widely, though he has never been outside of the United States.

He knows something of Science, though he had to stop school at fifteen. He is at home with History, and the best biographies, and the really great dramas and essays. Older men like to talk to him because he has somehow gained the rare gift of thinking clearly and talking interestingly.

What's the secret of his mental growth? How can a man in a few minutes of pleasant reading each day gain so much?

Dr. Charles W. Eliot, from his lifetime of reading, study, and teaching, forty years of it as president of Harvard University, has answered that question in a free booklet that you can have for the asking. In it are described the contents, plan, and purpose of

Dr. Eliot's Five-Foot Shelf of Books

The pleasant path to a liberal education

EVERY well-informed man and woman should at least know something about this famous library.

The free book tells about it—how Dr. Eliot has put into his Five-Foot Shelf "the essentials of a liberal education," how he has so arranged it that even "fifteen minutes a day" is enough, how in pleasant moments of spare time, by using the reading courses Dr. Eliot has provided for you, you can get the knowledge of literature and life, the culture, the broad viewpoint that every University strives to give.

"For me," wrote one man who had sent in the coupon, "your little free book meant a big step forward, and it showed me besides the way to a vast new world of pleasure."

Every reader of this newspaper is invited to have a copy of this handsome and entertaining little book. It is free, will be sent by mail, and involves no obligation of any sort. Merely clip the coupon and mail it today.

Practical and Fancy Needle Work

By Clotilde

Questions on sewing will be answered if a stamped, addressed envelope is inclosed. Address Clotilde, Chicago Sunday Tribune.

EMBROIDERING INITIALS.

An initial, beautifully embroidered, will give an air of distinction to any article. It is work that needs to be perfectly done to look well, and this perfection will only come with practice. When first attempting this work, choose letters with as straight lines as possible, as curves are more difficult to begin with.

Sometimes the material to be embroidered is a loose weave, and to give the initial the clear outline it should have, a close fine running stitch must be employed, using the floss the outside work is to be done with.

The next step is the stuffing or padding, and this gives better results where the embroidery floss in the same or a coarser number is used. The stuffing should be heavier in the middle of a line, flattening toward the ends, and it must be gradually done—not humpy in one place and much less so right next to it. The chain stitch is used for stuffing, also a rather long plain stitch, the stitches on the wrong side being as short as possible. The stuffing is always done in the opposite direction to that taken by the outside stitches, and on the evenness and smoothness of this padding the beauty of the work largely depends.

The outside stitches are taken across the bars and curved lines, always at right angles to the long lines. When a curve is reached the needle should be put through from the right side of the inside of the curve and brought up on the outer edge just outside the outlining stitch. Never try to put the needle in and out at the same time. Rather, put it through to the wrong side with the right hand, and then, taking the needle with the left, on the under side of the material, place it just outside the outline thread and bring it up with the right hand.

It is only practice that will enable one to embroider well, but the work is so fascinating and beautiful nearly every woman would enjoy doing it.

One good point to remember is: Where there are two halves to a figure, as there are to a leaf, for instance, always insert the needle on the middle line for both sides. The needle should never be drawn out against stitches that are already taken, as it is impossible to do the work well that way.

Some beautiful initials are made by padding and stuffing the outline and then filling the spaces with heavily stuffed dots or seed stitches. The dots should be done before the outline, and they are difficult to do well. They must be perfectly graduated in size to fit the spaces, and the stuffing is no easy part of it. The seed stitch is much easier to do, made as it is of two tiny stitches parallel to each other, and being taken regularly or irregularly, according to the effect desired.

Doris Blake's Answers to Love Problems.

Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care the Sunday Tribune. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped, addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

Keep Him in Suspense.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl of 18 and am in love with a boy of 19. He wrote and asked me if I loved him. As I don't know him very well, don't you think it best to keep him in suspense for the time being? Please help me out, as I would be very much obliged to you for your advice. MICKEY."

Yes, it would be better to keep him in suspense for the time being. Of course, Mickey, he may not be in suspense, either. He may be just gratifying a personal vanity. He doesn't seem to have told you he loved you.

Try Another One.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am very fond of a girl who seems to like me. However, she has, on many occasions, been indifferent, and has even slightly insulted me. It would be, I am sure, prideless to continue going with her. I should like very much to overcome the difficulty in my favor if I could. Can you lend me a hand? R. I. H."

If I suspected her of indifference to the point of being insulting, I should take a different course. In fact, I should take the road that would lead to another girl's house and heart.

The One You Love Best.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl of 23 and for the last year have loved a fine young man of 37, but lately I have become very fond of another man of 25. I do not know for sure which one I want to marry. Do you think it would be wise to marry the man of 37? He loves me very much. "EDNA."

Which do you love the better, Edna? It sounds to me as though it were the 25 year old.

Summer Hats

SUMMER hats are airy creations, whether of straw or braid or silken fabrics. Drooping brims are very picturesque—pokes, sailors, turbans and turned up brims are equally fetching. Dainty bits of artistic trimming—wreaths, nosegays and ribbons—appear on crown or brim. Georgette crepe, taffeta and hair braid combined with satin are popular hat fabrics this year. Special at 10

Not noticing the space between the boards, I fell through and landed on some grass far beneath the people. I was not missed by my friends until I yelled. When I was pulled up I attracted the attention of everyone and all had a good laugh at me. All through the performance I had the pleasure of being the goat. It taught me a lesson to keep my seat. J. C. A.

'Twas an Ill Wind.

My husband's mother had no love in her heart for me and had no control of her temper at times. After our marriage she refused to come to see us, but to our surprise one day, after much coaxing by my husband, she agreed to come.

She arrived in her haughty manner [which I was trying to overlook and to be overly friendly] and was in the act of taking off her wraps when suddenly on went the hat, up went the nose, and out the door went the mother-in-law while I stood there speechless.

I discovered that the wind had blown her picture down from the corner of the dresser into the waste paper basket. I had put her picture out to show her that I had a kindly feeling, but that gust of wind blew up a heap of trouble for me. E. J.

Missed the Switch.

I thought I had all my belongings when I left my berth for the dressing room. When I was ready to do my hair I missed my switch of artificial curls. When I returned I found them pinned to the back of the seat, to the amusement of my fellow travelers. M. A.

Then the Feathers Flew.

Having separated from my husband (because of the other woman), I was employed in a millinery shop. One day I noticed a couple strolling around looking at the hats. As I approached to ask if they wished attention I was horrified to discover the woman's escort to be my husband. E. R.

It Was a Goat.

Among a small crowd of friends, some one suggested playing a game in which every one was to play the part of some animal. Each was confidentially told the part he was to play, and as the leader counted three, we were all to start together. I had been told to imitate a dog, and at the signal, started barking furiously, only to find that every one else had been told to keep still. The joke was on me and my embarrassment was only increased when every one asked me what animal I was trying to represent. L. A. W.

Before you buy a phonograph, find out the thickness of the wood in the cabinet. Don't be deceived by pieces added to the bottom to hide flimsy construction.

How well is it made?

FIND out before you buy. Study the phonograph cabinet. Sonora cabinets are of wood ¾" thick. Are you willing to risk the dangers of warping and distortion, due to the utilization by most makers, of wood only ⅜" thick or thereabouts?

6,000 PAIRS OF WOMEN'S LOW FOOTWEAR (Substandards)

$8 AND $9 VALUES — 3.77 — $8 AND $9 VALUES

As in the past, so in this sale of Footwear, we are doing our best to reduce high prices. As we are not running a warehouse, old merchandise has no room on our shelves, and so we plan to keep our large stocks continually on the move. This eliminates old stocks and styles accumulating, and we can always offer up to date footwear at reasonable prices.

Tomorrow we offer about 6,000 pairs Women's Low Footwear at an unusual price, considering the present market conditions. At this price we will be greatly surprised if each woman who attends buys less than two pairs.

The season's latest models. 5 eyelet Oxfords, 1 and 2 eyelet Ties, Theo Ties, Opera Pumps, Shimmy Pumps, etc., made of patent kid, dull and glazed kid, patent coltskin and mahogany calf. Every pair welted, hand turned or flexible sewed soles, high Louis heels, all sizes. $8 and $9 values, but they are termed factory substandards, although in most cases you'll wonder why, because the imperfections are so slight. FOR AND BY BUSINESS GIRLS BY LORETTA KING

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Miss Loretta King, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

CAN'T KEEP A GOOD JOB.

IT HAS always been a source of wonder to me, and I suppose other business girls have puzzled over it too, as to why certain bright and well educated girls are unable to hold a position for any length of time. I have several girls in mind who have no trouble getting good jobs, but have great difficulty in keeping them beyond a few weeks. They evidently make a good impression on a first interview, but do not wear well.

I have recently been associated with a girl whose experience has been a revelation to me. She is probably an exaggerated type of the girl who can't keep a good job, but I believe that it is the same lack of appreciation of office discipline that is responsible for the failure of other bright girls to keep a worth while position.

I was doing some special work for a firm that had a reputation of having one of the most desirable offices in the city, and there was always a long list of applicants for the various jobs handled by girls. It did not take long to realize that vacancies in that office were rare. Once a girl was fortunate enough to get a position on that particular office staff, she held on to her job with determination, and nothing less than a prosperous marriage could induce her to resign.

While I was there several new positions for women were created by the officials of the firm, and there was a great stir and buzz throughout the office regarding the new girls who were to be taken on the staff. Most of the gossip finally centered about one of the new girls. She had evidently made considerable of an impression on each member of the firm who interviewed her, as it was soon heralded about the office that one of the new girls was a "find" and a "gem."

The three new girls started to work at the same time, and every one in the office, without exception, conceded at the end the first week that the head's selection showed keen judgment in the case of one of the girl at least. She was a wonder. There wasn't anything that she couldn't do and do well. I am sure, from the expression on his face during that first week that the man who hired this girl never stopped secretly congratulating himself on his good fortune.

After the first week or ten days it was noticed in the office that this new girl was taking advantage of every privilege that was occasionally allowed to the older employés. No comment was made on this, however. It was not until she had created for herself new and extraordinary privileges with scarcely a "by your leave" to her employers that the other members of the office force became antagonistic to her. They saw in her utter lack of office discipline the loss of their few but prized privileges.

She came to me one day with what seemed to her a great grievance. It was on a Saturday morning and the office closed for the day at 1 o'clock. She had spent the night before at the home of a girl friend and had no way of curling her hair that morning. When she came in at 9:30 that morning (she was late as usual) two or three of the girls were tactless enough to tell her that her hair was not arranged becomingly. From 9:30 until 10 o'clock she spent at the telephone trying to make an appointment with a hairdresser for a marcel wave. She finally made an appointment for 11 o'clock that morning.

When she asked the manager if she couldn't get off at 11 o'clock to get her hair curled, he told her to wait and have it done after 1 o'clock. She came out of his office in an indignant mood and informed me that the manager was a stupid man, as she couldn't convince him that it was impossible to get an appointment at that hour with a hairdresser on Saturday afternoon, nor how important a matter it was that she have her hair curled that day.

After several flagrant instances of breaking office rules I wasn't surprised to learn that she had been discharged. I have since learned that during her six years in the business world eight months has been the longest period she was able to hold any position

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

MIDSUMMER STYLES.

By Mary Brush Williams.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—[Special correspondence.] Apropos of a fact, often commented on, that the French do not go in heavily for wash materials, I think the accompanying group of illustrations represents quite successfully the French conception of midsummer styles. Barring the seaside and a few hardly representative French places, you would scarcely meet with any greater sartorial concession to hot weather than herein portrayed.

You know of course that all summer long they run round through the town huddled into a fur piece. I was dressed to go to the wedding of Reginald Townsend last July, and I felt anything but comfortable, because it was the kind of warm, sunny day with bright sky overhead which demanded a dress of filmy summer thinness. Mine was of crêpe de chine.

I was about to start forth with a fair degree of complacency, when a French friend anxiously called me back. "Now that dress would do all right to wear to the wedding, if you only had a fur piece to wear round your neck—or a wrap. Where is your wrap?"

"It's put away in camphor until next October," I answered.

"But you mustn't go round the streets of Paris all summer without a wrap or a piece of fur!" She was frank in her disapproval of my unfortunate American ways. They had not sufficiently broken me then, and I persisted in dressing comfortably. Now I am too steeped, I fear, in French customs—I should scarcely risk being comfortable this year.

The first sketch represents almost the acme of comfort admitted in French costuming for the summer. Five famous French actresses appeared in the suit depicted on the same morning at Monte Carlo. Although the French are supposed to regard it as a compliment if others choose dresses off the same model they have chosen, it is reported that these actresses were not overpleased when they met. That in no wise affects the prettiness of the gown. It is of woolly green material appliqued in white leather leaves and black straw flowers. There is a piping round the design of coral beads, and this design runs also round the bottom of the sleeves. The blouse is of black chiffon run with a white hair line.

Green wool gown, appliqued in white leather.

Midnight blue satin wrap.

Sports suit of thin serge.

The second offering is a coat of midnight blue satin by Drecoll, and it is lined with sea green chiffon. The collar is almost as long as the coat and is more voluminous. It is full and is wired to recede in a high roll from the neck, whence it pursues a perfectly straight course to a point below the knees. Lines of gold embroidery cover the seams from the shoulder line to the hem. The enormous fastener at the waistline is of ostrich feathers some of them blue and some green. A few of them fall in long ends almost to the bottom of the garment.

The third sketch represents what is probably the nearest approach to a sports dress ever achieved by the French. One may wear it on the outskirts of Paris, and then preferably tightly concealed by a street cape, held steadfastly closed. This particular frock happens to be of thin serge, although even its designer does not object to its being repeated in regular "middy" material—in something, in anything that washes. She thinks that it is extremely pretty in light blue, with garnishment of black. This one in white is trimmed in bright blue serge. It is quilted on round the bottom of the blouse and the sleeves. The perpendicular lines represent embroidery in silk of the same color.

Silk jersey is still a permitted material. The only reason it ever stopped being the rage is that one could no longer get it in this capital of fashion, and dresses of it became more expensive than even the rich could afford. The fourth sketch represents a frock of white silk jersey by Cheruit. Its principal features are its low, wide girdle and its collar, which circles the neck and falls on either side the front to points below the hem. It is of white organdie and at the waist line it passes under the low cointure. The white jersey material blouses over this cointure gracefully. In front it opens to display an apron-like affair which is gathered on a silk chord at the neck line and is made of white jersey embroidered in gold thread.

White silk jersey frock.

Bright Sayings of Children

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

The Tribune will pay $1 for each children saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, The Tribune, Chicago.

One of the neighbors adopted twin babies. She brought the little girl home a week before the little boy.

When the baby boy came he seemed more lively and laughed loudly. Mary, 3 years old, said: "I like that one. It talks." M. L. B.

Bess had been told that Aunt Lila was going to have a baby brought from heaven for her to play with, and she was much pleased and excited over it. After dinner in the evening she climbed upon a chair to the telephone and asked central for the number, which she had learned. When she heard her aunt's voice over the phone she called loudly: "O, Aunt Lila, has your baby tum yet?" M. L.

At a friend's house they were greatly elated over the advent of twin babies. They also had a small son aged 6. Soon after the arrival of the twins we also celebrated the addition of a new daughter in our home. Robert came over to see our baby, and after taking a look at the baby he excitedly exclaimed: "My doodness, but you got cheated. It's awfey small, and its only one twin." J. C. K.

Lewis, whose mother was in a sanitarium, was being urged by his nurse at home to eat food that she thought he required. She said, "Lewis, pretend you are a car. It is twenty miles to mother and it takes a gallon of gasoline to go a mile. Now, every mouthful you take is a gallon of gasoline. So twenty mouthfuls will take you to mother." Lewis made a brave attempt to accomplish the end, and after taking about ten mouthfuls, he exclaimed, with disgust, "O, gee, I guess I'll walk the rest of the way." S.

A little boy and his little sister were in the habit of going to bed every night at 9 o'clock and as their bedrooms were upstairs and they had a dark hallway to cross it was always a question who would go first. It was usually the little boy, as he was a gallant little chap, but one night he went only as far as the doorway, then stepping aside said in his best company voice, "Ladies first." R. A. J.

* * *

My niece was sitting at the dining room window when I came in and sat down. I gave a little sigh, as if tired, and she said, "Hello, auntie, are you all out?" M. H.

* * *

Helen was trying to write something and held it up for mother's inspection, saying: "See mother; what does that say?"

"I can hardly see it," said her mother.

"Well, then," said Helen; "I'll make it look louder." B. H.

COOKING FLANK STEAK.

A MAN—I watched him—stood before the butcher's counter whereon lay a flank steak. There were evidently economical stirrings in his steak sense, for he really wanted to buy that particular piece of meat, for he asked ignorant questions about it. That sort of thing is quite forgivable, for it is often a good way to learn some new point of view or a real fact. I can do it with a good conscience, and I rather hate real deception. But the butcher's answers were not helpful. The main idea he conveyed was that it was "different," so his customer compromised on a sirloin.

That butcher, it seemed to me, missed a real opportunity to help the beef business and the cattle raiser. The best beef advice of the present—truly disinterested advice from a commercial standpoint—is thus expressed in one of the agricultural bulletins: "It is highly essential to the entire beef cattle industry on the one hand and the economic welfare of the beef eating public on the other that a more intelligent understanding of the different cuts of meat be acquired by consumers generally."

Any observing person must have noted the maps of meat creatures in butchers' shops, in large advertisements, in food workers' offices, as a new thing within the last few years. Experts in cutting up beef can even "read the bones." But to know a flank steak we want to know how to read the muscles of the beef creature, for it is a boneless piece.

Few Recipes for Steak.

Recipes for cooking flank steak are few, but if you can find one for cooking "skirt steak" or one for "butcher's porterhouse," as you can, you may know that you have what you need, since the skirt is the flank stripped of its fat. As displayed, as it never should be save for educational purposes, it is scored diagonally so that the long muscles are cut into diamonds.

Not only is the lean part of the flank called the skirt to our confusion, but the flank part is called the navel often, or the whole under thin part of the animal is called the plate, or, in some cookbooks, "the boiling piece." Another bit of nomenclature that might make the whole confusing is the term "thick flank," which is the top sirloin or cut from the front of the bullock bone (femur).

If a beef creature should stand on its hind legs facing us the top part of the torso below its "arms" would be the brisket, the middle part the plate, and the lowest front part the flank or navel. I have one quite modern diagram in which the lower half of the total circumference of the creature is called flank, but the best usage makes it half that girth and narrows down almost to a point nearest the hind shank. This piece is fat covered and inside is the piece used for steak or for mock duck instead of a piece of round sometimes, for baking with onions, for boiling, and utilizing in various ways after boiled. The trimmings which represent the third part of the piece when it is stripped of fat and the lean prepared for an inexpensive steak, are used for stew.

The actual amount of lean or steak meat in a small side of beef (200 pounds) is said to be one pound and a half. The average weight of flank or skirt steak in a beef creature is given as four pounds, or weighing anything from two to five pounds. This amount of meat ought not to go begging for lack of intelligence.

How to Pan Broil.

Pan broiling is probably the best method of cooking this as steak. Roll it closely and skewer it so that the roll can be cut into one inch slices. Pan broiling is not frying or sautéing. You simply put the meat on a complete surface of greased iron instead of the divided iron called a grid, greased and over hot coals or under gas. It is necessary to grease both gridiron and pan to keep the meat from sticking and tearing. If any fat cooks out of a meat when it is pan broiling it is poured off to prevent its having the fried look or taste of meat cooked in fat.

The butcher does not cut a flank steak—that is, sell but part of it—but he will make it into "rosettes," each with a skewer. These are simply slices of a roll resembling those of a jelly roll. Pieces of meat of the desired width and length may be cut first and these rolled and skewered. Some people like their steaks thicker than do others, and rarer. This steak can be served rare or well done like any other.

To pan broil a steak the pan should be sizzling hot, then rubbed with a piece of fat, the meat seared on both sides, then the heat lowered so that it may cook without drying out or burning on the surface. The fire that is hot enough to sear meat will soon be too hot for finishing the cooking. Steaks are too often burned or dried out. Add salt at the last, since salt draws out the juices, which may be dried up or burned—lost at any rate. If the rosettes are one inch thick ten minutes to a side is probably ample for the cooking. If the steak is broiled in a broiling oven the time required depends upon the heat of the oven. It should be genuinely and not flashily hot at the start, and finally have the heat turned down. When a steak is really cooking through there should never be fire enough for the fat to catch fire and the steak be half or totally ruined.

In Old Cook Books.

In a famous old book by a master butcher the brisket piece is properly described as the boiling piece, which the French call bouilli. It is more important to them than the bouillon or its liquor. The plate piece, often called in Boston "rattle-ran," is described as the piece most commonly used for corned or salted beef. Or, says this butcher, after taking the bones out, many butchers roll it with sugar, spice, etc., then tie or skewer it up in a round form. After being well cured it is known as Scotch roll.

This author calls the flank the navel piece or thin end brisket, which, he says, is much used for the same purposes as the plate and brisket pieces. These three pieces are used principally for salting, packing, exportation, and shipping uses.

In a yet older book, an English cook book, I find that the flank was "collared," or cured with sugar and molasses and spice, the same as the plate mentioned. When cured (in ten days or so), it was boiled, long and slowly, and considered an excellent dish. Perhaps it was the Scotch who originated the idea of spicing this piece. I find recipes for spiced beef in a Scotch cook book, which directs that the flank be used. But more likely the French were the people first to use the flank elegantly.

A modern master butcher, in describing hind quarter cuts, says:

"The flank is next cut off. This is the part back of the ribs and beneath the loin. It has practically no bone, save for the tip of the first rib, and is very fat. This is trimmed out and the lean is cut up for stewing and the like. From the inside of the flank a good steak may be taken. A pocket may be made in the steak, filled with dressing, and the whole baked."

Stranger to Hotel Chef.

Still another modern master butcher, writing for the hotel and restaurant trade, as the other for the housewife, says:

"The flank steak is another comparative stranger to the steward and chef. It is that part of the beef coming from the flank, lying directly over the 'cod' of the steer and of the udder of a heifer or cow. It weighs from one to two pounds. The supply is rather limited, but, it being such a stranger, its demand is not very large, so I have never had any trouble in getting a supply.

"In character the flank steak resembles closely the short rib, with its alternate layers of fat and lean, and for the person who relishes fat food it is a favorite. It has an advantage over the short rib in being somewhat more tender."

In using flank steak for meat roll some cooks slash the inside only, or the side on which the stuffing is placed. They use an acceptable stuffing and cut it in rosette slices when serving it. The long fibers, like those of a lobster, are mainly on the outside, and the slashing should be shallow.

The case of Lucy Gray—

Lucy was explaining her experience to a group of girls.

"When I was 18 years old," she said seriously, "my father died.

"I had to go to work, but I didn't know what to do. I had just graduated from high school, and I had to have something quick. I simply couldn't afford to spend six months or a year learning shorthand or bookkeeping and I didn't know a thing about business.

"One night mother looked up from her newspaper: 'Lucy, dear,' she said suddenly, 'why don't you take up filing? It seems to me the work should be interesting and I hear the salaries are good.'

"Well, to cut a long story short, I took a course at the Illinois School of Filing. I graduated in 30 days and immediately secured a position paying $20 a week. I shall never forget how proud I was to get that first week's salary—the first money I had ever earned.

"That was a little over a year ago. Since then I have received two raises and today I am in charge of the Filing Department.

"The work is awfully pleasant. Best of all it is extremely interesting. I meet nice people—I come in contact with the big men in the business.

"And I am just starting. Some day soon I am going to be getting a good bit more than I do now.

"There is a great future for most girls who take up filing. I certainly advise any girl who wants to better her position to see Miss Gladys C. Bridges, the principal of the Illinois School of Filing. She will be glad to talk to you."

Women Designed It!

How should an electric iron be made to best fit women's needs? This is a question that none can answer better than women. That's why in producing this brand new six and one-half pound iron, Westinghouse enlisted the aid of women.

Women suggested a plug that can be easily removed, yet never slips out. Women proposed that the edge of the iron should be beveled, the better to look down on the work. Women determined the shape and the finish.

A HOME OF BEAUTY.

NATIONS are curiously marked off from each other by their forms of art. England hardly deserves mention in music; she takes no prizes in sculpture and not many in painting. Even in general architecture she copies ten times as much as she originates, and not infrequently spoils a good design in the copying.

But there are two fields in which England's artistic leadership is acknowledged—landscape gardening and domestic architecture. The French, who know art wherever they see it, have been going across the channel for a hundred and fifty years for their inspiration in landscape work; and more recently architects of all nations have found that they can study England's homes, especially her small homes, with profit.

The little house illustrated here is the product of that study. It is not copied from English models, but it is suggested by them, adapted from them. It is changed enough from the original type to make it fit perfectly in American surroundings, yet every architect and every one who has traveled in Britain knows instantly where the central idea came from.

Externally, the house is its own best recommendation at once. The round arched doorway, the window groups, particularly the bow window in the living room, the hovering roof, nestling dormer and sturdy chimney make a finer picture to the eye than any that can be conveyed by words. The effect of all these elements of beauty is heightened by the simple diaper pattern of the walls, outlined in dark toned face brick against a somewhat lighter background of the same material. It is emphatically a home of beauty.

The floor plans are as satisfactory as the exterior, though of course not so easy to grasp at a glance. The vestibule entered by the round arched doorway has a space at the side which can be used either for a seat or a hall closet. From this vestibule you pass to the small central hall, just wide enough to accommodate the stairs which rise directly in front of you.

At the left is the living room, a little over 11 feet wide by 16 feet long. The fireplace, as could be told from the chimney, is in the long outer wall. On your left, as you face this central feature of any living room in a climate cold enough to need fire, is the bow window that appealed to you from the outside by its form, and now makes sure of your favor, both by form and utility.

At the far end of the room is a living porch which deserves special mention. It is 9 feet 3 inches long, with the same width as the living room. Indeed, it is merely the sun end of the living room. This glazed in porch gives a vista more than 25 feet in length by not quite half that in width. There is nothing cramped or constricted about such an outlook. How many mansions do you find in which the living quarters are as spacious and inviting?

Turning to the right from the living porch, you cross the narrow rear hall, where the basement stairs go under those to the upper story and enter the kitchen, 8 feet by 9 feet 2 inches. This does not include the passage where the refrigerator is located. There is no formal pantry, but space is provided for a kitchen cabinet, and two deep closets next the dining room can be thrown together and turned into a pantry if desired. The dining room itself is 10x12 feet, as large as a small family is likely ever to need.

Upstairs are three bedrooms, all provided with closets and all with windows in two sides, together with a large bathroom and a linen press in the hall.

The material of the walls of this cottage is face brick, as noted at the start. Either common brick or hollow tile can be used for backing. By a little care in selecting brick of varying tones, the builder can have a wall of wonderful harmony and beauty, and with an interesting quality which absolutely uniform material lacks. The man who uses face brick is not troubled by monotony. He can have any color and tone that a reasonable being desires. The roof is of asphalt shingles, and the interior plaster, both of walls and partitions, is laid on metal lath.

So built, this house will last for ages, protecting its inmates from fire all the time, and the increased cost is not more than 7 per cent higher than that of frame construction. Because this dwelling is virtually fireproof and time-proof, and because, likewise, it is one for which depreciation hardly exists and upkeep and insurance bills are reduced to a minimum, it is one which a man of fair income can undertake to build. He can start with a comparatively small saving of his own. Banks and building and loan associations will find the rest of the required capital, well knowing that the investment will not be swept away by fire, eaten up by maintenance charges, or rotted out by decay.

Too Weak to Walk.

"Would you kindly help me to secure a girl's tricycle? My daughter was just getting over scarlet fever when she came down with chickenpox. She has fully recovered, but is so weak that I'm obliged to carry her when out of doors to get the fresh air. Probably some girl has outgrown one and will be pleased to pass it along. With doctor bills piled high, I cannot afford to buy one. I hope I'm not asking too much and will be glad to call for it.

"MRS. H."

This plea speaks for itself. Have you a tricycle for the little girl?

Wants Home for a Kitten.

"I have not as yet found a home for my little black kitten. She is about 5 months old and is smart and clean. I should like to find a home for her and feel sure she will be found worthy of kind care. A. H."

Some one is sure to want your nice kitten. I shall send your address to the person interested.

Have No Furniture.

"I am making an appeal for a woman who is just coming out of the infirmary, after having been there for four years. She is dependent on an only daughter, whose wages are small. They have no bed or furniture of any kind, and are badly in need of clothing. Could you assist them? MRS. M. C."

Yes, I feel that I can safely promise help, for an appeal such as this seldom goes unanswered.

Come to BRADLEY HALL

Where Work Means More Than a Living

THE cities are full of young women obliged to earn their way far from relatives and friends. Many of them, owing to the crowded conditions of cities, are forced to board or lodge in dreary, cramped rooms among unsocial strangers. Life under such conditions is surely all work and no play.

It was this condition which led the Bradley Knitting Company to plan Bradley Hall. We wanted the young women who came from a distance to work in the Bradley mills, to get "more than a living" from their labor. We wanted them to be surrounded by the happiness and comfort which one associates with a genuinely successful career.

Choose the Work You Can Do and Like to Do

The Bradley Knitting Company provides a beautiful home for you—but even more important is the work itself. You can choose the kind of work you like best and consequently, the work in which you will progress fastest.

The work appeals naturally to women, and calls for all degrees of skill to meet your own experience and talents.

WINDING appeals to the nimble-fingered girls who like to move around.

HAND FINISHING appeals to girls who wish to be seated while at work.

MACHINE FINISHING appeals to those who do not care for hand work.

CUTTING requires a steady hand and is very interesting.

INSPECTING is interesting, varied and requires a great deal of judgment.

To the ambitious girl who is now working in uncongenial surroundings, or to the girl just starting out in business life, we offer the beginning of a career—and a pleasant, congenial, social life in the meantime. We place you in a department best suited to your ability and teach you your work from the very beginning. The wages for beginners are good and are rapidly advanced as your experience increases.

Do not put off writing for our booklet describing life at Bradley Hall in detail, with photographs and views of the work and the pretty things you will help us make.

Address
Miss Margaret Ruth Johnson
Bradley Hall, Delavan, Wisconsin

NOTE—Two or more girls may come to Bradley Hall together and share a double room. Families may buy attractive homes for much less than the price of the rent alone in most cities. The booklet tells all about it.

What Life is Like at Bradley Hall

In some ways, Bradley Hall offers even more than many homes. It is a beautiful, modern building, elegantly furnished and contains every modern convenience. The big living room with its easy chairs, secluded corners, piano and talking machine, is the social center.

There is a reading room, a writing room, a gymnasium, a laundry—everything to minister to comfort, instruction, health and diversion.

The bedrooms at Bradley Hall are all that a girl could wish for—bright, roomy and comfortable, with pretty twin beds, soft mattresses and pillows, and plenty of clean bedding.

Each room has a private lavatory with hot and cold water, and there is a reading lamp at each bedside.

The Dining Room at Bradley Hall is arranged in cafeteria style, so that each girl may select the kind and quantity of food which she likes best. The meals are very, very good—and are furnished at cost. Your money goes far at Bradley Hall, and you will find it possible to save a tidy nest egg.

WOMAN HATERS

Did you ever have an experience with a woman hater? Tell us about him. How did he act? And why did he hate? Did he keep on hating or did you cure him? The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, Chicago Tribune.

Heritage of Hate.

I know four men, all old bachelors, who live together. They are all well educated, have good professions, and are what the world calls successful, but they all abhor womankind. They were adopted from an orphan asylum when children by a rich old man who had been disappointed in married life and was an avowed hater of women.

He educated the boys and left them his money, but lived long enough to instill in their minds distrust and suspicion of all womankind, and as he was their best friend [in fact, all the friend or home that they ever had] they naturally loved him and believed absolutely in all his teachings.

I have often thought when I see those men, good citizens, what a pity that a man who had such influence, and capable of raising such boys, should have such a warped side to his nature.

Baked Boston Beans.

When I worked on a cattle ranch in Wyoming I chummed with a cowboy named Hanks, who was a genuine woman hater. His mother died when he was a child, and a stepmother, stepsisters, and stepaunts had treated the boy so unkindly that he learned to distrust and dislike all women. If by chance any woman stopped at the ranch house, Hank would seek other quarters.

He often deplored the fact that western cooking did not measure up to eastern standards. Well, Hank became foreman, and I was fairly stunned when he announced that he was to marry a girl who cooked in a boarding house in town.

"However did it happen?" I asked, in amazement.

"Simple enough," he made answer. "I discovered that she cooks baked beans just like they do in Boston."

If She Doesn't Talk Too Much.

The worst woman hater I know is my husband's brother. He is a bachelor M. D. and although busy with his patients, never forgets himself. He has ever to dislike women through jealousy of them. As he is only 43, we intend starting a campaign at once to divert him. I have invited him to dinner Friday evening. I have also invited an amiable and beautiful young woman, who is a practitioner at the bar of justice. She has my cue to hold the floor for and in favor of women everywhere. She may win him over. If this interests you I will send you the next chapter.

MRS. M. H.

A Politician.

A woman hater I knew was quite a politician and once while running for such coveted office, was desirous of having the women's votes. He suddenly became courteous to all women of voting age and not only was successful in getting their votes but married them.

REAL LOVE STORIES

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. The Tribune will pay $5 for every story published. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

THE THIRD AND LAST.

My bachelor brother made us a visit of two months, in Chicago, one winter. He was from Montana, a typical westerner, big and tall, and for some reason—not because he was handsome or even good looking, for he was neither—he was attractive to the ladies. His quiet, deferential way with women seemed to make him especially fascinating to young girls.

He had been engaged twice and each time to a "Dorothy," but through no fault of his own both affairs had fallen through. So when we told him that our next door neighbor, across the hall from our apartment, had a beautiful and charming daughter named Dorothy, he threw up his hands—No more Dorothys for him. What was the matter with people that they couldn't find any other name for their girls? That name was his hoodoo. No, thank you, he refused to be introduced.

Our neighbors wanted to meet him, but somehow he'd always shy out of the way. When we would go over to their apartment for an evening to play cards, brother would be sure to have some other engagement. If they'd call on us, brother would escape down the back stairs.

But Fate got in her work. One evening, just about dusk, before the lights in the hall were switched on, brother entered the front door and to his great surprise, as he started up the stairs, heard a shrill scream, followed by a loud thumping sound as of some one falling down the steps. He rushed up the stairs as fast as he could and reached the bottom of the second flight just in time to catch our little neighbor, Dorothy, in his arms. He carried her up stairs and called for help. We learned, after the doctor arrived, the damage was rather severe—a broken collar bone.

Such youth and dainty beauty appealed to brother's sympathy at once, and during several weeks of convalescing he was her most devoted and constant caller. When, finally, it was time for him to return home, a happy bride accompanied him—the third and last Dorothy.

Redfern Corsets

Front Lace

A Redfern front lace corset is designed to fit as well—and to give as beautiful lines—when the wearer is sitting, as when she is standing. This is because a Redfern front-lace never pushes up under the bust, no matter what the wearer's posture may be.

And a Redfern front-lace—once fitted to your figure—will always fit, because it is so designed that the lines remain just as long as you wear the corset.

A COMPACT, complete laundry outfit. The ideal machine for your laundry room. You can wash two batches of clothes at the same time and be wringing another batch from rinse water to basket. One operation follows the other in quick succession, and the entire washing is done without lifting the clothes. You simply wring them from one position to the next one and get done in a "jiffy."

Others wash the clothes in one tub and rinse them in the other.

You can wash with both tubs at once or operate either tub independently. The "any position" swinging wringer can be used with the machine tubs or separately. Wringer swings over stationary laundry tubs. Entire outfit built at comfortable height—a labor saver, time saver.

Specifications

Mother says: It's Quicker Yet

"The family washing doesn't bother me. The Quicker-Yet Double Tub Washer does all the work both washing and wringing. I do the directing. My washings are large, but my clothes are always first on the line. My clothes are spotlessly clean and I can change linens to my heart's content. Wash day is an easy day."

Father Says: It's cheaper Yet

"That Quicker-Yet Double Tub Washer sure was a good buy. The original cost was less than I expected, and in a year's time it has paid for itself. The upkeep has been nothing and wife says it works perfectly. Furthermore, we eat at our house now on wash day the same as any other day."

The Children Say: It's Cleaner Yet

"Wash days have changed at our house since we got our Quicker-Yet. Mother isn't cranky. We don't have to get up early and turn the wringer. Our clothes are as clean as they can be and Mother doesn't scold when we get them dirty. Mother lets us run the wringer sometimes—Geel It's fun."

COLD!

Correctly Cold—and Clean!

Alaska Refrigerators are better because they keep food and liquids absolutely fresh, clean and wholesome. They give perfect, scientific refrigeration. They keep food correctly chilled. And ice lasts longer.

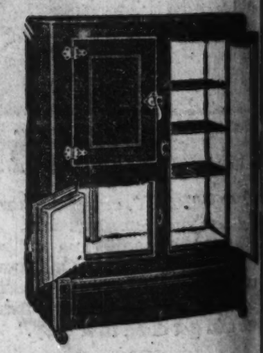
Food keeps better—tastes better—is better—when preserved by an Alaska Refrigerator.

Thick, protective walls of "cubed" cork and "confined" air—the two best insulators known to science—keep warm outside air from the food compartments. Chill dry air, of exactly the right temperature, circulates about the food. And so skillfully is this accomplished that no ice is wasted.

Linings are of genuine seamless porcelain, with rounded corners; or durable, immaculate, white enamel. Always clean—easily washed.

Many sizes and desirable styles. All give perfect, scientific food-preservation. Yet prices are no higher. Attractive cabinets—beautifully finished. Strongly built. Long of life.

See the Alaska Refrigerator at a near-by dealer. See the list on this page. Have him explain the many superiorities of the Alaska. Bring this economy to your kitchen—now.



Immaculately white, seamless porcelain with rounded corners; or white enamel; makes perfect cleanliness easy. Food compartments are always fresh and wholesome without slavish and disagreeable work. Exclusive Alaska method of cork insulation gives maximum refrigeration from less.

Make a point to have an Alaska Refrigerator in your home.

The Theaters

By Percy Hammond.

THE drama, as ever a helpful art, will be at hand this week to serve the anxious statesmen in their dusty conflict with momentous times. Tired eldermen needing regalement or counsel between sessions of the Sanhedrin, may find it in the theaters where, after long deliberation, the managers have arranged for them such miracle plays and moralities as are deemed appropriate to their profound and holy function. "The Greenwich Village Follies," "The Midnight Whirl," "The Sweetheart Shop," "Golden Days," "Forever After," "Poker Ranch," et cetera, are ready to give advice and inspire conduct. A scrutiny of the delegatorial physiognomy (as it appears in the newspapers) suggests that the patriots will find more inspiration in "The Greenwich Village Follies" than in the other available exhibitions.

Our governors, as a rule, are not as sagacious in the theater as they are upon the judgment seat or in the halls of parliament. They mold with uncanny skill and acumen a mighty state's decrees, and shape with ease the bounds of freedom to fit a hundred million men. The most intricate problems of economics, foreign affairs, soldiers' bonuses, postoffices and postroads, mileage, heating and ventilation of the Capitol, are embraced by their capacious minds and are solved with satisfaction and dispatch. Yet these intellects, when confronted by a stage, seem to grow sappy and disintegrate.

On a Wednesday afternoon in Washington I watched the President recreating at Keith's' vaudeville palace, nudging as he did so the assiduous Tumulty when the jokes were to his liking. "Your father's the mayor," said one comedian to another, "and you're a little hoarse." Whereat there was innocent mirth in the Presidential box. A month later I saw the President arise from his central seat in the Clock Room, and in the winged words of a great missioner announce to his sullen confreres in the Peace Conference, the pious doctrines of a majestic, though guileless, democracy. The teething ring of the drama is not incompatible with the scepter which guides (academically) the spheres.

Mr. Taft was so beguiled by Miss Laurette Taylor's art that he embalmed his impressions of her in the ultimate monosyllable "cute." Col. Roosevelt had a weakness for shallow plays (and also for deep ones) and his sanction was in the advertisements of many a slender show. Claude Kitchin and other southern statesmen of the House of Representatives not long ago raved in print about one of the Rev. Mr. Dixon's wild operas, and it closed, almost immediately, after a run of nearly three nights in New York. Mr. Morse, the dramatic editor of the Washington Post, once polled the House and the Senate to learn the preferences of the legislators in matters of the drama. He found Shakespeare to be the favorite author almost unanimously, though there were votes for E. E. Rose, Mr. Cohan, George V. Hobart, and Ibsen. "Experience" and "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," being moral plays which teach us something, were held to be the most significant of the modern dramas. Doug and Mary, of course, were regarded as the best of the actors, with scattering votes for Ethel Barrymore, Al Jolson, Maude Adams, Nora Bayes, the Dolly Sisters, and Kolb and Dill. The California delegation, Mr. Morse said, was solid for Kolb and Dill; and Walker Whiteside ran well in Nebraska and the Dakotas.

WE have had so many "first nights" this season that we threaten the prestige of Washington, Stamford, Conn., or Atlantic City as a spawning place for dramatic eggs to be hatched later in New York. Twenty or more entertainments have been started here, some of them praiseworthing, others successful, and still others both or neither. I cannot recall them all, but here is a casual list of the local "premieres," with an approximation of their subsequent careers:

"Jacques Duval"—Though popular in Louisville, it found no friends here, and after struggles went to Cain's storehouse, the potters' field of the theater.

"Midnight"—It vanished from the Olympic soon after its appearance there, and was seen no more.

"The Dream Song"—Beckoned by icy finger of neglect it went quickly away from Central Music hall, having no destination.

"A Regular Feller"—Carried out of the Blackstone, feet first.

"On the Hiring Line"—After struggling gamely at the Blackstone for several weeks it limped to New York, and at once subsided.

Claire Kummer's "Roxy," with Miss Lola Fisher—It perished in its cradle at the Blackstone.

"Betty, Be Good"—A flivver at the Princess; so-so in New York.

"Golden Days"—Still existing at the Blackstone, aided by the pulmotor of cut rates and the sedulous nursing of Miss Patricia Collinge.

"Genius and the Crowd"—Mr. Cohan says that it is a good play and that its star, George Renavent, is a great actor. Not satisfied with the Scotch verdict at Powers', the troupe is now in Baltimore, or some similar place, beseeching a reluctant approval.

"The Master of Ballantrae"—Scorned by the cold, critical cognoscenti and adored by the women's clubs, it wanders with Mr. Whiteside in the suburbs.

"The Woman of Bronze"—Popular here and everywhere in the prairie sector, but regarded as a dubious proposition for Miss Anglin if she takes it to New York.

"Look Who's Here"—They liked it at the Studebaker and it got by in New York.

"Dear Me"—Sloppy, but prosperous. Successful enough to invade Broadway next season.

"The Acquittal"—Popular at Cohan's Grand, and even more so in New York.

"Welcome, Stranger"—The hardiest of the season's circuses. It will be playing in Omaha five years from now.

"The Sweetheart Shop"—Running wild at the Illinois. If Erlanger had known how good it is he would have kept it for Broadway.

"Poker Ranch"—The jury is divided and still out.

"Tomorrow's Price"—At the Woods.

MISS HARROLD, daughter of Orville Harrold, tenor of the Metropolitan and Ravinia operas, has succeeded Miss Adele Rowland in the leading rôle of "Irene" in New York. Miss Rowland is ill. . . . Miss Alice Brady's appearances at the Garrick this week will be her last for many months. "The pictures" will engage her exclusively for a year at least. . . . Messrs. Comstock and Gest have selected Miss Grace Valentine to play the title rôle in "The Cave Girl," by George Middleton and Guy Bolton. The Cave Girl is a child of the primitive Maine woods, engaged in showing up some cultivated and artificial ladies of New York City. . . . Philip Kearney Mindil, dramatic editor of the New York Tribune, has received from the war department a citation commending the heroic conduct of his son, Private Philip K. Mindil, Twenty-seventh division, who was killed in action Sept. 20, 1918, while voluntarily carrying a Lewis gun through heavy enfilading fire to a portion of his company, cut off from the rest. . . . Miss Eileen Huban, late of "Dark Rosaleen," will be the American "Paddy the Next Best Thing" which Miss Peggy O'Neill plays in London. . . . Rennold Wolf, dramatic editor of the New York Morning Telegraph, is writing four plays for next season—"The Beautiful One" for Sam H. Harris, a musical version of "The Mountain Climber," in which A. L. Erlanger will star Billy Van; and musical versions of his own "A Perfect Lady" and of Henry Miller's "Heartsease." . . . Frank Fay, comedian of "The Century Midnight Whirl," mixed it up with William Halligan at the Friars' club in New York the other night. Mr. Fay has a broken head and Mr. Halligan a broken hand. . . .

The Duncan sisters, recently at the Illinois in "She's a Good Fellow," will be with Mr. Hitchcock this week at the Colonial. . . . Miss Sophie Tucker, the loud songstress, has opened a garage in New York. . . . Miss Martha Hedman will be in the play which Arthur Byron and Benjamin Marshall of Chicago are to produce here next month. . . . George Lederer is planning to revive "The Belle of New York." . . . Among the impending Shubert enterprises is Leighton Graves Osmun's "Crucible," in which Henry Hull will become an actor-manager under their direction. Miss Faire Binney, sister of Mr. Hall's leading woman in "39 East," will be in his company.

Mr. Lee Shubert discounts the possibility, as announced in THE TRIBUNE last Sunday, that the Messrs. Selwyn have formed a defensive theatrical alliance with the Messrs. Sam Harris and Arthur Hopkins, and intend to put up a united front against the Messrs. Shubert. Mr. Shubert says the menace of such a combination of producers, who plan, if they cannot get their own terms, to operate in their own theaters rather than in those of the Messrs. Shubert, is negligible, since the Messrs. Selwyn are under an ironbound contract for ten years to present their productions outside of New York in Shubert houses.

ANOTHER Melford production, and another good picture!

This story, by Jack London, is probably familiar to many of you, for it has been a favorite for some time. It is filled with the wild romance of the sea, and carries you far from the world of the usual and the commonplace. There can be no doubt that it is thrilling; no doubt that it is engrossing. But if you're entirely honest you'll confess to a feeling of relief when the last battle is over and the last trumpet blown.

The Sea Wolf is a relentless combination of superman and monster, brutal to all who stand in his way, convinced that might is the only right. He is the master absolute on his schooner, The Ghost. Wherever he goes cruelty and bloodshed follow in his wake. To say that most of the moments in the tale of his rise and fall are intense would be putting it mildly.

Noah Beery's portrayal of this intelligent brute of the sea is marvelous. Not once does he let his characterization break, or even falter.

In fact, the whole cast, with the possible exception of Mabel Julienne Scott, who is inclined to overdo her part, deserves great credit for its work. Each man has succeeded in making his rôle powerful and real without being too melodramatic.

The Paramount people may be justly proud of this film version of "The Sea Wolf." It is a wonderfully finished production down to the most minute detail.

Rosemary Theby is the latest addition to the list of "head my own" companies. She is to select the site for her studio, choose her own stories, director, and casts. And all this was decided at a luncheon right here in our city.

It has been confirmed that Eugene O'Brien's contract with Selznick has had its termination date extended to April 27, 1924.

Helen Jerome Eddy, who is soon to be starred by a large producing company, has completed a book on which she has been working for three years. Eventually it is to be adapted to the screen.

You'll be interested to hear that Lionel Barrymore has begun work on "The Master Mind," a picture based on Daniel G. Carter's play of the same name. This is the first production under his recent contract with First National. The second will be "The Devil's Garden."

Rival Candidates Stage Hot Debate in Equity Campaign

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The Equity boys and girls, 2,000 of them, had a fine time hissing each other in the Astor hotel ballroom Sunday afternoon, the finest time they have had since the actors' strike was in full swing, and they were meeting every day to cheer somebody or denounce somebody else.

Just now they are in the throes of their first serious campaign. There are rival candidates for the presidency, John Emerson, late of the stage and now of the movies, and Wilton Lackaye, mostly of the Lambs' club and all-star casts. Mr. Emerson represents the regular ticket. He was named to succeed Francis Wilson, the retiring president, by the official nominating committee, partly as a reward for the work he did during the strike and partly because he seems to be the most efficient and level headed of the candidates.

The Emerson choice, however, did not please the radicals, whose leadership Lackaye was quick to assume. Emerson represented, his opponents, insisted, a policy of compromise and conciliation. Being a movie magnate, he must be more or less a manager himself, and his interests with the managers. Lackaye was for action, direct action and frequent.

The Emersonians made reply that the present administration, the executives who had won the strike, had settled hundreds of disputes with the managers since peace was signed and won seven out of every eight decisions; that though Mr. Emerson was now in the business of directing moving pictures he had been an actor for fifteen years and that his interest in pictures had not kept him from making the first substantial cash donation to the Equity strike fund or deterred him from jumping in and helping to lead the actors to victory; that he had the indorsement of Ethel Barrymore and the Equity council and that he represented all that was sanest and safest in the organization.

Finally Lackaye, who is a ready speaker and a caustic debater, proposed the Astor hotel meeting at which the issues were to be thrashed out, and Emerson accepted. It was a great little party. Francis Wilson was the official referee, begging the ladies and gentlemen to please restrain themselves during the meeting and advising the principals to break clean. Mr. Lackaye, as the challenger, then arose and accused the forces that had put forward Mr. Emerson of being a pussyfooting aggregation ruled by sinister hands; furthermore, that they had held a benefit performance which the retiring president, good old Francis Wilson, had not even been asked to decorate; that Lt. Col. Booth, who managed it, had been paid a salary and promised a percentage of all profits collected by Equity shows, and that dirty politicians that they were, they had sent out telegrams warning the membership not to vote the "fake" Lackaye ballots.

Emerson, in reply, admitted that the Lackaye charges would be serious if any of them were true—any, at least, that had any bearing on the situation. Mr. Wilson had been overlooked at he benefit, for which everybody was ever so sorry. There were no sinister hands back of the present administration; the books were open and the record clear. Lt. Col. Booth had been paid a salary to run Equity entertainments, just as any other manager is paid a salary. He deserved a salary, and recognition, not only for his work as a manager, but for his record as a soldier. Mr. Emerson was amazed at Mr. Lackaye's "appalling ignorance" of Equity affairs. True, he [Lackaye] had been a member of the council for two years and had attended only two meetings, but, even so, he should be better informed. The telegams were sent out to explain the issuance of unauthorized ballots previously mailed by the Lackaye campaign committee.

In rebuttal Mr. Lackaye suggested that Mr. Emerson reminded him of a fish, and that Lt. Col. Booth was one of those army officers "who went to France wearing spurs on his boots to keep them from slipping off his desk." For which statement Mr. Lackaye was almost hissed from the rostrum. Dinner time having arrived, the debate closed. The election is scheduled for Friday, but it may be some days before the result is known.

ART

Ready to Welcome Convention Visitor at Art Institute

By Louise James Bargelt

CHANGES of plan and schedule are in process now at the Art institute; new exhibits are going up, old exhibits are remaining longer than anticipated, and several loan exhibits are to be rehung temporarily. All by the way, of course, that the coming convention and its attendant thousands will find our institute all that its world wide reputation has earned for it.

First should be mentioned the fact that a number of the water color paintings and a part of the Rotary collection will remain two weeks longer than scheduled. So will the Helen Hyde collection of prints.

On the main floor of the institute the Flemish and Italian tapestries are also to continue on exhibition through the convention. These tapestries are attracting much attention daily, and present a wide variety of interest in both their subject matter and the way they have been fashioned.

They date largely from the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries and many of them have been woven in the famous workshops of Jacques Geubels. For the most part the colors are soft, shaded, effectively blended in the grays and greens of many of nature's moods.

There is a large tapestry of a woodland scene with many small figures done in elaborate detail and a few large ones worked out with marvelous attention to accuracy of reproduction. Another tapestry is religious in subject, presenting the "Resurrection" and the "Crucifixion." Here the colors are rather more vivid, stronger in their contrasts.

One of the most ornate of the tapestries shows a scene in a temple or castle. Handsomely pillared is the room, the rich marble of the floor brought out plainly, and the wrap of the man in the foreground falling in many, sumptuous folds.

Perhaps the most spectacular of all the tapestries is the one of Flemish origin which shows a king and queen dining at a richly set table. Here no detail is left unwrought which might convey the elaborateness of the repast. The cloth which covers the table is hung with finely embroidered tassels of gold, and the warp of the rugs on the floor is overwrought with embroidery. Behind them stands a sturdy, helmeted warrior, ready for battle if battle there is to be, and beyond them all a couple of lovers disappearing into the temple.

Then, too, several galleries will be filled with the paintings by Muccha. There has been some delaye connected with their hanging, but it is expected they will soon be in place. Mr. Muccha will be in Chicago this week.

One of the print galleries of the institute is filled with etchings and lithographs from the Lathrop collection of Whistler's work. Each piece of his work is a joy in itself, and some of his most representative work is shown here.

It is a varied collection—now a Venetian canal in fragmentary, delicate fashion; now the calm of the sea in peaceful mood; again a lithograph of the graceful figure of a young woman, or the characterful face of an old woman; or, on another wall, a railway station at Voyés, done in the fewest possible lines, or a bustling marketplace at Tours or a melon shop at Houndsditch.

At the Arts club there is an exhibition of paintings by William S. Mondain, some Indian water colors by Awa Tsireh of New Mexico, and some Czecho-Slovak waters colors by Jan Matulka. A more detailed review of these exhibits, which contain many interesting features, will follow later.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Boosters for All Candidates Among Women of Chicago

By Mme. X.

WELL, by this time next week those of us who survive the suspense and excitement of the coming few days will know all about it. Republican fans have no hesitation in proclaiming that the man who gets the presidential nomination at the Coliseum this coming week will be our next president. Democrats are not in hearty accord with this point of view.

Nine hundred and thirty-seven delegates and as many more alternates are converging toward Chicago at this moment, forsaking farms, factories, offices, and mines to join in the great national powwow. There are twenty-six women delegates and several times as many alternates. I think there were only three or four women delegates to the last Republican convention four years ago.

What recognition women have secured from party bosses is no concession to the suffrage movement, but is the result of the important part played by women in our five Liberty loan drives. So in the two big political parties they have been especially allotted active service on the ways and means committees, though they have also been allowed to think that they were powerful agents in securing the nomination for this or that or the other candidate.

Suffragists May Protest.

The average party boss has small use for women in politics. He finds in them all sorts of sources of trouble. They are apt to have ideals, principles, and kindred fantasies which are mainsprings of confusion and annoyance to the practical politician, who is seldom an idealist.

Many of the women prominent in the suffrage movement feel that among the leaders of the Republican party there is less consideration of their political claims than that given them by Democratic sachems. They may be doing him great injustice, but some of the most ardent and active of these suffragists discern in the chairman of the Republican national committee, one Will Hays, a tendency to ignore them and to deny them equal standing with men which is most disturbing. There are rumors of an emphatic protest to be made from the floor of the convention by Republican women headed by one of the most prominent and popular Republican suffragist leaders, who claims that she can make out a good case against Mr. Hays et al.

Meanwhile, there's hardly a society leader in Chicago's "beau monde" who isn't lined up behind some one of the four chief presidential candidates whose fate is so soon to be decided.

Backing the Governor.

Backing Gov. Lowden, under Mrs. Fletcher Dobyns, national chairman of the women's committee, are the Mmes. Joseph G. Coleman, William J. Chalmers, George A. McKinlock, Charles Dempster, Harry Pratt Judson, Samuel Insull, Joseph T. Bowen, Harlan Ward Cooley, George Dixon, Philip Schuyler Doane, Tiffany Blake, Charles Frankenthal, Charles Deneen, Edward Litsinger, Robert Hall McCormick Jr., Frank Scott, and Ira Couch Wood, and Miss Agnes Foreman.

Mrs. Dobyns gives a luncheon tomorrow at the Saddle and Cycle club for twenty-six women delegates to the convention, irrespective of whether they are for her candidate or not.

Miss Harriet Vittum is managing the women's committee, which is backing Gen. Leonard Wood. Among the Chicagoans working with her are the Mmes. Arthur Meeker, John J. Borland, Marshall Field, William R. Linn, Henry Hooker, Alfred Granger, Arthur Small, and William Hubbard, and Miss Grace Dixon.

Hoover and Johnson.

No candidate has quite such a following among women as Herbert Hoover, probably because women are first and foremost housekeepers, and his renown rests largely on his achievements as a provider and distributor of food. Even at this critical moment in his life his chief occupation is not politics or mine engineering, but the daily feeding of 2,500,000 children in central Europe, to which task he devotes eighteen hours a day. He has enlisted the active support of Chicago women under the chairmanship of Mrs. B. F. Langworthy, with Mrs. James W. Morrisson and Mrs. Howard C. Philips as vice chairmen, while among other well known names on this committee are the Mmes. Cyrus H. McCormick, John V. Farwell, Emmons Blaine, Julius Rosenwald, Russell Tyson, Edward L. Ryerson Jr., William G. Hibbard, Robert B. Gregory, A. A. Carpenter, Wirth Dunham, Charles A. Monroe, William McCormick Blair, John Stewart Coonley, Arthur Bissell and Alexander Smith, and the Misses Louise Herrick, Estelle Ward, Elizabeth Wallace, Katharyn Linn, Elizabeth Farwell, and Cornelia Conger.

Senator Johnson's fair Chicago backers are perhaps not so numerous as those of other less localized candidates, but they are none the less enthusiastic and energetic. Led by one of the most striking personalities of the day in the feminist movement, Mrs. Raymond Robins, they are making a gallant fight for their candidate. Working with Mrs. Robins are Mrs. Edgar Cook, Mrs. Victor Olander, Mrs. James Mullenbach, and Mrs. Eleanor Glzycka. Their headquarters are on the second floor of the Auditorium hotel.

In Presidents' Alley.

There's a quality of passionate loyalty and ardent devotion marking the support of the women backing the various candidates which gives a picturesqueness hitherto unknown in presidential campaigns. "Presidents' alley," on the second floor of the Congress hotel, presents quite another aspect from similar groupings in preceding years. For one thing, there aren't so many big and overworked cuspidors, nor the usual crop of chewed cigar stubs in sight as heretofore. An air of cheerful and contagious excitement pervades the scene, and there is much visiting from office to office.

The average American citizen and citizeness may sit quietly at home, or pursue his or her daily way, secure in the belief that the big game of politics is in clean, capable, zealous hands. It is safe to prophesy that any one of the contesting candidates will prove to be a good president if given the chance, while there isn't one whose wife won't make a charming mistress of the White House and a distinguished first lady of the land.

Notable Guests at House Party.

There will be many notable convention house parties in Chicago, but none more dynamic, more surcharged with immeasurable possibilities than Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank's. For gathered under her roof, the most hospitable and eclectic of its kind in this part of the world, will be Gov. and Mrs. Henry Allen of Kansas, Mr. and Mrs. William G. McAdoo, Mr. and Mrs. William Allen White, William Hard, and Walter Lippman.

It is not beyond the bounds of possibility that both a Republican and a Democratic presidential candidate are latent in that house party, and that two of those house guests, who will for the next few days meet cheerily at breakfast, may from July to Nov. 4, be antagonists in one of the most important national campaigns we have ever had. The situation is piquant and interesting.

Mrs. Fairbank is giving a dinner for her house party next Thursday evening at her residence, 1224 North State street. By that time the Republican nomine will possibly be known. Mr. Upham and other wiseacres say that Wednesday is likely to be the crucial day. That evening's dinner hosts may find it difficult to assemble their guests on time.

Among the famous folk, most of whom are already well known here, who are coming from different parts of the country to "sit in" at the big national picnic are Mr. and Mrs. John Hays Hammond, Mrs. John M. Logan, Miss Logan, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Noyes, and Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, all of Washington, D. C.; Senator and Mrs. Herbert Wadsworth, Mrs. Willard Straight, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Woods, Prince and Princess Cantacuzene, Mrs. Edith Parsons Morgan, Miss Edith Morgan, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Pratt, Miss Mabel Choate, Mrs. Oscar Straus, and Miss Martha McCook, all New Yorkers.

Entertaining at Clubs.

From remotest of times it has been the custom of man to entertain the stranger within his gate with food and drink. So, following these and her own especial traditions established by Chicago a century ago, when the beaver still swam in the river and the wild swan nested on the north branch, Chicago society is preparing to dine and wine as many of the notabilities as can be snatched from the fearsome joys of being convention fans.

Today George F. Porter gives a buffet luncheon at his home, 1336 North State street. This afternoon the Casino is host at a big garden tea. Tonight Harold McCormick opens his Lake Shore drive residence for a buffet supper. For some time almost every place at the Saddle and Cycle and Casino for dinner for the next four nights has been engaged. Mr. and Mrs. William J. Chalmers are among the hosts at the Saddle and Cycle on Tuesday evening in honor of their house guests, Col. and Mrs. Sydney A. Cloman of New York. They are also among those who will entertain at the vaudeville supper dance which the Casino provides on Wednesday evening. Other hosts that evening will be Mr. an Mrs. Arthur Meeker, Eames MacVeagh, Howard Gillette, and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman.

Much of the entertaining for conventionites will be at one or the other of such well known clubs as those already mentioned, and the Chicago Yacht and South Shore Country clubs, which all marks a change in the manner of our hospitality, though not in its spirit.

Solve Domestic Problem.

Other countries have no such institutions as these clubs, partly because they have excellent and numerous restaurants, and partly because the domestic question is not so difficult as it is here.

Our social clubs are a step, though an unconscious one, towards the solution of one of our most delicate and toughest problems, that of housekeeping. Had we the abundant and trained service that England and other older countries had until the war tipped over the apple cart, the invention of such labor saving devices as hot and cold running water, gas stoves, washing machines, kitchenettes, steam heat, vacuum cleaners, etc., would probably have been long delayed.

These comparatively recent clubs make entertaining possible to many a hostess whose home equipment would be inadequate to satisfy her hospitable desires. It is a step towards the centralization and socialization of housekeeping which is as inevitable as woman suffrage, communal nurseries, public ownership of utilities, universal labor, and many other wholesome, if not very palatable, changes that are coming to us.

In nothing is the difference between us and the English more marked than in our attitudes towards clubs. As Maj. Wrenche, a most agreeable Britisher who recently passed through Chicago, explained to a dinner party, an Englishman regards his club as a place to which he can go to get away from his fellow man. An American goes to his club to meet other men. At a club to which Maj. Wrenche belongs, each member sits alone at a little table for luncheon or dinner, and during the fifteen years of his membership the major doesn't recall ever having dined or) lunched with any other member.

Englishman Takes No Chances.

It is not the custom in England, as it is here, to put up a visitor from out of town at a club. No Englishman would stand sponsor for a traveling American or any alien wayfarer, as is done for traveling foreigners in this country—sometimes with disturbing results, as viewed from the American host's standpoint.

One of the best known of modern English writers, when he sailed for England after a lecture tour, is reported to have left behind him a fine crop of bills in various clubs, which those American friends who put him up at these clubs had to pay. Many other visitors from overseas have done this, but the unusually conspicuous position in the world of letters occupied by this betrayer of hospitality made the affair more a matter of comment than would otherwise have been the case, especially as he carried away many thousands of good American dollars, fruit of an extended course of lectures.

Flower Show at Lake Forest.

It is good for us in periods of excitement to contemplate the quiet continuity, steadfastness, and indifference of nature. For instance, the iris and peony are blooming this June just as calmly as if it weren't a presidential year.

To prove this and to soothe the souls made feverish by political clamor and by the hot and tragic wind that blows from Europe the North Shore Horticultural society, associated with the Garden Club of Illinois, is preparing such an exhibit of peonies and iris (what is the plural of iris—irse?) as shall give all who visit the Gorton school, Lake Forest, June 19 and 20 a temporary sense of joy and peace.

These two flowers flourish especially well in this part of the world and

Three of the first June brides are Mrs. Douglas K. Johnstone, Mrs. Harold Nichols Cudney, and Mrs. Leslie Lyman Cooke, all of whom were married last Wednesday.

Miss Emily Virginia Smith, daughter of Mrs. Perry H. Smith of 411 Roslyn place, became the bride of Capt. Douglas K. Johnstone, late of the Bombay Light Horse and Royal Flying corps, in the Fourth Presbyterian church Wednesday afternoon, the Rev. John Timothy Stone officiating. An interesting feature of the wedding was the bride's gown, which was of rose point lace and was worn by her late grandmother, Mrs. Perry H. Smith, and her great-grandmother on their wedding days. The lace crown which held her tulle veil in place also is an heirloom. Capt. Johnstone and his bride are on their way to England to spend a month with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Horace Johnstone of London, after which they will tour Italy and France for several months, returning to this country in the fall.

Miss Helen Rowe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Burton Jay Rowe of 1718 East Fifty-sixth street, and Harold Nichols Cudney, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wellington E. Cudney of 4832 Ellis avenue, were married Wednesday night in the crystal ballroom of the Blackstone. Mrs. Cudney is one of the most popular young women in south side society.

The wedding of Miss Bernice Hogue, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Warner Hogue of 6052 Ingleside avenue, and Leslie Lyman Cooke, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Cooke of 2630 Lake View avenue, also took place at the Blackstone Wednesday evening. The bride's gown of white satin was trimmed with lace.

Summer Camp on Fox River Planned for Chicago Girls

THERE'S a huge old stone lodge down on the Fox river about fifteen miles from Aurora, with sixteen acres of woods and fields and lovely sloping river bank, and this the Young Women's Christian association has chosen for a summer camp for schoolgirls and those employed. The camp will accommodate 100 girls at a time, and those who wish to go must be between the ages of 12 and 19 years. A girl may stay there one or two weeks, and will find everything that will delight her—swimming, boating, tennis, hiking, fishing, and camp activities of every kind.

Two floors of the lodge have been equipped as a dormitory, one floor for indoor play and lounging rooms, and another for dining room and kitchen. There is a long, wide screened porch covered with vines, and there the girls will dance and gather on rainy days—if there are any such days there. There will be a trained swimmer and registered life saver at the camp throughout the summer who will oversee the water sports, as well as a trained nurse in residence there. The drinking water of the camp well has been tested, and is said to be the best there is.

All this is done by the Y. W. C. A., so that the parents of the girls who want to come to the camp may let their daughters go with a happy feeling of content in their welfare. And there are all the other modern conveniences, too—quite unlike a camp in these particular comforts.

One of the features of the camp life will be visits to the old Indian village of Maramech, not far away, and to other spots in the neighborhood, which is rich in Indian lore and tradition, of which the girls will be told by those who are at camp to watch over them. There will be seven camp councilors, college girls, who will plan the activities. The girls will be divided into Indian tribes, in keeping with the Indian traditions that hang about the place, and will study bird lore and camp craft. One girl scout tribe has already registered as a unit to be among the campers. The athletic field includes six acres, where there will be basketball, a baseball diamond, and tennis courts. There is a large natural cave, with piles of bowlders, which is to be the site for the campfire in the summer evenings.

If parents wish to talk about the camp with the Y. W. C. A. directors they may call Randolph 5280 and ask for Miss Sue Weddell, girls' work secretary, who expects to be at the camp through the season, beginning Monday, June 28. The price for each girl for one week is $6.50, not including carfare on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad, which is $2.50. This includes taxi fare to camp from the station and baggage expense.

The direction of the camp is part of the scope of the metropolitan girls' work committee, of which Mrs. William H. Hubbard is chairman. Mrs. George F. Brown Jr. is chairman of the younger girls' camp. There are also two other camps conducted by the Y. W. C. A.—one at Forest Beach, Mich., on the shore of Lake Michigan, to which business women are eligible, which accommodates 150 young women at a time; the other at Wolf Lake, Ind., to which colored girls go. Registration is urged at any early date, as the lists are being filled.

MRS. GEORGE F. BROWN, JR. Hess-Kline

Mrs. George F. Brown Jr. is godmother to hundreds of young girls of the city for whom she has been planning all the spring to make of their summer camp at Millhurst, near Plano, the loveliest spot they ever spent a vacation in. The Young Women's Christian association, which makes possible a camp under the most healthful and happy circumstances for young school and employed girls at far less than would otherwise be possible, has as the chairman of the Millhurst camp committee Mrs. Brown, who is being assisted by a large committee of other women actively interested in the work of the association.

How Does Your Corset Fit

Third Floor—Center

Does your corset leave you absolutely comfortable? Does it wear as well as it should? Does it assure you the fashionable "lines" you want? More and more women are beginning to realize that proper corseting has so much to do with hygiene, comfort and a smart figure—and more and more women are insisting upon having their corsets properly fitted. The fitting service here excels that of any other store, first, because of the skill of each of our corps of corsetieres, and then because they have at their service to select from a complete variety of famous Binner corsets which means that they can find exactly the model your figure should have, in exactly the size you should have—the fitting service, with all that it means to well dressed women, is offered you here without extra charge.

We ask your attention once more to the fact that quality in corsets is most important to watch just now, because of the scarcity of the standard quality materials needed in a corset—and so the careful woman will ask for Binner corsets because they are always dependable.

Binner corset, for the tall woman who wants a very low bust, but needs considerable thigh control, made of extra firm coutil. Its special feature is the way it controls bulging thighs—standing, it fits extra snug and close, elastic lacing below front steel, also elastic lacing over thighs, giving ample room to sit comfortably. You don't feel that you are wearing a corset when you are fitted to a "Binner," and yet it reduces the hips and thighs wonderfully.

Binner corsets in all styles at $8 to $15

BIG PRICE REDUCTIONS NOW!

Here's the Reason for This Sale and These Low Prices!

In some instances there is but one piece of a kind—only limited quantities of other new, high grade articles. During this sale, commencing tomorrow and each day this week until sold, they will be in place specially marked at big price reductions. So don't delay—don't hesitate, then blame yourself for being slow. Act quickly! The early buyer will have the largest selection to choose from.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Failure Feared for Interchurch Drive; Faces Heavy Debt

By the Rev. Frederick L. Gratiot

THE interchurch world movement, one of the most sincere and practical efforts to coördinate the scattered forces of Protestantism in recent years, faces failure through denominational jealousies. Individualism, at once the glory and the besetting sin of denominationalism, continues to divide the forces of righteousness in their attacks on the forces of evil.

The interchurch includes some thirty-four denominational bodies, cooperating in a program of practical efforts, not surrendering any distinctive principle, surveying and budgeting the tasks before them, and raising the necessary funds to carry out those tasks.

The situation that the Interchurch finds itself in is this:

In order to carry out its extensive survey of the spiritual needs and resources of the world and to finance its financial campaign, it borrowed from a New York syndicate of banks over $8,000,000.

[It has been stated by authorities that this survey alone more than justifies the expenditure.]

As security, the Interchurch had 83 boards of the churches underwrite the loan.

It was expected that this amount, with enough over to carry on the Interchurch organization for a year, besides providing for extensive religious work which could only be done on a coöperative basis, would be raised in the financial campaign.

The 1920 budget of the coöperative campaign was $336,000,000.

The total amount raised by the campaign was but $176,000,000.

Of this the Interchurch received $3,000,000 as its share.

This leaves it in a precarious position.

Several considerations present themselves.

In the first place, there is no question that even the limited success of the campaign was due to the spirit created by the interchurch organization through its advertising campaign, its efficient survey, and its organized program.

It is obvious, therefore, that it is entitled to a fair per cent of the returns. The arrangement was that the interchurch should received for its share the total amount raised from the "friendly citizen" division, which included people with not even a remote church connection. These proved to be few, or else were not properly solicited. It seems that a more equitable division of the amount raised might have been made.

Secondly, more whole-hearted and unselfish coöperation on the part of the constituent churches might have resulted in more satisfactory results.

Much unkind and unjustified criticism was made by many leaders, and actual misrepresentations were made by those who should have been familiar with the facts.

Of course there are several reasons for the comparative failure of the "drive." It came at a time when every one was "drive weary and money mad." The generosity that had marked every one but the profiteers during the war had given way when that spirit was most needed for the reconstruction period. Every one feared that the prosperity bubble was about to burst. Man's interest in the future welfare of the world at large was eclipsed by that in his own well-being. Sacrifice was an idea that belonged to the dark ages of 1917-'18.

Then, too, there was the unreadiness of the denominational churches to cooperate. How far away organic unity must be when loose federation in a practical effort is so difficult!

However, there has come about a situation which one critic has described as bankruptcy. The problem is, shall the Interchurch World Movement stop short, call upon its guarantors to pay its bills, and close shop, or shall it curtail its activities as much as possible and carry out its purpose to a certain degree of completeness?

At recent conferences of the leaders and representatives of coöperating churches, after thorough discussion it was decided to continue until May, 1921, on a monthly budget of $150,000 instead of the present $1,000,000 one. This will complete the world wide survey now under way.

This, together with present contracts which have to be carried through, will require a sum of $10,000,000 in addition to the money now in hand. A campaign for this amount will be carried on by the movement, lasting through July 15. The results of this campaign will determine the future of the Interchurch.

The First Methodist church of Chicago Heights will be dedicated by the Rev. Thomas Nicholson, general superintendent of the Chicago area, this morning at 10:45. Dr. John Thompson, superintendent of city missions, Dr. P. H. Swift, district superintendent, and the Rev. J. W. McKitrick, the pastor of the church, will also take part in the service. The church is built by joint contributions from the Centenary movement, the Chicago missionary board and the members of the church themselves. There will be services Sunday afternoon at 3 and at 7:30 p. m. Tuesday evening is "homecoming night" and there will festivities every succeeding evening during the octave.

The Rev. William F. Oldham, general superintendent of the Methodist church, will speak at the second anniversary of the dedication of the Sheridan Road Methodist church today at 11 a. m., and 8 p. m. An anniversary dinner will be served by the ladies of the church on Tuesday evening.

Athletic Clubs Prepare for Big Intercity Tilt

New York and Chicago Drivers Primed for Contest

BY J. L. JENKINS.

ANCIENT road rivals of the Chicago Athletic association and New York Athletic club are thoroughly "tuned up" in preparation for their annual reliability run, which this year will heat the 200 miles of open road between Chicago and Peoria on June 15 and 16.

The annual event is assuming big proportions for the automobile industry generally, despite the fact that it is purely an interclub contest and one bound by the amateur class exclusively. A lively delegation is expected from New York. The Chicago association is preparing to turn out in a body and accord their friendly enemies from the east a royal reception, while factory and sales representatives from the big automobile plants will swell the audiences at both points of the run.

Last year, when C. A. A. drivers went to New York and the run had Greenfield, Mass., as its objective point, the contest was a tie. Both teams this year are out to break the deadlock and carry home the Captain Eddie Rickenbacker trophy which is again offered as the principal prize. Captain Rickenbacker will referee and Fred J. Wagner will start the run from its Michigan avenue tape. Congressman Clifford Ireland will be host to the contestants and their friends at the Peoria night control.

The New York contingent will come to Chicago by train to find cars for the run awaiting them here, according to Martin Delaney, athletic director, who with S. E. Hibben, Chicago captain, John DeLong, and club officers have charge of arrangements. The Chicago team under Captain Hibben's command, will include A. J. Banta, Frank H. Judd, F. E. Mann, M. D. Luther, F. W. Grower, H. M. Allison, and Henry Paulman. The New York club has entered R. M. Owen, W. A. Allen, W. C. Poertner, G. S. Morrow, A. M. Robbins, Robert Wolfers, H. M. Swetland, G. F. Ballou, C. G. Sinsabaugh, C. A. Benjamin, J. C. Nichols, and W. I. Fickling as drivers.

The trophy will be awarded on car performance and driving points to be determined by observers assigned to make the run in each machine.

My Funniest Motoring Experience

Every one who has taken the road in a motor car has some story to tell. What is your best one? The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published in "My Funniest Motoring Experience." Write as briefly as possible, on one side of the paper only, and address Funniest Motoring Experience, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

While You Wait.

Our fleet of two pleasure cars, bound for the lakes and a Fourth of July picnic, halted at a small country hotel for the night. One of the boys in the party, who rather fancied his clothes, decided to improve his Palm Beach suit and outshine the others next day. He placed the clothes tenderly under his mattress and dreamed of morning conquests. We wondered why he was so late to breakfast, until he appeared trying vainly to hide the suit, which looked exactly like a checker board where the imprint of old fashioned bed springs had refused to be pressed out. F. R. A.

Needed a Friend.

My new car seemed to me to open a way to the good graces of my sweetheart's parents, who, until then, had been "distant," to say the least. So on a hot day I took them to the lake and felt I was making a great hit until we started to go home. I cranked desperately for fifteen minutes. Then "father" fumed and perspired a while. My stock went down pretty fast and the bottom dropped out altogether when I found that all the trouble lay in my forgetting that the safety lock key reposed in my pocket. Father-in-law still loves to tell about that day. J. D.

Nearly a Sale.

A friend of mine, who happens to be an automobile salesman, ended a long sales campaign with me by bringing a new car out to the house and inviting the family to ride. We hurried about and got all ready, trooping out of the house at last and making ourselves comfortable in the handsome machine.

Then the salesman's troubles began. He tried to start the engine without result. He got out and fussed with the motor for a full half hour and at last called for help from his service station. The mechanic arrived while he was trying to explain away the difficulty and took one look under the hood.

"Try turning the ignition key there in front of you," he advised, and grinned as we rolled away from the curb. J. W. D.

Equalizing Road Costs.

In some of the states where highway construction has been a part of the state policy for a period of years, much work has been done on highways which would naturally become a part of the national system. It is proposed that in these cases states or counties should be allowed compensation which will give other highway mileage equal in value to that constructed. Such highways would not be maintained by the government, but would be turned over to the state while the government undertook the cost of maintenance of the national system.

We are authorized to give official factory service on Timken, Hyatt, and New Departure Bearings. Complete stocks of these nationally known anti-friction bearings always on hand.

A favorite model of the New Series MARMON 34

With the present popularity of the close-coupled touring car of limited passenger capacity, this 4-passenger, 4-door body of the New Series Marmon 34 is proving an especial favorite.

Compactness has been attained without any sacrifice of roominess and comfort. The body sides are slightly lower than in the 7-passenger touring car, and the steering wheel is set at a trifle more of an angle. Passengers are about at conversational height with a person standing beside the car.

The exceptional smoothness of operation and the remarkable road qualities of the New Series Marmon 34 are as noticeable in this as in all other models. They are the result of basic superiority of design, of advanced engineering and of the extreme accuracy of manufacturing which characterizes the High Efficiency Motor. Really to appreciate them you must ride in the car or, better still, drive it. We shall be glad to arrange for a demonstration.

Tourist Paints a Word Picture of the Cloverland

Calls Upper Michigan Nature's Rendezvous with Motorists

BY WILLIAM K. GIBBS.

FOR those who think they know the middle west and base their judgment on their knowledge of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, lower Michigan, Iowa, Minnesota, or Wisconsin, there is a surprise in store in the upper peninsula of Michigan, which has been given the euphonious name of "Cloverland."

Something over 2,000 miles of ideal roads link up practically every part of Cloverland. Until last year the building of roads had not progressed sufficiently to make the country especially inviting to the tourist, but last summe saw practically all of the connecting links completed so that one may tour in comfort.

There are stretches of twenty to thirty miles at times where one sees nothing but an occasional lumber camp, or a cluster of cottages around the shores of a lake, but the highways are as well kept as if the road ran through the most prosperous and thickly populated areas in the country. Moreover, there is the additional charm of driving through the cool woods.

There are several ways of getting to this remarkable but little known land of good roads and scenic beauty. The three main gateways are: Menominee, which reaches the center of the peninsula from the east to west; St. Ignace, the eastern gateway at the Straits of Mackinac; and Ironwood, the western gateway for those coming in from the Minneapolis district. From any of these points a circle tour embracing practically all of the peninsula, or any part, can be made.

From the Menominee gateway one enters a scenic district. Hundreds of years ago when the giant glaciers swept southward from the Arctic, chiseling the shore lines of the great lakes and dotting the central west with countless smaller lakes and otherwise fashioning the contour of the country in the upper Mississippi valley, this monster ice sheet kindly deposited a part of its vast load in three distinct and separate sections of Cloverland. These three sections are the rugged iron ranges—the Menominee, Gogebic, and Marquette—that separately, or as a whole, remind one of a miniature Colorado. Here you will find the same enchantment the same colorings, the same charm. True, you will not find the extreme heights, the yawning chasm, and the bald peaks nude of verdure, but a combination of rugged scenery with all the kaleidoscopic mantle of nature such as she produces only in the lower altitudes, and you will appreciate it all the more because of its nearness! When you are in the majestic Rockies you feel like a pigmy; here you feel like a king. These ranges were made for man, not giants.

STOP AND GO IN JAPANESE —Ginza street, Tokio, famous as the Broadway of Japan, now has traffic cops who carry out the Eno theories of traffic regulation.

Of the Menominee range, which is nearest the central gateway, Iron Mountain is the chief city, being about thirty miles west of Spalding and seventy miles from Menominee. Almost from the moment you leave Spalding you begin climbing through forests which bring home to you what Longfellow meant when he penned the first lines of "Acadia": "This is the forest primeval."

Like all mountain roads which never seem in a hurry to get anywhere—that is, they wind about and seem uncertain where they will go next—the Cloverland trail winds its serpentine way westward. You rise some fifteen hundred feet between Spalding and Iron Mountain.

Continuing west from Iron mountain, other mining towns of importance occasionally swing into view. Magnificent timber lines either side of the road, forming an archway of verdure through which the shafts of sunlight, piercing the leafy canopy, throw fantastic pictures and a network of shadows over the smooth, white surface of the trail. Splendid gravel, smooth and hard as the old pikes common to the east long before the gasoline vehicle was in swaddling clothes, winds through this heritage of nature, first on the summit of a lofty hill, then dipping into the valley, crossing and recrossing numerous trout streams, with an occasional view of a beautiful lake or bathing pool for deer, on and on through densely shaded stretches of awe inspiring science, for the ax has never touched this enormous tract of timber except for the four rod blazed trail that connects the east with the west of Cloverland. Deer, rabbits, porcupines, gophers, squirrels, partridge, and countless other varieties of birds are seen with ever increasing frequency as you go deeper into this forest primeval.

After Watersmeet you approach the Gogebic iron range, which differs but little in topography from the Menominee range, but which has its own compelling interest. Lake Gogebic has a host of friends and its converts come back year after year. Countless lakes and streams can be found where the camper may revel in his favorite sports. Ironwood, Bessemer, and Wakefield are the triumvirate of cities that dominate the Gogebic range.

To the north of the Gogebic range is Ontonagon and the Porcupine mountains, reached by a branch of the Cloverland trail from Watersmeet. Ontonagon is famous for the first discovery of copper in this country. An excellent highway leads south along Superior's shore to the Porcupine mountains, about eighteen miles away.

Experts in the organization of comfort for tourists and travelers have expended their best efforts in devising ways in which the least time and trouble is expended in gaining access to the sights of greatest interest in the Ontonagon district. To the east there are three routes to Houghton, the capital of copperdom. To the north of Houghton lies Keweenaw county. From the most northern point of Michigan—Keweenaw Point—the various rock formations emerge in bold, stairlike cliffs, exquisitely colored, and affording many scenes of wild and picturesque beauty.

At the tip of Keweenaw is old Fort Wilkins, now abandoned, which was built in 1844 as a protection to the paleface against the Indians. This was when Copper Harbor, adjacent, was a thriving mining town and the copper capital of Keweenaw. Many examples of Goldsmith's "Deserted Village" can be found in Keweenaw; relics of bygone days when copper towns sprang up over night. Fine highways, wonderful scenery, ideal camping spots, nature at her finest—such is the Keweenaw country.

Peter Hand's Old Brew

Brewed the same old way

PETER HAND'S Old Brew is brewed today just as it has been for thirty years. It has the same generous quality, the same rich fragrance and zest of Yakima hops and selected barley malt. The only difference is that now, after brewing, we reduce the alcohol content to comply with the law.

Our scientific brew masters and chemists have solved the problem of reducing the alcohol without in any way affecting the flavor and quality of this fine old brew.

If you were formerly a lover of fine beers you will enjoy Old Brew. The reason for this is that every brew master will tell you that the alcohol content of beer has little to do with its delicious flavor. In fact they will tell you that the finest foreign beers formerly imported were lowest in alcohol.

Old Brew is a full brewed, rich dark brew. Before bottling it is aged for months in wood to give it the mellow, smooth, sparkling richness.

—all foot trouble needs individual treatment

The thumbprint

A French scientist discovered that all members of the human form differ in proportion and shape. Today the finger-print system, growing out of this discovery, is used internationally as an infallible means of identification—proof that no two feet are alike. Proof, too, that what may serve as a remedy in one case may be fatal in another. Proof, moreover, that every foot ailment DEMANDS INDIVIDUAL TREATMENT.

Because no two feet are exactly alike, general treatment or "stock remedies" cannot correct or permanently relieve foot ailments. Each condition demands separate and individual attention.

This wide difference in foot anatomy and the dissimilarity of the causes that develop foot ailments demonstrate the folly of temporizing with "readymade" cure-alls. In no case can a positive cure be effected through them, and in the majority of instances a bad condition is only made worse.

If you suffer from foot trouble, whether it is a bone dislocation or a less serious condition, treat with competent foot specialists who correct the source of the trouble—who, in treating the cause, remove the effect permanently.

Under the Wilms System your foot trouble receives professional care. Relief from painful conditions in most cases is effected in a short time. In every case, irrespective of its nature or degree of seriousness, the utmost resources of the podiatric profession are drawn upon in an endeavor to achieve a permanent correction of the ailment.

When devices are necessary in treating a condition, an impression taken directly from your foot forms our unmistakable guide. These corrective measures are taken expressly for you—made to fit your individual requirements.

No matter what condition you suffer from, this extreme care and caution will do the utmost to alleviate it. Cures have been accomplished by this individual treatment method of the Wilms System Laboratories in cases that seemed hopeless.

Ordinary foot ailments are usually relieved quickly and painlessly. Under the Wilms System deformities are treated by specialists only.

The treatment of any condition need not necessarily interfere with occupational duties. Fees for all treatments are predetermined, and are nominal. Appointments may be made personally or by telephone.

Men, women and children are accepted for treatment. Special accommodations and attendants for women.

Do not delay coming for treatment the instant a foot weakness becomes noticeable. The entire foot structure, if weakened, often collapses by a single misstep. If you have any of the foot ills outlined in the column to the right, come at once. Frequently suggestion, if made at the proper time, forestalls a foot condition that otherwise would become a torment and an unnecessary expense.

The most common foot ailments

When it is considered that 26 bones form the human foot anatomy and that the displacement of one affects all, it is evident that such dislocations commonly referred to as "flat feet" and "fallen arches" require special study and individual treatment.

Most all foot trouble is directly traceable to bone dislocation. A fallen or weakened arch permits the other members to sag, strains the muscular and ligamental structures, and very often presses on nerves, causing pain and cramps.

The result of this condition is painful walking, soreness, weakness, stiffening and swelling. Neglect eventually develops cramped, under and overlapping toes, bunions, corns and severe callouses, offensive perspiration and ingrown nails.

Any one of these conditions tends to tire the body at the slightest exertion, frequently compelling the removal of shoes to ease the tortured feet. The carriage of the body also loses its spring and grace, pains develop in the instep and a constant burning is noticeable. Nervousness, headaches and backache are also frequently caused by foot trouble.

Special attention, which treats with the fundamental causes rather than the effect, is the safest, most rapid and economical remedy for all foot trouble.

Repair Profiteer Meets Defeat in Washington War

Co-operative Campaign Eliminates Many Undesirables

THAT profiteering in making motor car repairs can be practically eliminated and the profiteer's eyes opened to the error of his ways has been demonstrated in Washington by the A. A. A. District of Columbia division.

Among the many anti-profiteer campaigns that have been staged in Washington during the last few years, the stand of the organized motorists against money-mad automobile repairmen has been by far the most successful. Not alone did this campaign banish the profiteer but it brought to the buyers, the sellers, and the repairers of motor cars a better understanding of the various positions and problems of each other.

Just how the national capital plan was started, was operated, and was brought to the point of success is set forth in a digest transmitted to the several hundred A. A. A. clubs throughout the country.

Approximately 2,000 complaints against unfair practices were received by the A. A. A. Investigation, according to the digest, showed that those old time establishments generally regarded as reputable were dealing fairly with their patrons, the flagrant offenders being the mushroom growth of repairmen who came in the wake of national prosperity.

One beneficial result came in the establishment of a number of new agency service stations. While factory branches and agents for old established brands of motor cars maintained well equipped service stations, many agents for the newer makes of cars did not have enough vehicles in use to warrant this heavy investment. Hence a plan was evolved whereby groups of such dealers are sending their car users to establishments which have registered on what is known as the A. A. A. "fair list."

One of the requirements for becoming recorded with the A. A. A. is to fill out a questionnaire, giving a considerable amount of pertinent information, such as to experience, equipment, expert mechanics, helpers, per hour charges, and whether estimates on jobs will be given. The applicant is also required to state whether his shop specializes in certain makes of cars, and, if so, to name them.

Probably the best result of the entire campaign is found in the agreement of many repairmen to leave to the arbitration of the A. A. A. District of Columbia division any difference of opinion between themselves and their customers, and to abide by the decision of the motoring organization.

Subway Garage Is Planned as Novel Western Project

AN underground garage and auto park, to accommodate 3,000 cars, is the unique project backed by Ralph W. Burdick, president of the American Engine and Airplane company, in Los Angeles. The syndicate, of which Burdick is head, has filed a petition to the city council of Los Angeles for a forty-five year lease to the underground rights of Pershing square. Maj. Ernest H. Wilcox, who commanded the 543d engineers in France, will engineer the project.

The total excavation will be fifty-eight feet, allowing eight feet of surface soil above the three subgarage floors. Each floor will have the capacity of about 1,000 cars. Spaces for gas, oil, tires, and accessories will be reserved. The subgarage entrances will be covered by platforms, open aviaries and playrooms. The first floor of the underground garage, covering over five acres, could be utilized for big public affairs at night and for auto shows.

At the expiration of the lease the garage would be owned by the city, as the subgarage would pay a certain fixed percentage of the gross revenue as lease rental. A bonding house has passed favorably on selling a bond issue for the construction. The cost is estimated as between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000. The lease rental would probably average between $3,000 and $4,500.

TOP NOTCH

Good looks, long wear and low price

Shoes of fine duck will save a lot of shoe expense this summer and it is as easy to buy shapely, good fitting ones as the ordinary kind. The "Gym-Bal" has good looks, comfort, great durability and a low price to commend it. It is made of extra quality Top Notch duck, in styles for men, women and boys. An ankle patch of leather and neat leather trimmings give it the real athletic look. The non-slip sole of the "Gym-Bal" is of the finest live rubber, dark red in color. It will outlast two ordinary soles, which makes the shoe a particularly desirable one for boys who wear out shoes quickly.

Uniform Traffic Law Framers Ask Help of Nation

Legislative Suggestions Mailed to Bodies in Each State

CHICAGO pioneers in the uniform traffic regulation field have summoned civic authorities and motorist organizations in every state of the union to get behind the basic traffic laws which they propose to incorporate into a national act for the benefit of the country generally.

Direct simplicity marks the initial appeal which last week was mailed by the street traffic committee of the Chicago Association of Commerce to hundreds of city, county and state organizations requesting that the suggestions be taken before state legislatures for their unanimous approval and official action. The suggestions, submitted after months of investigation and debate by the police officials, business men, manufacturers and traffic representatives who make up the committee, thoroughly cover the general traffic field. They include uniform rulings on speed, signaling by drivers and traffic officers, passing of vehicles, stopping behind street cars, light regulations, traffic signs and the definitions of terms in the proposed national act.

When the state legislatures take action and the suggestions become national laws, a result confidently expected by the framers, it will be unlawful to drive at a speed in excess of thirty miles an hour outside the limits of municipalities anywhere in the United States; to exceed ten miles an hour in densely built business sections, fifteen miles an hour in populous residence sections or twenty miles an hour anywhere within municipality limits. The best laws of each state have been incorporated in the remainnig suggestions. One definite ruling will make it illegal for colored lights to be visible from the front of any vehicle.

Five uniform traffic signs are suggested. They are to be erected by state officials in each state at dangerous highway points cautioning the driver to "Slow Down," "Signal Before Turning," "Turn to Right or Left," and announcing "Danger, Sharp Curve."

The Chicago committee, under the leadership of A. R. Bone, chairman, and Robert H. Nau, secretary, is preparing now to follow its national campaign closely until all state legislatures are in line and ready to pass the measure.

Gossip of the Auto Trade

CONVENTION week will bring out every available car in Chicago to jam the boulevards in an endless service procession if dealers and motor associations carry out their coöperative programs. All along the row salesrooms have taken on a gala appearance for the benefit of delegates, and most sales organizations have formed regular running schedules, placing as many cars as possible at the disposal of visitors. Volunteer drivers filled out hundreds of cards issued last week by automobile clubs and from the looks of the field politics will have to wait until after the visiting army becomes thoroughly acquainted with the Chicago park and boulevard systems.

Manufacturers of the Mack truck have offered a $1,000 scholarship prize for the best essay on "Good Roads and Ship by Truck."

E. A. Cannon, executive secretary of the Good Roads association of Wisconsin, told members of the Chicago Automobile club during a special session last Thursday how his state maintains its excellent system of roads.

The Chevrolet company of Illinois moved into its new three story building at Union avenue and Twenty-second street last week and began operations on a new capacity scale. A company report showed that since H. H. Mundy has had charge of the sales forces the number of dealers operating under the Chicago company has increased 75 per cent.

Charles R. Newby, who joined the Bethlehem Motors corporation as field manager in the fall of 1919, has been appointed general sales manager.

Harry Branstetter, Kissel distributer, attended the convention of distributers and their sales managers, held at the main office in Milwaukee three days last week.

B. M. Pettit, head of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company's farm bureau, told agricultural publishers who met in the Congress hotel last week that intensive farm production and use of the motor truck are the only direct remedies in the national food shortage. He outlined farm uses for the truck scientifically from data on the subject gathered in a recent investigation and analysis of the market made by the Goodyear company.

How to Figure Speeds of Cars or Performance

Expert Gives Method for Tabulation of Technical Facts

BY HIGH SPEED.

EVERY really enthusiastic car owner likes to know the various formulæ that are commonly used in connection with car speed and performance. The formula asked for more frequently than any other is the ordinary horsepower formula. This formula reads $\frac{D^2N}{2\frac{1}{2}}$, in which D is the bore in inches and N the number of cylinders. The solution of this formula gives the horsepower of the engine at 1,000 feet per minute piston speed. This latter statement is important, because the horsepower is not the maximum of the engine at all, but merely that produced at the piston speed mentioned. The piston speed will vary with the revolutions per minute and the engine stroke, so that as a matter of fact the stroke is considered in this formula.

Given below is a horsepower table which all readers will find useful. It is based on the above named formula.

Bore.	Number of cylinders—

The speed formula for miles per hour, etc., is something asked for nearly every day. In order to get the miles per hour, divide the miles by the hours; or when minutes are given, convert the hours to minutes and multiply the miles by 50. Thus, five miles in one hour equals 5 divided by 1, or five miles an hour. Now five miles in sixty-four minutes equals 5 by 60 divided by 64. In other words, if you have the time in minutes, multiply the distance by 60; and if you have it in seconds, multiply the distance by 3,600. The formula then, knowing the distance and time in seconds, is:

$$\frac{3{,}600}{\text{number of seconds multiplied by the distance.}}$$

Another valuable table which I know all car owners will appreciate is that relating to the car speed with different gear ratios and wheel sizes. The formula is: Speed in miles per hour equals:

$$\frac{\text{Dx3.1416xr.p.m.}}{\text{12xgear ratiox88.}}$$

where D is the wheel diameter.

The following table gives the car speeds at 1,000 revolutions of the engine:

Gears—	4:1	3½:1	3:1	2¾:1
30 inch wheel	21.6	24.7	28.8	34.6
32 inch wheel	23.1	26.4	30.7	36.8
33 inch wheel	23.8	27.2	31.7	38.0
34 inch wheel	24.5	27.9	32.6	39.2
36 inch wheel	25.9	29.6	34.6	41.4
38 inch wheel	27.4	31.2	36.5	43.8
40 inch wheel	28.8	32.9	38.4	46.0
42 inch wheel	30.3	34.6	40.3	48.4

IT'S PRETTY TOUGH—When rich fellers put spiked covers over their spare tire to keep another feller from hookin' a fast ride. This happened in Porto Rico recently when a thoughtful motorist insured the rear of his car against untimely accident by the simple spike invention.

You Tell 'Em!

The county's leading automobile trap at Posen, on the Western avenue road, was the scene last week of a lively contest between representatives of the law and the open road. The Illinois Automobile club established a patrol composed of two deputies, who stationed themselves at either side of Posen's dangerous railroad crossing and told every driver who came along that if he did not stop dead still before crossing the tracks he would be taken in to see the judge.

"We must confess that we have always loaded our 2½-ton Paige to full capacity. In one instance we took a capacity load into the Three Lakes district when other truck men told us it was impossible to take over two tons, and we delivered our load without any trouble".

IN building Paige Trucks, we have never lost sight of the fact that a truck, to be truly efficient, must be capable of carrying a capacity load, regardless of road conditions. We have accordingly endowed our trucks with the necessary strength and pulling power to enable them to perform their allotted tasks under any and all road conditions that may ordinarily be encountered.

Those Good Brakes

in a

are aided by special steels

Brakes seem to be one of the overlooked features of a motor car. In a Maxwell they have had the extreme of attention.

For instance, a road engineer, in about 500,000 miles of experimental driving, has constantly tested and studied them.

That is why you can check the speed of a Maxwell in an instant and bring it to a standstill either by foot brake or hand brake.

Special steels in a Maxwell are largely responsible. They give it extra strength in wear and endurance, but they make the car light in weight.

Thus when you call on it to halt the brakes are not required to "wrestle" with superfluous weight, and the momentum of the car is easily stopped.

These are steels made to Maxwell's own formulae. They equal, pound for pound, the steels in any car built. But no car has steels just like them.

In a large measure they contribute to Maxwell's growing prestige, as expressed in figures like these: nearly 400,000 now in use; and 100,000 more for the year 1920.

The Indianapolis 500-mile Race

GASTON CHEVROLET

an American, driving an American-built Monroe Special Car, won the International Motor Sweepstakes, May 31, on Oldfield Tires.

He is the first winner of this annual event to finish the entire 500 miles without a tire change.

He drove at an average speed of 88.55 miles an hour.

RENE THOMAS

Europe's premier pilot, driving a French Ballot Special Car, finished second to Chevrolet.

He also rode on Oldfield Tires.

His entire race was free from tire trouble.

He drove at a speed of 86.95 miles an hour, making precautionary tire changes at 282 miles while replenishing fuel.

TOMMY MILTON

American, World's Speed King, driving an American-built Duesenberg Car, finished third on Oldfield Tires.

Milton's race was also free from tire trouble.

He made one precautionary change at 270 miles during his midway stop for fuel and finished with a record of 86.85 miles an hour.

BARNEY OLDFIELD

Master Driver of the World, built the tires used by Chevrolet, Thomas and Milton.

To the development of these tires Barney Oldfield had devoted twenty years of study and more than 500,000 miles of racing and touring.

IN THE BATTLE OF THE TIRES

Over this historic brick testing ground, victory has been sought by many tire manufacturers.

This year Oldfield Tires fought and vanquished the tires of four other competing companies.

One of these other tire manufacturers furnished tire equipment for ten cars, all of which either failed to finish or finished behind Chevrolet, Thomas and Milton.

Cole Aero-EIGHT

BALANCED TO ZERO

What vests the Aero-EIGHT with its unusual range of performance and enables it to operate with uniform efficiency and economy throughout its entire speed scope?

Those who have experienced the thrill of traveling in the air realize instantly why the Aero-EIGHT is so versatile.

Its working parts are synchronized. It never labors, never strains. Its operation is smooth, silent, vibrationless. For the Aero-EIGHT is balanced to zero.

The sensation of speed is cut in half. Traveling at 60 miles an hour seems like 30; 40 like 20 and at less it moves so evenly and quietly that one is hardly cognizant of its motion at all.

There's a peculiar fascination about the manner in which the Aero-EIGHT performs which is attributable to its peculiar balance.

THE THIRD SHOT

BY CAPT. KARL W. DETZER
(Chief of the D. C. I., American Embarkation Center.)

A Story of the "D. C. I.," the American Secret Police in France, After the Troops Started Home

It was in Hotel du Chapeau Rouge, where the Paris highway stops to widen for a moment in the village of St. Mars, I met Papa Chenou. He had telephoned me an hour before at my office in the city that he had a matter of "vast importance," which he must discuss with me. Further he would not say.

But Papa Chenou had a reputation in western France for being the shrewdest of all the village gendarme chiefs. And it was a sultry morning of early summer, and the twenty mile ride along the winding white ribbon of Paris road lured me too. I found the old policeman in the long, cool room of the wayside inn, his wire haired police dog tugging at a chain made fast to the table leg.

"Cider," said Papa Chenou, "and then business."

He rapped the table with his iron knuckles, and ordered Alice, the barmaid, to bring him a bottle.

"It was M. Houdayre reported it first," he began; "last night he came to the gendarmerie at 10 o'clock—a pretty hour to get out of bed—and said he had heard three shots near his dwelling at the end of the village just at dusk. I told him that it probably was drunken Socialists celebrating, and he seemed satisfied and went away. I thought of it no more that night. In the morning a little girl came to my office while I was cleaning the rifles, and told me that Mme. Jaquier, the widow, had not been seen this morning. Mme. Jacquier owns the cow, and for twenty years has taken it to pasture."

"Some cow," remarked Henri Dubois, the young detective, who accompanied me.

"I went to the house of Mme. Jacquier," continued the gendarme, "and it was locked. We knocked and received no answer, so I got three witnesses and broke the door. It is a one room house, and the door on the street is the only entrance. The window shutters all were drawn, too. On the bed we found the widow—save her soul—dead. A bullet hole in her forehead had spilled blood on her lace pillows. She was cold—had been dead many hours.

"And this is why I called to consult with you. The door had not only been locked but barred on the inside, and the shutters all were barred, too. The widow was alone, and there was no gun in the room! No one could have left the house and barred the shutters after him. Before you Americans came to France it couldn't have happened, but anything can happen now!"

Dubois' eyes sparkled. It was the kind of case he lived for. He suggested going to the house of the Widow Jacquier at once, and after we had clinked our glasses while Papa Chenou mumbled a toast to our success, we walked to the edge of the village.

St. Mars is a one street town. It is on the great highway which winds over hills and through green valleys from Paris to the sea, and after a day of travel is lost to the average tourist in a maze of villages left behind. Hardly sixty yards wide, it extends for a quarter of a mile along the road. In the center is the church, the hotel, the office of the mayor, the gendarmerie, and a little cluster of country wine shops and stores. The houses are flush with the road, and there are no sidewalks.

It was a pleasant walk to the end of the village, the sun shining with all the vigor it assumed to make up for a spring of mist and rain. Papa Chenou talked unceasingly, addressing a word now to us, now to his dog, sometimes to villagers who removed their caps and bowed to us as we passed.

We came at last to the town's end, where it stopped abruptly with a row of half a dozen little houses holding tight to each other like a scared family. In front of the third of these a gendarme sprawled over his bicycle and talked to a group of old men. They fell aside when we passed.

Surely Papa Chenou had broken the door. It lay its length into the street. The massive hinges were bent and the bolt was broken off short.

The room had been untouched. Covered by a sheet on the massive bed lay the diminutive body of the widow. Her coarse knit garments hung on a chair at the foot. The windows, though the glass casements were open, were covered by two inch wooden shutters, firmly bolted from within. There was no confusion, no sign of struggle—it was the simple home of a simple village woman.

This, Papa Chenou explained, was as he found the house. We examined the body and found the bullet in the pillow, a .35 caliber, probably fired from a revolver. Surely it was not American, for there was no gun of that size in the American forces.

Bewildered at this strange crime, I requested several of the village men about the entrance to lift the door into place, and they swung it up till it fitted snugly in the opening. There in the dark we tried to surmise some manner in which the unfortunate woman had met her end.

The house was black, for the shutters were close fitting, and the only sunlight came through a little crescent cut high in one shutter, to permit the entrance of what the French consider a sufficient quantity of night air. The sun shone through the little hole and made a crescent of light on the black tile floor.

Papa Chenou saw our interest. Dubois already was pulling a chair to the window to examine the little crescent hole.

"No," said the Frenchman, "no one. I hardly believe even the tallest of your Americans, could reach so high with a gun. Yes, I thought this morning of that."

The Third Shot

True, it was too high. I went again into the street. The gendarme introduced me there to a group of villagers. Several of them had heard the shots—three of them. They all told the same story—they all had heard three distinct shots. They all said the reports had been muffled, as though fired in a building. And we had found the trace of but one bullet.

I sent Dubois to interview the neighbors while I worked in the little room. But at noon he returned, and we were at a standstill on the case. All we had learned amounted to this—that the murdered woman had been a good citizen, without enemies, went to church regularly, was poor, and minded her own business. She had no relatives.

It was a problem of the type which gnaws on the investigator's mind. I wanted to think it over, and heaven knows one cannot concentrate in the company of a French policeman. Leaving Dubois I started to walk, turning toward the open country.

It was past noon when I came to a cross road three miles from the village of St. Mars, a crossroad with a little cafe crowded close up into the corner. I stopped for a bite to eat.

The landlord himself waited upon me, serving me bread and cheese and abominable red wine which he praised highly while I tried to drink. My accent had betrayed me—he guessed first that I was an Englishman, and when I told him I was American, he poured a bit of the wine from my glass into his, and drank a toast to the brave Americans.

"Tourists have not come before," he explained, "and only an occasional American soldier. The camp was far from the cross road—nearly twenty kilometers—and besides, my humble wineshop would not attract the wealthy American. But sometimes they did come, yes, there was an American in the house now. He came last night. Poor boy, he had been hurt, it seemed, for he was very weak, and we gave him a room—my son's room, the son who is in the artillery."

I was interested.

"No, the boy said he did not want to be disturbed, and is still abed. No, sir, I don't think you should disturb him. He arrived at 9 o'clock last night and said that no one should come in. I cannot allow even you, my guest, to intrude upon him. O, a thousand pardons, sir, I did not understand," and he danced about ready to take me to the stair. The French have a whole some respect for police authority.

There was no response to my knock. I repeated it. Then I tried the door. It was unlocked.

On the bed lay a Negro fully dressed. He was dead. And as I looked at his face I recognized him. He was "Cutie" Sully, American Negro bandit, long hunted by the police of Europe.

A revolver wound in his shoulder had permitted a stream of blood to flow down over his pillow. He had bled to death.

I remained only long enough to search the clothing of the dead man, and without even attempting to calm the innkeeper, I hurried from that second grewsome bedside of my morning's work. Chance had directed me to the crossroad, and I felt probably had led me to the second link in the chain of fact I was attempting to follow.

Back in St. Mars I found Dubois still plodding about making unsuccessful inquiries. We met at the office of the gendarme, and I told him of my second find. He was delighted. So there was an American angle in the case! He knew it—Frenchmen can't perform the impossible!

But my work called me back to the city and I left Dubois to follow up the case, and promises to send another man and a car to help him connect to two crimes we had bolted into that morning.

In my office I started the report—Case 329, I remember it distinctly after all these months—and I sent First Sergeant Madden to trail down the clews. Madden always was sent on what we called "stone wall cases." We knew that if there was a solution, Madden would find it.

All afternoon and into the night I struggled, and as the evening cases began to accumulate there was a telephone call from Madden.

"The jendarm"—he always pronounced French as it is spelled—"has just arrested the murderer," he said, and his voice was calm. "I had a hunch and followed it and we got him, but I don't think the Americans will want to prosecute. Can't you come out?"

For the second time in twelve hours I left the white kilo stones of the Paris highway behind me. In the village Madden lounged in the street, smoking an ill smelling pipe. He led me to the little house of Mme. Jacquier. The body had been removed, but otherwise the place had been untouched. In the candle light he walked to the bed.

"Lie down, Skipper," he said. "The way she was when they found her. Now look at the crescent in the shutter. What do you see?"

"Across the street is a lighted window."

"Yes, and behind it is the murderer—the village banker, an invalid who never leaves his room."

In the little room across the way a sick man lay on the bed. He was weeping and twining his bony fingers about his neck when we entered. Beside him, soothing him, sat Papa Chenou, not the talkative Papa Chenou of early morning but a serious, official Chenou, facing a hated task.

"I cannot leave my bed," whispered the old man, "and I do the town banking in this room. Three days a week my sister comes from the country and helps me and brings my bread and cheese and wine. Under my pillow I keep this revolver," and he exhibited an ancient .35 caliber model.

"Last night as it was nearly dark a Negro climbed to my window. He was very rough. He started to the bed and I shot—three times. He dropped out of sight and, though I shouted, I was not heard. O it is terrible!" and again the old man wept.

"The French will not prosecute," announced Papa Chenou. "I shall see the procurator and he does what I tell him in my village. And the Americans?"

"Will not prosecute," I answered.

While Papa Chenou held the sick man in his arms and rocked him Madden stood at the window. I saw him open his pocket knife and dig into the plaster sill. He pulled out a slug of lead that once had been a revolver bullet, caliber 35.

Another story by Capt. Detzer will appear in an early issue.

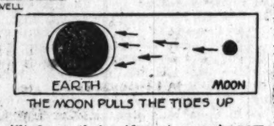
MOON AND TIDES.

BY the law of gravitation, which is universal in extent, every particle of matter attracts every other particle. The earth and moon form a double planet, quite near together, in the astronomical sense, and it is natural to suppose, therefore, that there would be numerous manifestations of their mutual attraction. There are, indeed, phenomena on earth which are directly caused by the moon's pull upon us. They are the tides.

Any one who has ever visited the seashore must have been impressed with the regularity with which the water rose and fell. Once every twelve hours, day and night, the waves flow in to their height and then ebb away again. The rise and fall is without cease, and if particular notice is taken, it can be observed that the high tides always occur when the moon is placed in certain positions of the sky.

To any one who can be impressed with the grandeur of nature's plan, the sight of the rising tide is inspiring. The mud flats lie exposed along the water's edge, crustaceans and marine creatures are wallowing in their pools, while here and there a lone star fish is marooned high and dry upon the sands. The sun sinks back behind the land, and as it goes down in a blaze of color the yellow moon comes rising from the ocean, mounting upward into the sky. Darkness falls, and over the sound of the rippling waves there comes the booming of the distant surf.

PATH OF THE TIDES
D.F.MAXWELL



THE MOON PULLS THE TIDES UP

Looking out over the flats along the sheet of light below the moon, the islets are disappearing, water is coming gurgling in, while in the distance the swell of the ocean can be seen. The water creeps up along the sand, foot by foot, inch which were lying tilted on their sides at sunset, now right themselves and swing at their stakes, there comes that heaving swell to the waters that is the echo of distant storms upon the sea, and then as the moon passes on high the tide pours in, with every breaker running a little higher than the one that broke before, until the flood is at its height. And then, as the moon declines, the tide ebbs out, until at sunrise the long flats will lie exposed again.

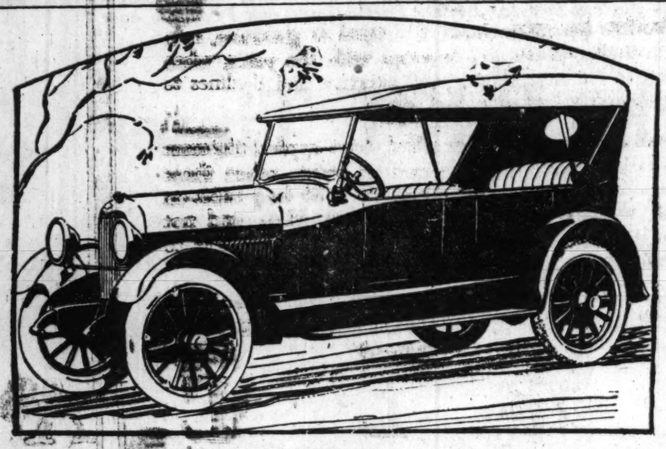
The moon, often aided by the sun, pulls up the tide. It draws every object on the earth to it, but only the water, which is highly mobile, can readily respond. There are two tidal waves on earth, one beneath the moon, and one directly opposite, on the other side. The cause of the tide on the opposite face is interesting. The moon pulls the earth away from the water, and lets a bulge of it hang partly released from the earth's control.

If the earth had no land, but were a sheet of ocean all the way around, the tides would sweep along as they are shown to do on diagrams. But there is land, and this complicates their flow. The shore lines deflect the tides, and turn their courses aside, while the shallows slow them down until they are far behind the moon. It happens, therefore, that there are several tidal crests on the oceans at the same time, each started by some particular passage of the moon. The times of high and low tide are for this reason different in every port.

H. I. D.: The destruction of a dark star is indeed its rebirth into life again. It is ground to dust in a swarm of meteors and star-stuff, and its remnants are recreated into a new system of sun and worlds. Matter is eternal, space is eternal, and time is eternal, and, so far as can be learned, life is eternal also.

PAIGE

THE MOST BEAUTIFUL CAR IN AMERICA



MEN of action refuse to be dependent upon slow-moving, congested trolley cars. They realize that their time is worth money. And quite naturally they find the solution of this time problem in a dependable motor car—the most efficient form of transportation that has ever been developed.

A little reflection should convince you that any man can do a better day's work with a PAIGE.

In the entire field of automobiles there is no car with a more firmly established reputation for dependability. Because the PAIGE performs its work unfailingly, it has been adopted by those men who are best equipped to judge the efficiency of any mechanical product.

MAJESTIC.

Glenn and Jenkins:

"Where are you from, nigger?"

"I'm from Alabama."

"What part?"

"All of me."

"The boss is going to give every one a raise. I heard him say he was going to pay you all you're worth."

"Well, I won't work for that."

"I'm going away from here."

"Well, if you never come back, I won't think you stayed very long."

Frank De Voe:

"I was in a show one time."

"What part did you play?"

"I played the part of a fairy."

"What! You a fairy? What did you have to do?"

"Carry eighteen people across the floor."

"Did you ever have any experience in pictures?"

"Yes; lots of snapshots."

"I mean moving pictures."

"No, I never move. It always blurs the picture."

Grace de Mar:

"You say that chicken you sent me was a Plymouth Rock? I thought it came over in the Mayflower. I didn't have to kill it. It just laid down and died. I think I'll take some mutton today."

"For a stew?"

"Well, it's for my husband. Oh, by the way, will you tell your wife that when she makes that liquid beverage—you know what I mean—to pour a little of it in the sink. If it takes the enamel off, it's ready to bottle."

PALACE.

Duffy and Sweeney:

"Why is a pup in a refrigerator like kissing a pretty girl?"

"I never could guess—why?"

"It's doggone nice."

"What city in Connecticut is Hartford to get out of?"

"Waterbury, because of the many witches there."

RIALTO.

Hart and Helene:

"Why are you learning French?"

"Because my dog is a French poodle and the little dear can't understand English."

"Bah Jove, old top, but doesn't being in love open a man's eyes?"

"Not nearly so wide as marriage does."

"Bridget, cant you ask your lover to put off your marriage until I can get another maid?"

"I don't know him well enough to ask such a favor, ma'am."

"This paper says that under the present law woman is the slave of man."

"Why don't they enforce it, then?"

"Was it a case of love at first sight?"

"No; he didn't know until the second time he met her that she was an heiress."

"Why does a woman always add a postscript to a letter?"

"I suppose it's because she knows the letter will set you thinking and she wants to have the last word."

"I gave Polly a rainbow kiss this morning."

"What on earth is that?"

"A kiss that follows a storm."

"Why is a blush like a little girl?"

"Because it becomes a woman."

"What do you think of women who imitate men?"

"They are fools."

"Then the imitation is successful, isn't it?"

Where Speed Is The Big Idea

Racing drivers unanimously put their trust in Dixon's.

They know that Dixon's has never failed in a pinch—that it stands the most tremendous pressure and keeps right on giving the superperfect lubrication they need.

DIXON'S Gear LUBRICANT

No other automobile accessory is so universally used on racing cars. And here's the reason.

Plain grease and oil "squeeze out" under a load. Dixon's does not. Pressure merely forces Dixon's more firmly into the tiny depressions on gear and bearing surfaces. Over all, is formed a smooth, oily polish that puts friction and noise completely out of commission.

Put Dixon's into your transmission and differential—then see the improvement. Neither heat nor cold affect it.

Your dealer has these red cans of Dixon's.

For your transmission and differential Dixon's No. 2. Also Dixon's Cup Grease and other famous lubricants.

DORT

Quality Goes Clear Through

The Dort car is under close scrutiny by hundreds of prospective owners.

These people want to know why and how the Dort has been able to hold its remarkable, widespread record for thrifty performance.

With no small degree of satisfaction and pride, we point to the reasons.

It is due primarily to the thorough-going quality in every part and unit of Dort construction.

To the simple, efficient motor. To the triple-heated method of carburetion, and the double-exhaust, both of which spell economy in every inch of travel.

To Dort engineering and careful manufacturing methods.

In a word, to collect all the reasons into one general phrase, it is the quality that "goes clear through".

This explains why the Dort gives a really astonishing degree of long, faithful service, in constant hard use, at a cost, much below the usual.

And it further explains why Dort owners spend less in operating and maintaining their cars, than other owners in the same price class.

On our time payment plan you can own a Dort Car by making a cash payment of $37.

The Men Who Make the Cadillac

The group of men who have made the Cadillac what it is today, have worked in silence and almost in obscurity for seventeen years—deriving their greatest reward from the endorsement which their endeavors have won from the whole world.

Their greatness has been manifested by the fact that they have been content to remain hidden from the public eye and combine their ability for the common good of the Cadillac.

No one of them would dream of contending that the Cadillac is his creation—he would feel ashamed to filch from his fellows the fruits of seventeen years of closest and friendliest co-ordination.

They have had, all these years, a common aim, and a common standard, and all of them share and share alike in the pride and pleasure of making the Cadillac more worthy of the world's appreciation.

The Cadillac has grown and developed in goodness, as a man's character grows and develops with the years, when he dedicates his life to honor and integrity, and declines to swerve from that high standard.

When another group, equally gifted, have applied the same high principles over a long period of years; when those principles have fastened themselves like a life-long habit on the rank and file of a great organization—then, and not till then, can there be another car remotely comparable to the Cadillac.

They All Admit It

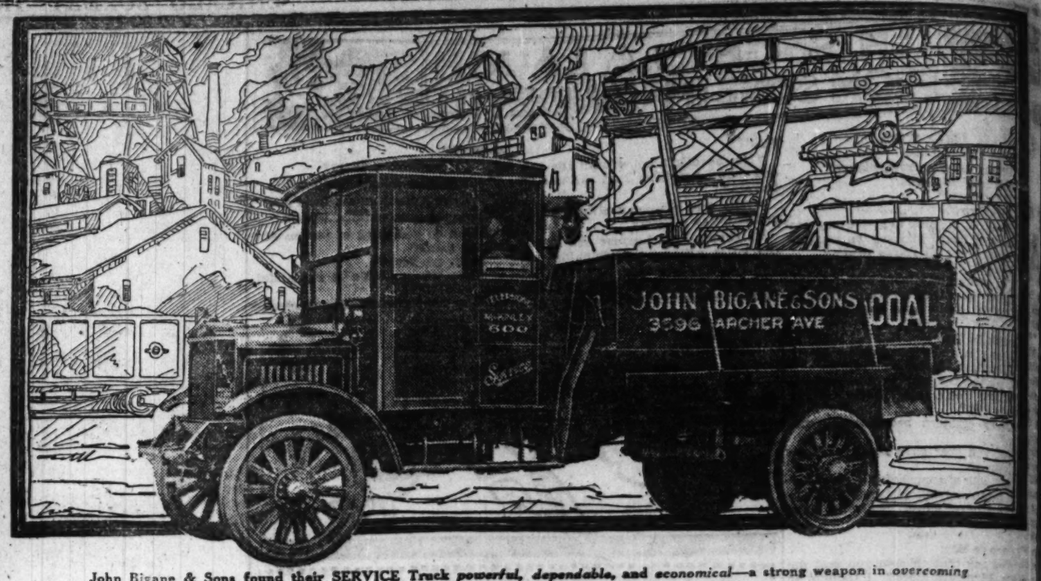
By Guy F. Lee

The Coliseum's packed and jammed;
They're even hanging from the ceiling;
Incessantly the air is slammed,
Reverberant the cries appealing.
The public's crowded from the show,
Outside the hall perforce it's dated:
The Candidates fill every row—
And every one is nominated!

"It's too much Johnson," Hiram boasts;
The Wood-be-presidents are certain;
The Lowdens' loud an' hefty hosts
Say it's all over but the curtain;
The Henry-alists shout "Jayhawk!"
The Hardings have the White House slated—
The Candidates perspire and squawk,
And every one is nominated.

From Walla Walla and Pine Bluff,
From Beaver Dam and Tallahassee,
The Boys are passing sure fire stuff:
Reams of statistics, neat and classy;
Each is the winner, each asserts;
They make no claim a bit inflated;
It's safe to bet your socks and shirts
That every one is nominated.

Go to it! Have your fun, say I,
For it's your night to howl, you bet you!
Next week you'll go away from Chi,
And Silence—lots of it—will let you.
So praise and bluster, brag and blow,
While with your own pet dreams elated—
Rave on! You're good. We're glad to know
That every one is nominated.



John Bigane & Sons found their SERVICE Truck powerful, dependable, and economical—a strong weapon in overcoming competition and in building business.

Service Trucks Suited to Needs of Chicago Users

Just as road conditions vary in different localities, so do load requirements offer individual problems.

Chicago truck users require a carrier designed to give maximum performance over Chicago's level streets—and to meet exact demands for carrying capacity as well.

The SERVICE Motor Truck Co. has been consistent in its efforts to increase transportation efficiency by eliminating guesswork from the proper selection of a truck.

SERVICE Motor Trucks are built in eighty different combinations of power, speed and capacity. To assist in the analysis of every haulage problem, as well as in the selection of a truck that will meet exact conditions, close co-operation is maintained between the SERVICE Transportation Engineering Department and the prospective purchaser. No order is accepted at the factory unless the truck chosen is exactly fitted to the work in question.

As a result, Chicago users secure a truck that answers both individual requirements and local road conditions—low ton-mile cost, dependable operation and long life are assured.

CHICAGO SERVICE—A SERVICE Truck must stay on the road—a truck in need of repair or adjustment brought to the Service Station before 10 p. m. will be ready for work by 8 a. m. next morning.

FARM AND GARDEN

How Tractor Can Cut Wide Swath in Grain Field

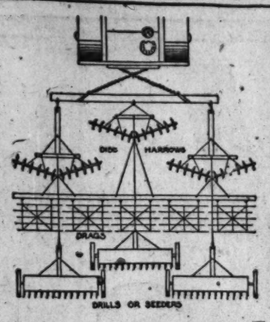
By Frank Ridgway

ALERT American farmers are using more labor saving devices than any other agriculturists in the world, and their response to the demand this spring to harness machinery to take the place of men has been remarkable.

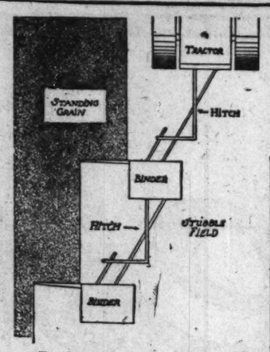
"It is truly astonishing to see what a few men are able to do on the farm today," said a retired farmer, who lives in a small town in central Illinois, after taking a drive a few days ago across the old neighborhood where he used to live. "My former neighbors have a surprise for me every time I go out to visit the old farm I used to own. It's common to see them with a whole string of plows, harrows, drags, and drills hitched to the back end of a tractor scooting across the land faster than a team can walk. When I was farming eight or ten years ago we had to have a man on each one of these implements."

A great deal of scheming is now being done by farmers in order to utilize all the power there is in a tractor and thereby save man power as well as their teams. Figuring out ways of hitching implements to the farm tractor has been one of their principal jobs. The tractor has developed more rapidly than has the field equipment. Most of the farm implements, with the exception of the gang plow, are designed primarily for use with horses, and the farmer's problem is to equip the drags, harrows, discs, and drills with special devices so they may be drawn by the tractor.

It sometimes takes a good deal of patience to get the right adjustment of the implements and their correct hitching to a tractor. Not all plows for tractors are yet standardized as to size, and the great variety of each makes possible a large number of adjustments and combinations.



Here's the way a Canadian farmer hitches eleven implements to his tractor—pulverizing soil and seeding in one operation.



Tandem hitch for two grain binders now used in Illinois.

[Illustrations from Farm Mechanics Magazine.]

With the special hitching devices the tractor is being called upon to plow, prepare the seed bed, and drill the seeding, all in one operation. The job of discing, harrowing, and drilling is easy for the tractor, and it is possible to hitch up several discs or harrows so that the work may be completed in much less time.

The hitch probably most used for utilizing the surplus power of the tractor is the one required in adding a harrow to the plowing outfit. The hitch is used in connection wtih a two bottom plow. It is made of 2x4 hardwood and is attached to the plow beams by means of U-bolts. It is set to extend over the furrow just turned. Holes are bored at the outer end of this supplementary drawbar to permit adjustment of the trailing harrow. A cable from the front end of the beam to the right end of the tractor drawbar greatly strengthens the assembly. By this method the moist earth is pulverized as soon as it is turned and it is done under the same operation expense as when plowing only. The disc harrow is attached the same way, except that the chain for attaching the harrow is replaced by a tongue.

Another hitch commonly used by grain farmers, particularly in Canada, is here illustrated showing how the seed bed is prepared with discs and harrows and the seeding is done all in one operation. The three disc harrows come first, then five drag harrows, and these are followed by three eight foot grain drills, a total of eleven implements being drawn by one tractor.

There is another arrangement where two special side arms are used to pull a disc harrow on each side. Then a third harrow is attached to the draw bar of the tractor and is followed by a set of peg harrows. In this manner the ground is prepared for the seed in one operation. Turning in the field is easily done with this type of hitch and tests have shown it to be practical.

Special hitching devices are also employed in pulling harvesting machines. A special hitch is used, for instance, where it is possible to employ two binders in cutting wheat. Such a rig can readily harvest thirty acres of wheat in a day if worked just right. The side draft on a binder is great, the machinery is cumbersome, and unless the tandem tracks perfectly there is a great loss in time and efficiency.

The use of two binders drawn in tandem fashion by one tractor is practical and is being used in Illinois. John McQueen, near Kirkland, has used the tandem hitch. Last summer Mr. McQueen cut and shocked eighty acres of rye in a single day by using two tractors and four binders. It is necessary to have a man on the tractor and one on each binder.

The hitch is made of steel and is strong enough for the heaviest load. It is simple in design and entirely automatic in action. When set for a swath of the desired width it holds to it, making the binder track perfectly. With this device the sharpest turns can be made. A hitch of the same design, with slight modification so it may be fastened to the back of the first binder, pulls the second binder. The latter will track as accurately as the first, as it is pulled in exactly the same way.

The "tight-squeeze"—an hourly occurrence on every crossing and on every crowded street, with cars of fifty different makes—more or less under the driver's control

How Can the Motorist Save Himself from the "Other Fellow"

NEW YORK CITY recorded over three thousand motor car collisions last year in Manhattan Island alone.

Effective traffic regulation depends on each individual driver having his car under positive control.

If every driver could be as sure of his car as the Packard owner, there would be less congestion, and only the careless driver would get into "accidents."

THE Packard people believe that first-class transportation must deliver Safety, Ability, Comfort, Economy, and Enduring Value to the highest degree.

Choose from the best sources of the commercial parts' makers—and your assembled car still will not show these features to the Packard degree.

You will get them only by starting with unified engineering in the Packard manner.

Controlling parts by specifications and tests—through casting, forging, machining, heat-treating, finishing and inspection.

Paying 12 cents a pound for your steel, instead of taking a chance with steel at 6 cents.

You will be led straight to the Twin-Six Engine, with its sure and flexible power, and a greater range of ability in high gear than any other engine in the world.

To gears heat-treated through and through—not merely case-hardened.

To clutch, brakes, universal and bearings that give you the safety of positive control—Packard designed for the Packard car.

IT makes little difference whether the other fellow is to blame, or merely subject to the whims and weaknesses of his car.

The Packard owner has all the chances of the road discounted, because he is sure of what his Packard will do.

He is riding in first-class safety and first-class comfort. It costs him less all around than riding second class!

New

Mitchell

Save $500 or More

Today's greatest "buy" is the New Mitchell

THE price sensation is the New Mitchell at only $1750! This means extreme underpricing. It means a fine car—a nation-wide favorite—at a big saving.

No man can afford to remain unacquainted with the phenomenal car at a lower price.

Proof is easy. We ask you to judge. Merely examine this New Mitchell. Then see others of like price—and up $1000 more—you will be astounded. You will realize that the New Mitchell is the greatest bargain. And that it brings a car you can keep.

There is no car to equal it at the price. No car so fine mechanically. No car bringing tomorrow's style. No car with such comforts. No car so economical. No car so built to stay new.

And we can prove it all, quickly, easily. You will recognize the over-values after a ten minute examination.

We challenge comparisons. We urge you to make them. Scrutinize every car at $1750 and up. Make the minutest comparisons. Then note the vast saving only the New Mitchell brings.

You can't match Mitchell values, however complete your search. For the New Mitchell stands alone and supreme, not only from a price standpoint, but from everything you want in a fine automobile. And furthermore it brings tomorrow's style—new lines that make old lines out of date.

Pure reason must guide you in making a decision. We lay every fact before you and want you to realize fully that you cannot find such a car as this New Mitchell at such a saving.

Come in today, don't wait. You will be informed, but not urged to buy. We know that if you make comparisons you will want a New Mitchell above all others.

The Reason for this Low Price

THE New Mitchell is built complete at its own factory in Racine under a single management. This is a many-year development. Mitchell is not dependent upon outside parts makers. So Mitchell does not have to include their profits nor freight.

Mitchell builds its own bodies, for instance. That means a vast saving. It goes into the car. Mitchell makes its own tops. And all the things that are so frequently bought outside.

If this car was not built complete in one factory the price would have to be higher. Profits to parts makers would have to be included.

It has been said that the Mitchell organization has the completest, most efficient factory in the industry. And men who have studied the Mitchell plant realize the exact reasons why such a fine car can be offered at such a low price.

Mitchell officials invite you to the factory to see for yourself. Visitors are welcome. It is a revelation to most people. A trip through the factory shows how Mitchell saves money for you, yet obtains truly remarkable results.

The easiest way for you to save $500 to $1,000 is to investigate this New Mitchell now and come to know its superiorities.

RALLY FOLLOWS BEAR CORN RAID; CLOSE IS EASY

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

Bearish sentiment predominated in corn and oats early. With strong commission houses on the selling side, prices dropped 2¾c on corn and ⅞c on oats. Failure to get outside assistance, however, resulted in a covering movement that carried prices up sharply. Week-end evening up made an easy close, however, with corn ⅝@1¼c lower and oats unchanged to ⅛c lower. Rye was weak and 2⅝@3½c lower and barley 2c higher.

As compared with the previous week, corn closed 6⅝@6¾c higher; oats, 2¾@5⅝c; rye, 1⅛c higher to 6¼c lower, and barley 2c higher.

The disposition to oversell on the part of the local element is one of the mainstays of the corn market. The technical position was regarded as weaker due to the heavy and persistent profit-taking the last few days, but with little or no prospect of an increase in the movement except temporary, many of the local professionals prefer to operate on the buying side on the breaks.

Cash Wheat Shows Weakness.

Weakness in cash wheat and an easing in prices in the sample market had some effect on the market at times. Country offerings were not large and consignments were moderate

Warmer weather is needed for the best growth of the corn crop, and the forecast indicated higher temperatures this next week, with some rain. Planting generally is completed except in a few sections where the soil has been too wet.

July Oats Act Tight.

Oats continue to show independent strength and while sharply lower with corn early, on scattered selling the undertone was firm. The big premiums prevailing in the sample market, with extremely limited receipts, have a great deal to do with keeping sentiment bullish. Warehouse receipts for 156,000 bu were canceled for shipment. No. 3 white on track at New York sold at $1.33, equal to $1.25 f. o. b. Chicago.

While rye was lower on scattered selling, there was considerable exchanging of futures against cash sales, presumably a reflection of old export business. Germany was reported to have canceled 1,000,000 bu. No. 2 on track 10@12c over July, but no sales. Bids of 29c over July, track Baltimore, were made for 5 day shipment and 28c over for 20 days.

Barley was dull and unchanged.

Lard Leads Decline.

Provision prices declined and closed with lard 15@17½c, ribs 7½@10c, and pork 2½@10c lower.

WORLD'S-GRAIN MARKET-NEWS

It is the gossip of the corn trade that the buying by a leading private wire house, which sent July from $1.72⅜ to $1.74⅜, was for a large cotton trader who was short. It is said the eastern shorts are well in on their lines. It was noticeable that commission house selling by half a dozen of the big wire concerns was of good volume on all the bulges and that corn disappeared on the breaks. Local sentiment is mostly bearish, but they have not been able to get anywhere the last week, as quick rallies have followed all breaks. A renewal of buying of bids was on at the close yesterday and has been for a week past without profitable results.

Heavy buying of oats by houses with large eastern connections took the July and September, the greater part being supplied by commission houses credited with trading for a large cash house. Half a dozen of the big commission houses had large orders when buying was heaviest.

There was selling on a report from New York that Argentine oats are due there Monday. They were sold at around $1.16, or 16@19c under domestic. It is a peculiar condition in oats, Canadian grain being about on an import basis from the United States while Argentine oats are coming into this country.

Loadings of wheat at Argentine ports have been ordered suspended until the new export tax has been finally disposed of by the various government bodies. The deputies have modified the bill so that the government may reduce the tax to $16.00 per ton on 25 per cent of the permissible exports of 1,000,000 tons.

COTTON MARKETS

NEW YORK, June 5.—Aside from heavy rains in a good part of the cotton territory there was nothing bullish in the news. Higher prices were made early on shorts covering, which called out selling for profits and week end evening up. The close was irregular, with prices slightly lower. News from the dry goods trade showed a further slowing down and export inquiry was light. Prices follow:

NEW ORLEANS, La., June 5.—COTTON—In the early trading today the demand was strong enough to bring about an advance of about $1.00 a bale, but as the session grew older week-end liquidation from the long side, mixed with considerable fresh selling for short accounts, exerted sufficient pressure to bring about net declines. Net results at the close ranged from an advance of 13 points to a decline of 4 points. Close: July, 38.80c; October, 35.95c; December, 34.96c; January, 33.72c. Spot quiet; middling, 41c.

GRAIN RECEIPTS LIGHTER

A few of the eastern railroads have complied with the order to give western connections a specified number of box cars per day, but they are not able to supply all and there is a general shortage in the leading states

Corn receipts last week, although 105,000 bu in excess of the previous week, were the lightest at this time in recent years, while oats decreased 450,000 bu for the week and were far below deliveries of the last few years. The total receipts of grain at Chicago decreased 507,000 bu for the week and were 1,888,000 bushels short of the average.

Business of the eastern railroads improved slightly last week and the total tonnage was 15 per cent larger than last year. Coal cars are more plentiful and are being sent east in large volume.

WHICH? Safety or Income

Security of principal should be your FIRST consideration in selecting an investment—Income SECOND.

Don't buy securities which promise you more than a fair return. If you do, you sacrifice security for income. Be suspicious of stocks or bonds that promise you too much.

First Mortgage Serial Real Estate Gold Bonds yield the maximum income together with absolute safety of principal and interest. Banks and Insurance Companies find it so, Trust Companies, Trustees, Administrators of Estates and individuals find it so, and so do State Legislators.

In many states, First Mortgage Bonds are among the few scrutinized and selected securities which trustees, attorneys and others responsible for the investment of trust funds are allowed to purchase.

First Mortgage Gold Bonds which we offer are sound, non-fluctuating in market values, and yield 6 to 6½% per annum. Besides being an absolute closed first mortgage on desirable improved income producing business and apartment property, conservatively valued at about twice the amount of the bond issue, they are surrounded by every known safeguard to protect our clients' interests.

Call, write or phone for our current list of these safe and stable investments obtainable in $100, $500 and $1000 denominations; maturities, one to ten years. These bonds also may be purchased on monthly or weekly payments under our Systematic Investment Plan.

Forty Years' Investment Experience Safeguards Our Clients' Interests

When Safety Is the Big Idea

When making INVESTMENTS—whether for $100 or $100,000—three things are essential—

1. SECURITY. What is there behind the investment to secure prompt payment of interest as it falls due, and the principal, when it matures?
2. INTEREST. To secure the greatest interest yield consistent with absolute safety of the principal—not prospective dividends, but positive interest payments when due.
3. THE HOUSE WITH WHICH YOU DO BUSINESS. Has it been established long enough to gain a reputation for conservatism, integrity, competency, fair dealing?

THE SECURITY behind our Gold Bonds is invariably a First Mortgage on Improved Chicago Real Estate—CHICAGO, the Wonder City of the World, whose real estate values are enhancing almost daily.

THE INTEREST—6%—is as great as careful investors can hope to get, with the high grade improved real estate security of this caliber—securities which yielded as low as 4½% a few years ago.

THE HOUSE—H. O. Stone & Co., established in 1887, has stood on the granite rock of conservatism for a third of a century. That very conservatism in making loans is your guaranty of safety in investing in our Real Estate Bonds.

HIDE MARKET WEAK

Weakness prevails in the hide market and it looks as though the decline in hides and skins is not checked, says the Bowles & Rodgers company in its weekly review. Reports from the east are to the effect that many shoe manufacturers and tanners are closing down and will remain closed for the month of June. This is due to the railroads' inability to deliver and receive freight, to labor unrest, and to other causes. Stocks of hides at the packing centers are heavy and there has been no particular trading for practically the last two months. Calfskins are absolutely unsalable. Horsehides are weak and we should buy the best at $6 to $7. Wool and sheepskins are demoralized. Fully cured hides are 14@15c, green 12@13c, calf 16½@18c, hog and colt skins are 50c. Wool pelts, $1 to $1.75.

Now Is the Time to Buy Securities

UNPARALLELED opportunities are now offered to the shrewd and far-sighted investor. Never in recent times have the capital issues of the leading, sound, successful and time-proven Industrial Enterprises of the United States been offered to yield such large returns. The present conditions, it is agreed, will not continue. High prices of commodities have brought about high interest rates with the resulting inducements to capital.

Exceptionally well secured obligations and capital issues of the best known and stablest of our large enterprises if procured now will give the purchaser the continued advantage of these higher than normal yields when times again become normal.

The decline in commodity prices already started means the decline in the demand for money, the price and value of which, like everything else, is governed by the law of supply and demand.

Buy securities now when the peak of yield has been reached and enjoy the maximum return on your money in the years to come.

Today's Unusual Opportunities for Safe and Profitable Investment

Preferred Stock Issues—this class of investment securities has gained widespread popular favor. This is because in the main these stocks, while yielding extremely liberal dividends, are well secured as to assets, giving the holders many preferences, and represent the preferred capital of representative concerns. Purchasae of such shares now offers a rare chance to those who have earned and saved money to invest their funds so as to enjoy safety of principal, coupled with a high dividend yield, in the years to come.

We call your attention to the following representative issues as being exempt from the normal Federal income tax. These issues are but a few of the many fully described in our special booklet now in preparation, "Today's Unusual Opportunities for Safe and Profitable Investment." Send for your copy.

RESERVE BANKS FAIL TO STEM CREDIT DEMAND

That the demand for credit continues unabated and that there is no prospect of a real easement of credit conditions is evidenced in the weekly statements of the New York and Chicago federal reserve banks. Both institutions show large increases in loans despite the fact that a week ago they advanced the rediscount rate for commercial paper to 7 per cent for the purpose of forcing a deflation of credit.

Whatever the immediate causes of the greater borrowings, the fact was presented clearly enough that the advanced rediscount rates operated not at all to check loan expansion. It would seem that bank customers in mercantile fields are willing to meet increased loan costs and the consequent deduction is that business profits continue to be satisfactory despite the tendency of the public to refrain from unnecessary purchases.

Borrowings Up $43,742,000.

The New York federal reserve statement showed that member banks had increased their borrowings on commercial paper by $39,449,000 and on government paper by $2,123,000. Other federal reserve banks decreased their borrowings on government paper by $10,455,000, but increased their loans on commercial paper $4,274,000. Thus, total loans on war paper declined $6,326,000, while total borrowings on commercial bills increased $43,742,000. Totals bills on hand showed an increase of $35,032,000.

This record of rediscounts at the federal reserve banks afforded cause for some wonder how call money in Wall street could have been kept relatively easy during the week around 6 per cent, with a single day's upturn to 10 per cent.

Gold Reserve Recedes.

The bank lost heavily to the interior through the gold settlement fund, which declined $22,526,000. This was the chief influence in causing the gold reserve to recede $25,600,000 and the total reserve to fall off $26,150,000. Note circulation increased $6,980,000, while net deposits declined $3,959,000. Member banks' reserve deposits contracted $7,305,000 despite the increase in their borrowings.

The ratio of reserves to deposit and note liabilities combined fell to 40.1 from 41.5 per cent in the preceding week, and the ratio of reserves to net deposits, after deducting 40 per cent gold reserve against note circulation, fell to 42.3 from 43.9 per cent.

Big Credit Demand Here.

The statement of the Chicago federal reserve bank emphasized the demand for credit. Borrowings of the member banks increased $10,393,321, this being represented wholly in loans secured by commercial bills, which expanded $10,996,051, whereas loans on government paper declined $602,730.

Chiefly as a result of this loan expansion the reserve position has been less favorable. The ratio of reserves to net deposit and note liabilities combined fell 39.69 from 39.94 per cent in the preceding week, and the ratio of reserves to note circulation after setting aside 40 per cent against net deposit liabilities fell to 41.8 from 42.13 per cent in the preceding week.

Total gold reserves increased $2,083,363. Total gross deposits increased $4,664,967. The treasury balance increased $2,644,-221. Circulation increased $4,664,967. The increased borrowing of the member banks is reflected in an increase of $3,-980,137 in their reserve accounts at the reserve bank. The reserve bank's borrowings from sister institutions showed a slight increase.

DOUBLE DECKED BOULEVARD GETS TWO BIG BOOSTS

City and Plan Commission Both Working Hard.

"South Water street can be made into the second finest thoroughfare in Chicago, equaled by none except Michigan avenue.

"It will reduce the high cost of living by saving the people of Chicago $5,138,400 annually—$2,620,800 on waste of foodstuffs, $1,624,800 on cost of handling foodstuffs, $563,000 saving to commercial interests, $160,000 saving in time by reduced street traffic delays, and $169,800 annual revenue to the city."—Charles H. Wacker, chairman of the Chicago Plan commission.

BY AL CHASE.

Chicago's next big public improvement—which many experts consider as important to the city as the Michigan avenue link—converting the present narrow, congested dirty, unsanitary, dangerous and ugly South Water street into a broad, clean, utilitarian and beautiful double decked boulevard and traffice thoroughfare, has recently received two tremendous boosts. One was the opening of the Michigan avenue bridge and the other was the more recent announcement that at last the South Water street commission merchants have signed an agreement and put up the cash to finance a magnificent new produce mart outside of the loop.

These two events mean that Michael J. Faherty, of the Board of Local Improvements, already busy most of his daylight hours on the South Water street and Ogden avenue projects, is going to roll his sleeves up a little higher and sail in with even a little more pep—now that things are ready for clear sailing—barring the usual legal obstacles nearsighted property owners sometimes use to try and stop big public improvements.

First take a look at the accompanying picture of how the new water front boulevard may look when it's lined with big, modern buildings. This has never been printed in a newspaper, being a brand new view, showing how it is proposed to hook up with Michigan avenue and how it will look with the big Hibbard-Spencer-Bartlett building at the State street bridge torn down. The picture was made by Marshall Field & Co. from the original sketch by E. H. Bennett, consulting engineer of the Chicago Plan commission.

Mr. Faherty believes, and is backed in his belief by the mayor, that some provision should be made for a replica for old Fort Dearborn. It has been tentatively suggested that it be put on the river front, somewhere between the State street and Michigan avenue bridges, although nothing definite has been decided about it. The Chicago Historical society also is backing Mr. Faherty in his idea.

Will Relieve Traffic Tangle.

One of the principal benefits of the South Water street project pointed out by Walter D. Moody, managing director of the Chicago plan commission, will be the tremendous relief to both the motor congested loop streets and Michigan avenue. Now that the Michigan avenue bridge is open more traffic than was ever dreamed of is using it. But with a wide, sweeping boulevard at the south end of the Michigan avenue bridge feeding directly through State, Dearborn, Clark, and other streets into the loop, it is estimated that a big percentage of traffic will turn west and of course relieve Michigan avenue south of the river. This means less traffic on the cross streets from Michigan between Randolph and Van Buren. Northward traffic in the late afternoon is expected to make similar use of the new river drive.

Of course the removing of the commission houses also will mean a tremendous saving of their traffic from loop streets. "The South Water street plan will be an effective distributor of traffic in the city's heart," said Mr. Wacker, "and will reduce loop congestion 16 per cent by removing 15,714 vehicle trips per day.

Meanwhile both the Chicago plan commission and Mr. Faherty are rushing things along as fast as things can be rushed with two such forces back of them.

Fox Company to Have New Building in Film Row

Film row is going to have a new addition. The Fox Film corporation of New York has leased from Oct. 1 for fifteen years the one story building, 55x165, to be erected at 910-14 South Wabash avenue, by James F. Porter of Winnetka. The building will be fireproof and used as a film exchange, including storage, and for offices and business purposes. The estimated cost of the building is $60,000. The rent will be $8,250 yearly and in addition an amount equal to 10 per cent of the entire cost of construction. Work is to start at once.

Buy Three City Blocks for Start on Housing Project

Work will probably begin tomorrow on the big housing project backed by fifty-five concerns in the Central Manufacturing district, as a result of the closing of several deals by which the Home Building Real Estate Improvement company has taken title to one city block and signed contracts for three other blocks. The first two-flat buildings will be in Thirty-seventh street, just west of Ashland avenue.

Albert E. Lake, Assistant Secretary-Treasurer of the housing company, has taken title for it to the entire block bounded by Ashland, Paulina, Thirty-seventh street and Thirty-seventh place. It was purchased from the Wilshire estate for $21,000 through W. D. Kerfoot & Co. and J. H. Van Vlissinger & Co.

Contracts have been closed with the same estate for the block bounded by Thirty-ninth, Thirty-eighth Paulina and Hermitage, for $20,000, through the same brokers. In the two blocks bounded by Robey, Lincoln, Thirty-eighth and Thirty-ninth, contracts have been signed with Frederick Baumann for 58 lots at $25,000. Stanley Rich represented the grantor and J. H. Van Vlissingen & Co., the grantee, Mr. Lake.

At a meeting on Wednesday the following officers of the housing company were elected: President, Sigmund Silberman, of S. Silberman & Sons, wool dealers; vice-president, Gen. A. D. Knisekern; secretary, William J. Evans Jr., manager Sefton Mfg. Co.; treasurer, William N. Jarnagin, president of Central Manufacturing District bank.

Full details of this unique housing proposition were given in this department on May 23. The first group of buildings will number one hundred. At present thirty-four firms in the district have subscribed for stock in the $125,000 building company.

The property is 180x177 and is improved with a foundry, machine shop, and some other buildings. A $50,000 addition is planned. Title was taken to the property by Mr. Barbee, Rufus F. Robinson, and B. John Duell. The capital stock of the new corporation is $500,000.

The 1,200 feet of frontage on Western avenue will be sold for business purposes, the balance for residences.

MARSHALL SQUARE STATE BANK BUYS.

The one story stone building once occupied by the Lawndale State bank has been purchased by the Marshall Square State bank from Albert Wachowski, president of the latter institution, for an indicated $35,000. AUTOMAT CAFE INVADES WILSON AVENUE DISTRICT

It took the Philadelphia automat long time to reach Chicago from the City of Brotherly Love, but once here the Horn & Hardart Co. has lost no time in expanding. It expects to open the sixth local automatic food store at 233 West Madison street within a few weeks. Around $90,000 is being spent on the 80x170 restaurant, according to plans by Marx & Vigeant.

The seventh will be opened about the same time at 4820-22 Sheridan road just south of the Pantheon theater, where a tile and terra cotta one story automat is being built. It will be 50x150.

Two Wabash avenue sites are now being negotiated for and two more loop automats are also contemplated, making the total for Chicago two. This is not the limit, however, as several others are planned for later. The company has twenty-two in Philadelphia, where the company started business in the nineties, and eight in New York. It also expects to invade Detroit.

CHURCH BUYS CORNER.

The North Shore Christian church has purchased the 113x125 property at the northeast corner of Magnolia avenue and Argyle street from Harry Hawkins for an indicated $32,000.
